New Bonus Move Pushed; TVA Foe Wages Filibuster

Roosevelt Makes Plain Patman's Cash Plan Will Be Vetoed.

'Defalcation' Laid To Power Agency

U. S. Authority Abused in Valley, Senator Austin Charges.

By Robert C. Albright.

Although passed by overwhelming votes of House and Senate, the Patman bill to pay off the bonus in $2,201,934,710 of expanded currency, may never reach the President.

Certainty of a veto yesterday gave force to a movement in the Senate to reconsider the 55-to-33 vote by which it was passed, substituting a modified measure the President would sign.

This development followed forthright indication at the White House that the President would veto the Patman bill in less than ten days, and fire it back at Congress in a plain-spoken message.

New Filibuster Opens.

The Senate meantime ran headon into another filibuster—this one aimed at the Norris TVA amendments, increasing TVA capitalization from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000, and expanding its scope. Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), of Vermont, made sensational charges of alleged TVA "defalcations." He held out all yesterday afternoon against a motion to call up the Norris bill. Several Democratic and Republican Senators are expected to join him today.

Dammed up behind the motion are other important measures, all extremely controversial. A meeting of the Senate Democratic steering committee was called yesterday to consider their precedence. It was decided to consider bills in the following order: NRA extension, Wagner labor disputes legislation and the AAA amendments.

Austin, in his attack on TVA yesterday, charged "shocking" abuse of authority and violation of the law by the Tennessee Valley Authority. He claimed the TVA marked down its capital investment from $132,000,000 to $51,000,000 in order to provide a low "yardstick" for electric power charges, and then operated at a $62,910 net loss for the fiscal year 1934.

Poll Under Way.

A motion to reconsider the bonus vote was made yesterday by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, a friend of the Patman bill, but he said his motion was merely to slow up the veto process. He expects to withdraw it after a few days.

A strong group of Senate bonus advocates, however, are making a poll of Senate votes behind a plan to go through with the motion to reconsider the vote and substitute a compromise. Whether they execute the plan will depend on this informal poll.

The proposed compromise would make full cash payment of the bonus mandatory. The President, however, would be allowed to choose between the Patman plan, to pay off the bonus in non-interest-bearing notes; the Vinson plan, leaving payment up to the Treasury, and still a third plan, to pay the bonus out of the $4,880,000,000 works fund.

The proposal is said to have originated with Senator Thomas P. Gore

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, May 8.—Production workers of the Toledo Chevrolet plant today rejected the management's proposals for the reopening of the plant.

The vote was 1,251 for rejecting the proposals and 605 for accepting them.

Toledo, Ohio, May 8.—While balloting by employes of the Toledo Chevrolet plant on company proposals designed to end a strike drew to a close, ten officers and leaders of the Independent Workers Society were assaulted tonight with stones.

Fred Seiger, president of the independent group, and most of his companions, were not hurt, although brick and stones were hurled at their car. Meanwhile, the entire automobile industry awaited the result of the vote.

The workers stoned sought refuge at police headquarters. Four police officers brought the disturbance to an end, but no arrests were made. In a separate argument, two men were arrested for disturbing the peace and were released on bond.

The Independent Workers group has advocated acceptance of offers made by the company to end the local strike, which started April 23 and precipitated shutdowns and strikes in Chevrolet and Fisher body plants employing 30,000 in several cities.

McGrady in Charge.

The balloting, under the direction of Federal conciliators headed by Edward McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, was slow, and it was decided to keep the polls open several hours after the planned closing time, 5 p. m.

Company proposals on which the men voted today call for a general 5 per cent wage increase in the Toledo plant, wage readjustments up to 10 per cent, recognition of seniority rights, and an agreement to meet with employes' representatives for discussion of grievances.

Union Urges Rejection.

Prior to the balloting, Francis J. Dillon, American Federation of Labor organizer, urged members of the United Automobile Workers

Roper Flouts Peek Finding In Trade Row

Further widening cleavage within the Administration over foreign trade policies, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper yesterday made a sharp attack on contentions set forth over the last week-end by George N. Peek, foreign trade adviser to the President.

In effect Secretary Roper charged Peek with juggling figures taken from the Commerce Department's report on the balance of international payments in order to "support a particular conclusion." He also contended that the foreign trade adviser's report contained "erroneous implications."

Peek, in a report to the President published Monday, drew the inference from figures on the balance of international settlements last year that this country's creditor position was becoming unimportant; that actually the country last year had been a net debtor of $970,000,000 in the world balance sheet and that foreign countries had more than enough dollar exchange to buy American commodities but were using it instead to buy securities here.

Designs on Hull's Duties.

Out of this came the conclusion that the Hull trade program of seeking to increase American imports in order that the world might buy more of this country's products was on the wrong track. He urged a review of this country's policies toward trade.

Such contentions amounted to a sharp assault on the Hull program, which has been indorsed by the President. It was the last of several attacks Peek has made on the Hull program, which has led to belief in some quarters that the foreign trade adviser was trying to get control over trade policies away from the State Department, with his own agency setting up exchange and import controls.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull has ignored these attacks, except to reiterate that he was standing by his program. The President, however, in the case of a proposed cotton barter deal with Germany, sponsored by Peek, indicated clearly his support of the Hull program.

President's Approval Seen.

Secretary Roper for the first time yesterday formally took sides with Secretary Hull in the controversy. In a formal statement indorsing the Hull program and striking at the Peek contentions, Roper did not mention the foreign trade adviser's name, but he left no doubt whatever he was referring to the Peek report.

Undoubtedly the Roper statement had been approved by President Roosevelt, since it is inconceivable that a Cabinet officer should take to task an official bearing the title of adviser to the President without the latter's consent. Consequently, there was speculation yesterday as to how long the President intended to let Peek remain in his present post, combating openly what appears to be settled Administration policies.

Not only has it been found confusing to the representatives of foreign governments that the President's foreign trade adviser should take a position contrary to the course followed by the Secretary of State, but the cleavage within the Administration has started to assume proportions of a domestic political issue.

Vandenberg Quotes Peek.

This was demonstrated yesterday when Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, regarded as leading contender at this time for the Republican presidential nomination, assailed the reciprocal trade policy as "suicidal" and cited the Peek report of the last week-end to bolster his argument that "it is not true that the only way Europe can buy from us is to sell to us."

Senator Vandenberg made much of the fact that "the President's foreign trade policies pull in opposite directions and defy dependable stability." He cited the Hull policy and that urged by Peek and contended that "the United States can not go in both directions at once; one side or the other in the Presi-

Trolley Hits Fire Engine; Four Inured

Apparatus, Speeding to Blaze, Knocked 75 Feet and Upset.

Four men were strewn in the street, one of them dying, last night when a fire engine was struck by a street car and spun around like a straw in the wind at Eleventh and V streets northwest.

The engine, a combinatoin hose and pumper of No. 9 Hose Company, located at Seventeenth and U streets, was speeding east on V street, answering an alarm at Georgia avenue and W street.

The company never reached the fire. As the engine crossed Eleventh street, it was struck in the rear by a one-man trolley, operated by George H. Williams, of 1211 North Capitol street.

Private Reported Dying.

Most severely injured was Private R. L. Creel, 25, of 413 D street northeast, said to be dying in Garfield Hospital with both of his legs broken.

Private C. W. Smith, 31, who was standing on the back of the engine with Creel, was thrown 75 feet from the scene of the crash. He was picked up in a yard on V street and rushed to Emergency Hospital in a serious condition.

The other two men on the fire truck apparently escaped serious hurts. They were Sergt. George E. Sword, 38, of 414 Seward square, and Private P. W. Graves, the driver, who were on the front seat.

Family Summoned.

Creel was so severely hurt that his family was called to his bedside. Smith's injuries were diagnosed as internal hurts, several broken ribs and a possible fractured skull.

At first Graves, the driver, thought that he was unhurt, but later he went to the hospital when his knee began to swell and pain. Sergt. Sword suffered concussion of the brain, lacerations and back injuries.

When the accident was over, the fire apparatus was faced in a direction opposite to its eastward rush toward the fire, while the street car was brought to a stop about 50 feet below the intersection.

The fire truck came to rest on the southeast corner of the intersection. It had turned over, breaking a tree beneath it and was lying on its side.

Front of Car Smashed.

Police and fire officials declared that the street car hit the truck. The front end of the street car was badly smashed, but the motorman escaped injury, as did the handful of passengers.

The fire alarm was for a slight fire in a bus, housed in a garage near Georgia avenue and W street. Other apparatus responding to the alarm extinguished the blaze.

A crowd of about 3,000 persons from the thickly populated neighborhood gathered at the scene of the collision. The noise of the crash could be heard several blocks.

Federal Court Approves Revamped Holding Firm

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—Reorganization of the Western Power, Light & Telephone Co., a $200,000,000 holding concern with nine operating subsidiaries in Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska, under section 77(B) of the Federal bankruptcy law, was approved today by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

The plan would allow holders of $8,313,000 in first mortgage bonds 25 per cent of the first mortgage bonds of the new company, to be known as the Western Light & Telephone Co.

Miss Earhart Carves Sky Trail From Mexico City to Newark

Near-Record Crowd Jams Flying Field

Police Foced to Clear Path for Welcoming Husband Putnam.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., May 8—Amelia Earhart, tired, but happy, brought her red monoplane across the 2,100 miles between Mexico City and Newark Airport today, making the first nonstop flight from the Mexican capital to the greater New York area.

Her face and hands were dirty, but she grinned as she brought her ship to ground at 9:28.50 p. m. (Eastern standard time) 14 hours 22 minutes and 50 seconds after her perilous takeoff from a 3-mile runway.

She landed as one of the greatest crowds ever assembled at Newark Airport shouted and screamed their cheers and struggled against an inadequate force of 30 policemen, assigned to the field for the emergency.

Crowd Madly Enthusiastic.

So great was the crush, so mad was the enthusiasm of the men and women to catch a glimpse of the woman who has conquered two oceans by air and made numerous cross-country flights, that minutes passed before the police could get her safely to a National Guard hangar.

George Palmer Putnam, Miss Earhart's husband, said it was "the worst crowd I've ever seen."

He had difficulty reaching his wife. Policemen shouldered their way through the milling hundreds, trying to force a way for him, but it was a long time before he and his wife were able to touch hands.

"The trip was uneventful," Miss Earhart said when she finally got into the hangar.

No Rain Over Entire Trip.

"I expected headwinds only over the Gulf of Mexico. I flew at an average altitude of 10,000 feet. And I didn't get any rain over the whole journey.

"One thing I do want to say—the Department of Commerce and airway radio operators all along the line were cordial and helpful to me."

Her landing was timed by Lieut. Richard Aldworth, manager of the airport, at the request of the National Aeronautical Association.

A shout had gone up from the crowd as the first drumming of the motors of the red plane came to their ears. Attendants switched on the lights and the field was flooded with brilliant illumination. Down from the darkness of the skies came the red ship.

Crowds Press Forward.

The crowds pressed forward, yelling and cheering. Motorcycle policemen tried to halt the flood of humans, breaking toward the plane, but the throng broke through like water gushing through a broken jetty, and jammed around the ship.

The police finally managed to get Miss Earhart into a police car, but the progress of the car was slow. The crowds jammed around it, still yelling. Miss Earhart waved at the faces turned toward her.

Her own face was smudged with oil and grease. She wore flying togs, a man's shirt and a diagonally striped necktie.

A hundred feet from the hangar her husband reached her side. Then the police had a tougher time, for Miss Earhart had got out of the car. The escort literally had to drag them to the security of the hangar.

Eduardo Villa Senor, Mexican consul general at New York, got into the hangar and presented to Miss Earhart a large bouquet of flowers on behalf of Portes Gil, Mexican minister of foreign affairs. Miss Earhart carried a small parcel of mail in her ship.

A few seconds before 3.06 p. m. Miss Earhart swooped low over Washington airport, radioed her greetings to those on the ground, and set off for the final leg in her triumphal flight.

Justice Ruling Speeds Action On Social Bill

Senate Leaders Press for Report This Week; Factions Clash.

By the Associated Press.

Backed by a Justice Department assertion of its constitutionality, Senate Administration leaders pressed yesterday for quick committee approval of President Roosevelt's social security program.

Both the White House and Capitol received legal opinions measuring the security bill—with its old-age pension and unemployment insurance taxes—by standards set in the Supreme Court's invalidation of the railway retirement act. President Roosevelt held confidential for study the views given him by Attorney General Cummings.

But Angus D. MacLean, Assistant Solicitor General, told the Senate Finance Committee the rail decision would not upset the security program because the bill was framed on different constitutional ground than was the railroad law.

After the testimony, Chairman Harrison said the committee would begin consideration of the measure, section by section, today with the

Cuba's Public Enemy No. 1 Slain By Troops; Gun Girl Aid Seized

Ten Die, Many Wounded in Pitched Battle as Guiteras and Terrorist Gang Are Trapped in Abandoned Fortress Near Matanzas.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Matanzas, Cuba, May 8.—With a blonde gunwoman fighting by his side, Antonio Guiteras, half-American Cuban "public enemy No. 1," was slain today by the bullets of army and navy men who assaulted his gang hideout in abandoned Morillo Fortress.

The woman was captured after killing Corpl. Jose Masfernandez.

Naval authorities said ten died in the battle which raged about the crumbling ramparts, relic of the Spanish-American War, from which Guiteras had directed his "Cuban Youth" movement's terroristic activities.

Guiteras, 30, son of a Cuban college professor and a Philadelphia woman, had been minister of interior in the cabinet of President Ramon Grau San Martin. His activities were a strange combination of politics, American gangsterism and the familiar methods of Cuban terrorism.

Kidnap Money Found.

He was sought as the abductor of Eutimio Falla Bonet, wealthy Cuban who paid $300,000 ransom several weeks ago. A suitcase in the fortress reportedly held $150,000 of this money.

Federal forces attacked the gang headquarters with machine guns and rifles. Guiteras and his followers, including two women, elected to "shoot it out" in the United States gang tradition they had inroduced to the island.

Outnumbered ten to one, the Guiteristas countered effectively with revolvers and rifles against the rain of lead laid down by the assaulting forces, numbering 200.

The politico-gang leader's woman companion, described by an army

To the Radio Thriller, 'What Would You Do?'

The solution of the thirteenth thrilling "What Would You Do?" real life drama broadcast Wednesday at 5:30 p. m. from WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., follows:

"Oh, God, please show me the way!" she sobbed.

There was a knock on the door.

"Come in."

"Marion, what on earth is the matter?"

"Nothing, mother, nothing."

"Mother, I want you to pack your things. I'll pack mine. We're going to California—right away."

"Why, Marian, why so sudden?"

"I'm going to be married tomorrow—to the most wonderful man in the world."

"Yes, Tommy told me!"

"But mother, it isn't Tommy . . . it's Mr. Gerard."

Coroner's Jury Blames Pilot In Crash Fatal to Sen. Cutting

Flew Too Low Without Using Landing Lights, Is Verdict in Deaths of 5; Further Investigation Recommended.

By the Associated Press.

Macon, Mo., May 8.—Thorough investigation by the Department of Commerce of the T. W. A. air liner disaster which killed Senator Bronson Cutting and four others was recommended tonight by a coroner's jury.

The monoplane, Sky Chief, cracked up in a fog early Monday. Its gasoline was almost gone and its radio was giving trouble. These circumstances were held by the jury to warrant "a full and complete investigation of the probable technical causes."

The jury, which questioned 20 witnesses during a three-day inquiry, found that Senator Cutting, two women passengers and the two pilots died "by reason of the crash of airplane No. 323 of the T. W. A. company, said plane flying from Los Angeles to New York."

"We find that the pilot was flying said plane too close to the ground without turning on the landing lights with which said airplane was equipped," the verdict added.

Department of Commerce air line inspectors already have been on the scene of the wreck, a muddy farm pasture within 15 miles of an emergency landing field which the pilots sought after fog prevented a scheduled stop at Kansas City.

"We recommend that the officials of the Department of Commerce make a full and complete investigation of the probable technical causes of this airplane crash," the jury's report stated.

"Why didn't Bolton (Harvey Bolton the pilot and one of those killed) pull up when he saw he was so close to the ground?" asked Charles Fower, of Macon, a jury member with flying experience.

The witness, Lee Flanagan, chief dispatcher for the T. W. A. at Kansas City, expressed belief that pulling quickly upward would have put the

Noted Teacher Ends Troubles Of Love and Finance With Gun

By the Associated Press.

Irvington, N. Y., May 8.—Dr. Paul Kyle, 78—in financial difficulties and facing a charge of criminal libel—ended a distinguished educational career today by committing suicide.

Shot through the head, his body was found by a caretaker near one of the buildings of the boys' school he founded in 1890. A shotgun lay by his side.

The Kyle School—where the aged educator had taught Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Rear Admiral George Converse, Ogden L. Mills, Rear Admiral Theodore Jewett and many others—closed yesterday. Kyle had sent his few remaining pupils to another school.

He had been reported a suicide on April 4 by an unidentified man, with a German accent, who telephoned newspapers. A search for him ended when he appeared at the school, explaining he had been attending a theatrical performance in New York.

Kyle was to have appeared in court in New York, where he was under $500 bail, today to answer a libel complaint by Mrs. Catherine Harris, who charged he had written her 25 letters, some blackening her character and others begging her to marry him.

She broke down and sobbed when told of Kyle's suicide as she waited in the court for the case to be called. She said she was "genuinely sorry."

48 Navy Planes Mass in Hawaii For Formation Hop to Midways

By the Associated Press.

Confirming plans for a 1,300-mile mass flight by 48 naval patrol planes across the Pacific from Honolulu to the Midway Islands, the Navy's high command insisted here last night that the flight would not extend further to the West.

There were intimations that the unusual maneuver would be initiated at dawn today. Word from Honolulu told of great activity at the Pearl Harbor naval base that presaged an early take-off.

Reports here that some Japanese disquiet existed over the flight, which would follow the first leg of the proposed passenger air line between Hawaii and China, met with denials in all quarters.

An important part of the naval war games between the "White" and the "Blue" fleets is to be in the Midway region, which is two degrees east of the 180th meridian. No American fighting units will go across the meridian, officials said.

Japanese maneuvers, scheduled for the late summer, are expected to take place 2,200 miles to the south, well on the other side of the international date line.

Japanese newspapers recently severely criticized the Navy's issuance of a permit to Pan-American Airways to use Midway, Wake Island and Guam as refueling stations on its passenger line.

War Veteran Cleared In Death of His Wife

Greenville, Tex., May 8 (AP).—Sylvester P. Darden, 38-year-old father of three children and overseas war veteran, sobbed his gratitude today as a district court jury acquitted him on State charges of slaying his sleeping wife with a shotgun.

Darden contended his son, Jackie Glenn, 8, accidentally shot his mother while walking in his sleep.

New Court Test On Gold Clause Being Planned

Request Treasury Accept Note at Old Value to Be Initial Step.

By the Associated Press.

A new test of the Administration's gold clause abrogation, intended to compel Treasury acceptance at old gold value of Government securities offered in payment of taxes, was disclosed yesterday to be in preparation here.

The plans, drawn to conform with the Supreme Court's famous decision in the gold cases, were reported authoritatively to have the backing of a group prominent in financial circles, with the assistance of a well-known New York law firm.

Revelation of this move coincided with a Government request for dismissal of the Court of Claims suit filed by Robert A. Taft, of Cincinnati, demanding payment of a $1.06 interest coupon on a $50 gold Liberty bond. He challenged the Treasury's right to call Liberty bonds in advance of maturity without redeeming them in gold.

George C. Sweeney, Assistant Attorney General, filed the Government reply—a 30-word petition "denying each and every allegation" by Taft and asking that his actions "be dismissed."

To Present Note.

Those involved in the new attack on President Roosevelt's monetary policies planned to present to the Treasury June 15 a Treasury gold note for $1,000 maturing on that date.

They will demand that it be accepted in payment of $1,690 in income taxes also due June 15, contending that the old gold dollar is worth $1.69 in devalued bills. The expected Treasury refusal to accept the bond at this figure would be followed by a court suit.

The note specifies, as do all Government securities, that it "will be accepted at par during such times and under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed or approved by the Secretary of the Treasury in payment of income and profits taxes payable at the maturity of the note."

It also stipulates that "principal and interest are payable in United States gold coin of the present standard of value." The standard of value of gold coin prevailing when the note was issued in 1932 made 25 4-5 grains of gold the equivalent of $1. It has since been cut to 15 5-21 grains.

Hope to Show Loss.

Backers of the effort based their hopes of success upon the ruling of the Supreme Sourt that Congress had no power to declare the gold payment clause invalid when contained in Government bonds. In the case then at issue, it added that the holder of the bond could show no damages and therefore was not entitled to collect the present equivalent of the old gold value.

Those behind the new test intended to insist that when the Treasury note was bought in 1932 it was, by its own stipulation, receivable for an amount of taxes equal to 1,000 times 25 4-5 grains of gold. Now it is receivable for 1,000 times 15 5-21 grains.

Thereby, they hoped to convince the courts that they have shown actual loss as the result of an act of Congress for which the Supreme Court has declared there was no constitutional basis and consequently, are entitled to compensation representing the difference between the $1,000 face value of the note and the $1,000 dollar value of the gold it formerly represented.

Suit must be brought in the Court of Claims. The Administration has given much consideration to the possibility of legislation specifically closing that tribunal to such actions, but so far has made no recommendations to Congress.

Between You and Me

State Ambassadors Are Coming; Works Officials in Confusion; G. O. P. at Story-Telling Stage.

By Raymond Clapper

NEW Deal confusion, whatever it is doing to the rest of the country, is making Washington prosperous. It is bringing more people to the Capital every day.

Gov. Eugene Talmadge, who made Georgia red suspender-conscious, gives his impressions of Washington after a brief visit. Prosperity has returned to the Capital. The boom here, he thinks, surpasses the gala days in Miami when all America was trooping there.

"Whither are we drifting?" Talmadge asks. He answers: "To Washington. The hotels are overflowing. All cabs are busy. You can hardly get waited on in the dining rooms. Charges have doubled and a waiter frowns on you when you give him a 25-cent tip."

That, Governor, is known as boom-doggling.

Among the forthcoming new residents in Washington will be an "ambassador" from Massachusetts. Gov. Curley has just appointed John P. Brennan to that post, newly created by the Massachusetts Legislature. The idea is that if a State has a permanent agent here, he will be closer to the trough and can get in more quickly than if a delegation has to come all of the way from Boston. Arizona's Legislature recently voted to send an "ambassador" to Washington. But the idea brought forth so much newspaper ridicule that Gov. Moeur abandoned it. He may be encouraged to revive it now that Gov. Curley has taken the lead.

You can feel the idea growing. In a few years there will be a colony of State "ambassadors" as large as the Diplomatic Corps. They won't be nearly so handsome or as good diplomats, but they will get more. Why not? The foreigners don't vote.

This tendency is a reflection, no doubt, on the effectiveness of Representatives, and particularly Senators, who originally were regarded as in the nature of ambassadors from the several States. Also, a State Governor often is an aspirant for one of his State's senatorial seats. If the Governor's own ambassador or lobbyist at Washington can bring home the bacon more promptly than the Senator, you can see what a build-up that gives the Governor for his senatorial candidacy.

Don't think that a lot of Senators and Representatives like this idea of their States sending "ambassadors" to Washington. It means competition and trouble for them.

* * * *

But the development is inevitable just as is the steadily growing number of lobbyists and trade representatives at Washington. It is the irresistible gravitation toward the real seat of power. When an official in Washington has it within his discretion to expand or to cut off millions of dollars of relief money to the States, officials of those States are bound to want to snuggle close to the throne and to keep their lookout men on the scene.

This trend is accentuated by the confusion here, which has never been greater.

Two representatives of a distant State were here last week attempting to find out how they should proceed with applications for work relief projects. They went from one office to another but could learn nothing. Even within the Government departments the confusion is just as great. Officials of FERA and PWA have orders to clear everything through the works application and information office headed by Frank C. Walker, but in actual practice this is resulting in the shuttling of papers back and forth in an endless confusion circle. One office was directed to forward all inquiries to Walker's office. Pretty soon these inquiries began coming back from Walker's office. Mr. Walker's people wanted to inquire how they should answer the inquiry. Talk about made work. They surely are making it.

Political Parade: Republican National Treasurer George F. Getz, who once supported a Democrat, Alfred E. Smith, for President, denies rumors that he is going back to his former hero. He sees no chance of a coalition ticket on either side . . . Republican money-raising will get under way in earnest next fall. The summer will be devoted to arousing party interest and attacking the Administration. Hell-raising first, money-raising later . . . An old Hoover story has been revised and revived. The prospective bridegroom forgives everything until he learns his fiancee voted for Roosevelt. Republicans who didn't think it was funny in 1932 roar now . . . When they begin pulling the Hoover jokes on Roosevelt, that indicates something has really happened in the public mind. It tells more than the reports of a dozen political scouts . . . One reason the House Democrats want to extend NRA for two years, instead of one, is to push the next NRA fight over until after the 1936 election. The other reason is that Mr. Roosevelt wants it . . . Vice President Garner is swallowing hard these days. He doesn't like a good deal of the Administration legislative program, but he is swallowing it because he doesn't want to throw away another term as Vice President.

When the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee settled down to put the finishing touches on the utilities holding company bill, the only two outsiders admitted to the executive sessions were Ben Cohen and Tom Corcoran, the two brigh: young lawyers who did much of the heavy work on the securtites act. They were let in as draftsmen.

Charles Michelson, publicity representative for the Democratic national committee, was asked if he planned anything to off.et the forthcoming Midwestern meeting of the Republicans.

"Only this," he said. "I want to do everything possible to encourage the meeting."

Senators Cling To Right to End Holding Firms

Other Sections of Bill, However, Are Tempered by Committee.

By the Associated Press.

Although tempering the legislative grip it proposes putting on public utility holding companies, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday held fast to a section of the bill by which all but "necessary" holding companies would be abolished or divested of their control.

The vote, taken at an afternoon session of the committee, was 11 to 3 against eliminating the section of the bill which puts in the hands of the Power Commission the authority to wipe out holding companies.

The committee tempered the bill, however, by striking out the section requiring existing operating companies to obtain Federal certificates of convenience and necessity for extension of facilities, and by striking out the "common carrier" feature of the bill under terms of which the commission could require use of private lines as "common carriers" of current for competing companies in the same field.

The commission gave, in effect, a two-year lease on life to those holding companies against which it has aimed the ax.

While retaining a provision for ending holding companies, as such, on January 1, 1940, a new paragraph was added providing that when the order is issued by the Power Commission requiring the holding company to divest itself of operating control, it shall have one year in which to complete the operation.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, chairman of the committee and principal sponsor of the legislation, declared that ended the committee action on the disputed holding company section, but Senator Metcalf (Republican), of Connecticut, expressed the view that some revision of Section 11 (the holding company provision) might be made before the measure is reported out.

President for Haven For Historic Ships

President Roosevelt's fondness for the sea asserted itself anew yesterday when he gave White House sanction to plans for mooring America's most historic warships permanently at Washington.

Known as a sailor, deep-sea fisherman and collector of ship models, the President's views did not exactly surprise correspondents who questioned him at yesterday's press conference.

He told them that, as Assistant Secretary of the Navy 16 years ago, he conceived the idea of mooring the Constitution (Old Ironsides), Constellation and Olympia in the Potomac River alongside the Naval Hospital. Nothing came of it, but now that Representative Vinson and others have revived the proposal, the President is further convinced of the plan's practicability.

Lack of funds probably will defer the project for some time, however, the President declared. Also, he did not urge that they frigate Constitution be sent here from its base in Boston, the city of its birth, intimating that such action might antagonize Massachusetts citizens.

Committee Heads For Dinner Named

Chairmen of the committee for the banquet and dance to be given in honor of Gov. Harry W. Nice by the Republican State central committee for Montgomery County, Md., were announced last night by Wilton T. Allen, of Chevy Chase, general chairman.

Mr. Allen, who is secretary-treasurer of the central committee, will be aided by Mrs. John A. Holmes, of Montrose, as vice chairman. Sidney S. Oliver, of Woodside, is treasurer.

Chairmen of committees are Mrs. George E. Pariseau, of Edgemoor, reception; Mrs. E. E. Boyner, Silver Spring, reservations; Miss Rose K. Dawson, Rockville, seating arrangements; John W. Coffman, Takoma Park, program; DeWitt Zook, Takoma Park, dance, and Mr. Allen, dance.

The affair will be May 23 at Congressional Country Club.

Ad Men Urged To Act Against Buyers' Fears

Problem Not to Sell But to Make Consumption Possible, Pitkin Says.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 8.—Delivering this morning the closing address of the semi-annual meeting of the Association of National Advertisers in the auditorium of the Greenbrier, Walter B. Pitkin, author and dean of the school of journalism, Columbia University, expressed the opinion that the conquest of fear is the major problem today confronting American business.

"Two-thirds of consumers are not looking at advertising seriously because of world conditions, decline in income and psychological effect of five years of depression," said Mr. Pitkin. "People are still in a frame of mind of wanting to take no chances, which is a fear reaction. Anything new is a luxury. Consumers are in a marking-time attitude, waiting for something to turn up, looking to Uncle Sam to turn it up for them.

"This leads to consumer resistance, stultifying the effects of advertising except where it concerns necessary replacements and the cheapest form of pleasure—that is, motion pictures. One of the easiest things to sell today is cheap pleasure. You try hard to sell, and do too little toward making buying possible. You have left too much to the Government," he asserted.

Fahey Addresses Group.

In an earlier address John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, urged advertising men to capitalize on their new opportunity.

"The typical home owner is gradually waking up to the fact that he is riding in a palace and living in a shack. He is beginning to demand a more attractive dwelling. There is a closer connection than the business world realizes between our objectives in Washington in the field of home finance and the question with which you are grappling in the testing of advertising media. All four organizations under the Federal Home Loan Bank Board are of direct significance to every form of marketing activity which has for its sales objective the 22,000,000 American families who live in owned or rented homes. It is not too much to suggest that you pioneer the way through advertising in the development of better marketing standards for the home itself, the central core around which all other merchandising revolves."

Discussing independent retailers as opposed to the chain stores, J. P. Sieberling, vice president in charge of sales of the Sieberling Rubber Co., said the the problem resolved itself into whether some $17,000,000,000 annually shall be taken from the many and given to the few, or whether the course shall be in the opposite direction.

Hits Concentrated Business.

"I not only believe that there is an immediate business reason for stopping the trend to concentrate business in the hands of the few but also a very human reason.

"Chain-store spokesmen have referred to the system of distributing merchandise through the independent retailer as obsolete as the canal boat. Were the picture to become reality, it implies the shifting of $17,800,000,000, or over 71 per cent of the total annual retail business of the country, from its present individual proprietors to the chains. The shift would vacate 1,349,000 stores, or 88 per cent of the total, and demoralize rentals and realty values to the point where insurance companies, banks and the Government would own most of the business properties in the land.

Cites Liquidation Perils.

"The shift would liquidate the businesses of 1,544,000 proprietors, spending annually for operating expenses $4,589,000,000 aside from pay rolls and inventory purchases. It would swell the ranks of unemployed by 3,500,000 and decrease buying power represented in pay rolls by almost $2,000,000,000 annually. It would release approximately 1,500,000 salesmen from employment, whose estimated salaries and expenses amount to $4,500,000,000, with resulting distress to transportation agencies, hotels, automobile manufacturers, gasoline and oil consumption. All of this would produce a shock to the economic and social order of disastrous proportions.

"In 1934, $709,000,000 was spent in advertising, 68 per cent of the whole, or $489,000,000 being spent by national advertisers and independent retailers. With the independent retailer washed out of the picture, it is not difficult to imagine the havoc that would be wrought in the advertising fraternity from the drying up of $489,000,000 of advertising expenditures. No doubt to some of you the picture is as preposterous as it is dismal, but unless business men in general, and national advertisers in particular, wake up to the importance of the independent retailer and take some action toward protecting this value, the picture is not an impossibility."

Smithsonian Experts Make Report on Year's Adventures

Account of 20 Expeditions Sent to Distant Lands Out Today.

Adventure stories brought from the least known parts of the world are told today in the Smithsonian Institution's annual exploration report.

The reports are accounts of 20 expeditions sent out by the institution in the last year, and from which have come large numbers of biological, geological and anthropological specimens for the United States National Museum. Smithsonian representatives carried on their investigations in China, Siam, Mexico, South America, the Galapagos Islands and in the United States and its Territories as well.

Although they remained within the United States, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Institution, and L. B. Aldrich, of the astrophysical observatory, contribute one of the leading stories to this report anthology. They spent two and one-half months at Mount Wilson, Calif., making daily observations of the sun's activities. Their investigation, with those carried on simultaneously at Mount Montezuma, Calif., and at Mount St. Katherine in the Sinai Peninsula, have resulted, according to the report, in analyses of solar movements. And the analyses have led to correct predictions of sun variations.

An Adventurous Trip.

The Rev. David C. Graham has the most adventurous trip to report. He set out for the high mountain regions of the Szechwen Province of China, and to get there ran through borderlines of civil warfare, and reaching an altitude of 13,500 feet lived on wild vegetables and fowl. The expedition party brought back specimens of the rare golden-haired monkey, the giant panda, the blue sheep, the horsetailed deer and the Chinese red wolf.

Dr. Hugh M. Smith, Smithsonian associate and former fisheries adviser to the Siamese government, tells how he penetrated the Pasak River country, known as the land of the mysterious "Savages of the Yellow Leaf." Dr. Smith collected rare birds and several new species of fish.

Rare minerals in the Sierra Madre Mountains of Chihuahua, Mexico, were the objects of a search conducted by Dr. W. F. Feshag. Dr. C. Lewis Gazin hunted the bones of extinct animals in the Snake River Basin of Idaho, and obtained the skulls of 65 ancient horses.

As a result of their efforts, Dr. G. A. Cooper, assistant curator of paleontology, and an associate, Dr. A. S. Warthin, of Vassar College, constructed a picture of Ontario and Michigan country as it looked in the Devonian geological period.

Galapagos Expedition.

Dr. Waldo L. Schmitt, curator of marine invertebrates, represented the Institution on the Galapagos Island expedition of Capt. G. Allan Hancock, Austin H. Clark, curator of echinoderms, studied butterflies of Virginia. C. W. Bishop, assistant curator of the Freer Gallery of Art, tells of his archeological investigations in China, which led to the discovery of a habitation site dating from the late Stone Age.

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology, continued his excavations on Kodiak Island, Alaska. Archeological projects were conducted in the valley of the lower Columbia River by Herbert W. Krieger, curator of ethnology; in Florida by CWA workers, directed by Matthew W. Stirling, chief of the Bureau of American Ethnology; on the Shiloh Battlefield by Frank H. H. Roberts, jr.; and in California by William D. Strong and Winslow M. Walker, of the bureau staff. Dr. John R. Swanton reports considerable progress in tracing the route of De Soto through the Southeast, Dr. John P. Harrington continued his researches among the Indians of California and Dr. Truman Michelson studied the Passamaquoddy Indians of Maine.

Sewage Gas Turned Into Income Source

By the Associated Press.

Palo Alto, Calif., May 8.—Sewage gas is being turned by the city of Palo Alto into an income producer expected to return revenue and a savings of several hundred dollars a month.

Heretofore, it has been burned as waste matter.

The gas already is being used to heat the city's sewage disposal plant and to operate a converted gasoline engine which in turn generates electric power for one of the plant's pumps. Preparations also are being made to use the gas for floodlighting the municipal aviation field nearby.

Deadly Defense Weapons Include Combat Cars and Howitzers.

By the Associated Press.

With rapid-fire Navy guns, a new high-speed Army tank and more powerful explosives to the forefront, the Nation's military forces were reported yesterday to have evolved in secret a lengthening list of deadly defense devices.

Guarded jealously from public scrutiny, the new inventions reportedly were nearer perfection as the result of costly postwar experiments.

Officials were reticent even to name some of the weapons and scientific devices now being developed, but a survey listed some of these new assurances against foreign invasion.

The Army improvements and inventions are:

Still unphotographed 7 and 15 ton tanks with improved armor protection, greater gun power and a speed range of 70 miles an hour over highways and 40 miles over land.

A pack howitzer, which, though it weighs only 2,700 pounds and can be carried by six mules, is claimed by experts to shoot as far as the famous French 75 mm. gun of the World War.

Navy improvements include:

Five and 6-inch rapid-fire guns with greater ranges and armor-piercing power, more than 250 of which are being manufactured at the naval gun factory here.

Greater fuel efficiency for boosting the striking cruising radius; ammunition which throws projectiles further and makes torpedoes more deadly.

New chemical warfare defenses, diving bells for rescuing crews of sunken submarines, sound detectors for locating enemy submarines, surface vessels and aircraft; stronger and lighter armor, gyro control for range-finders.

In the air service, the following were reported:

Faster and more powerfully armed planes, larger machine guns firing more penetrating bullets, more destructive bombs, new anti-aircraft guns with director fire control, greater efficiency in power-dive bombing, development of gigantic flight formations,

New Job Applications Required by N. R. A.

By the Associated Press.

All employes of NRA were called upon yesterday to file new applications for their jobs, but Bradish J. Carroll, jr., administrative assistant, said none of their positions was endangered unless Congress, by cutting appropriations, makes personnel reduction necessary.

NRA expires on June 16. Carroll explained that to carry over the present staff of employes if and when the agency is extended, the same routine is necessary as when it was taken on originally.

Freighter Trapped on Cape Trying to Avoid Berg.

By the Associated Press.

Gabarus, Novia Scotia, May 8.—The British freighter Langleeridge, trying to avoid ice, grounded on the Cape Breton Coast near here shortly before noon today and was still held fast early tonight.

Belief was expressed that the 2,341-ton vessel was in no immediate danger and that the crew of 26 could reach land without great difficulty should it be necessary.

The Langleeridge is registered at Newcastle, England, and owned by the Medomsley Steam Shipping Co., Ltd., which operates a fleet of "Langlee" steamships.

New Dust Clouds End Brief Respite

Texas Panhandle, Kansas Towns Beset Again.

By the Associated Press.

Rain, snow and sleet last week gave portions of the drought-stricken area a respite.

But today an 18-mile-an-hour wind stirred up clouds which discolored the skies above the Texas Panhandle, where residents experienced only two dust-free days in April.

At Garden City, in the Kansas sector of the dust bowl, soil particles flew again after a five-day clear period. Visibility was cut to one block.

The five days formed the longest period Garden City air had been free of dust since early in March.

Autopsy Fails To Back Wife's Poison Charge

Further Investigation to Be Made of Death of Mrs. Nickum.

Death of Mrs. Henrietta Nickum, 52, of Hyattsville, Md., apparently was caused by a cerebral disturbance, Dr. Martin Keane, of Riverdale, Md., said yesterday after an autopsy at the District morgue failed to show signs of poison.

Dr. Keane, however, has submitted contents of Mrs. Nickum's stomach to District chemists. An analysis will require several days.

Harry C. Nickum, husband of the woman, meanwhile was released by Prince Georges County police in custody of his attorney, Walter C. Green. He had been taken into custody several hours after Mrs. Nickum had muttered on her deathbed at Providence Hospital that she had been poisoned.

The woman was found in a serious condition at her home yesterday afternoon. The Bladensburg rescue squad removed her to the hospital, where she died a few hours later. No poison was found in the home, police said.

"It is possible that Mrs. Nickum developed paranoia and with it a persecution complex, causing her to think someone was trying to kill her," Dr. Keane said. He issued a temporary certificate of natural death. Acting Coroner John K. Keane, brother of the physician, will hold an inquest as soon as the investigation by Police Sergt. Ralph Brown is completed.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Nickum is survived by Wilton Todd, son by a previous marriage, who said he last saw his mother yesterday morning. She was in good health then, he said.

Also surviving is a daughter, Mrs. Mabel Leid, of Baltimore; two sisters, Mrs. Hanna B. Brown, 1300 block Rhode Island avenue northeast, and Mrs. Cecelia Irving, of Baltimore, and a brother, Charles McCreary, of Baltimore.

Lonaconing, Md., May 8 (AP).—Mayor William O'Jones is to continue as head of the municipal government here. He defeated Abraham M. Park for the position by a 399-305 margin in Tuesday's election.

Henry Ralston was re-elected bailiff for his seventh term, defeating James W. Hutcheson and Alexander Quinn. John J. Picken, James Crosser and James G. Hadley were named councilmen, defeating George McCormick and Lindley P. Nichols, who sought re-election, and James W. Speir and William ... Lyden.

Somerset to Market Big Strawberry Crop

Princess Anne, Md., May 8 (AP).—Marketing of what has been described as one of the largest and best crops of strawberries produced in Somerset County in recent years will be started late this week.

Weather conditions this spring have been good for the fruit and the berries are ripening rapidly. Shipments are expected to be started from Marion Station, largest berry-shipping point in Maryland, Saturday, and from Princess Anne early next week. Good prices received by growers on the Eastern Shore of Virginia for early shipments have encouraged Maryland planters.

Auto Strikers Reject Truce, 10 Men Stoned

Federal Union to reject the proposals. In contrast, leaders of an independent workers' society, claiming several hundred members, urged the proposals to be accepted.

At the time the union workers went on strike, their leaders were asking a general wage increase of 5 cents on hour, wage adjustments, a minimum of 70 cents an hour, a five-day week, a signed contract, and abolishment of the so-called "speed-up" system. The number of Toledo workers who went on strike was never officially determinted, although the union claimed 90 per cent of the employes as its members.

Whether a favorable vote on the company's proposals would end the Toledo strike remained uncertain. Local union officials refused to comment, but union leaders in Cincinnati and Cleveland said they understood that even if the company's proposals were adopted, the Toledo strikers would remain on walkout until the company makes a satisfactory settlement with employes now on strike in several other cities.

Muncie Plant Reopened.

Dillon expressed a belief that if a settlement is reached in the Toledo plant, "the company will have to make concessions in other plants."

The General Motors Corporation, owner of the Chevrolet and Fisher Body companies, has made no effort to force a reopening of the Toledo factory since its shutdown, but yesterday reopened a plant in Muncie, Ind., for the manufacture of Chevrolet transmissions.

Chevrolet's principal source of transmissions had been cut off with the closing of the Toledo branch, and a shortage which followed led to the closing of several other General Motors factories, including the Fisher Body plant in Cleveland, which had been employing 9,000 workmen.

Subsequently the Cleveland Fisher Body union declared a strike, walkouts or shutdowns also were ordered in Chevrolet or Fisher Body plants in Cincinnati, Atlanta and several other cities, including Janesville, Wis., Baltimore, Kansas City and St. Louis.

Home on Farm In Fairfax Won By 11 Families

15 Cases Now Pending; 20 More Expected This Summer.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

One of the main problems facing the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in Fairfax County, Va., at this time is inadequate supervision of men employed on work relief projects, according to the report submitted by Miss Frances M. Smith to the county Board of supervisors. The report showed that at the end of April there were 20 more active cases on the roll than in March and states "the lack of proper supervision is tearing down the morale of our men."

A new project htrough which men will be given work on local highways under the supervision of the resident State engineer, however, is expected to aid materially in the supervision problem. Two new projects are scheduled to open, giving employment to at least 15 women.

Setting a record in local relief work, the report points to the fact that $1,136 was spent during the first week of April, the largest pay roll in the history of he Fairfax relief office. The county was given a total work allotment of $5,000 for the month, with an additional $50 for direct relief.

Miss Smith, in her report, also states the latest rehabilitation program is now going forward, with 11 families already accepted and 15 eases pending. At least 20 families are to be rehabilitated on farm this summer it is expected. As soon as a case is accepted, the person is immediately cut off from work relief.

Dr. F. W. Huddleson, treasurer of Fairfax County, Va., reports that 6,171 persons have paid their capitation tax for the past year which will entitle them to participate in the Democratic primary election on August 6, provided they have paid the copitation tax assessment for the two pervious years and have registered in their voting precincts. This figure includes those persons who have become 21 years old and have paid their capitation tax for the present year.

According to the county tax records 5,576 persons paid their capitation tax for 1933.

Three persons were badly injured Tuesday night in an automobile accident near Chantilly, Va. They were William Henry Staub and Mrs. Murray W. DeWard, both of Baltimore, Md., and Allen Schear, of Chantilly.

According to Sheriff E. P. Kirby of Fairfax County, who investigated the accident, Schear was attempting to make a left turn into a filling station when his car was struck in the side by the Staub machine. The injured were taken to the Georgetown Hospital by Deputy Sheriff Henry Magarity. There, it was said, the trio were suffering from broken legs, cuts, bruises and internal injuries. Both automobiles were demolished.

Mrs. James E. Nickell, of Fairfax, and Mrs. Fannie Lou Seamans, of Herndon, were elected delegates from the Business and Professional Women's League of Fairfax County, Va., to the State convention of the order at Virginia Beach this week.

The Fairfax delegates will accompany delegates from Arlington County and Alexandria on the boat trip to Virginia Beach.

The next meeting of the Fairfax County League will be held in the Madeira School at Greenway, Va., on May 28.

Ceremonies in Williamsburg To Depict 18th Century Life

Three-Day Program of Sports, Music and Drama Planned.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Williamsburg, Va., May 8.—Many of the faculty, students and townspeople of Williamsburg are uniting to make a presentation of eighteenth century costumes as they were seen by persons who attended court here while Williamsburg was capital of the Virginia colony. This is to be a three-day celebration of sports, music and drama—the social side of colonial life. Beginning next Saturday and continuing through Jamestown Day the following Monday, the program will end with a grand street ball in Duke of Gloucester street before the college.

Lieut. Gov. James H. Price will arrive Saturday in Williamsburg by coach, conducted by Dean Cox and Mayor Hall and accompanied by redcoat soldiers. The restored palace of the royal governors will be his official home for the period of the Virginia court season.

That afternoon the Lieutenant Governor will preside, from the palace balcony, over the revels which will be enjoyed by the residents and their guests from over the State. These will consist of footraces, bowls, selection of handsomest maid, fancy dancing by men, horse-shoe pitching and a fiddlers' contest—all of them sports which were common in colonial days. On the site of the first theater in America, beside the palace green, the women's physical training department will present a May Day celebration and the William and Mary Players will give scenes from the eighteenth century play "The Jealous Wife." That evening the president and masters of the college will hold reception in the great hall.

Chorus to Sing Hymns.

The Lieutenant Governor and his suite will occupy the pew originally set apart for the Royal Governors in the Bruton Parish Church Sunday. At 4 p. m. in the rear of the Wren Building a large chorus will sing the hymns which were used here in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Several of the oldest homes in Williamsburg are to be open Sunday night for reception of visitors who apply in advance.

After church services conducted by the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, on Monday, Jamestown Day, the pupils of the Matthew Whaley School will present, in the glen at Jamestown, a masque written by Miss Jeanette S. Kelly in celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the division of Virginia into counties.

Old Dances to Be Shown.

Returning to Williamsburg, the Lieutenant Governor, now probably in association with Gov. Peery, will hold reception in the old capitol. At the close of this reception the Governors will proceed in their coach to preside over the closing ball.

During the first part of the ball residents of Williamsburg and James City County will show the old dances that Thomas Jefferson and George Washington with Belinda and Martha danced before the republic was established. The last hour of the ball will be devoted to modern dancing.

New Parole Executive Puts Off 20 Petitions

Baltimore, May 8 (AP).—W. David Tilghman, new parole commissioner, stated he had postponed today's regular hearings on applications for paroles until May 22 "in fairness to all concerned."

"I've had only two days in office," he said, "and therefore have had little time to study the cases officially and prepare for proper decisions. If hearings were held today, every applicant who was turned down would feel that he was refused without proper consideration."

The new commissioner succeeded Gaylord Lee Clark on May 6. Twenty cases were set for hearing today.

Wages of Men Tied Up By Commissary Store

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 8.—Its background a strike now in effect at a Standard Lime and Stone Co. quarries here, Robert S. Thornburg, operator of a commissary store, yesterday obtained a circuit court injunction against the company and 142 workers, restraining the company from paying the workers until amounts due him for store bills have been deducted.

The question involves what is termed a "blanket assignment," understood to have been signed by each worker when applying for credit at the commissary.

Police Chief Refused New Trial in Killing

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 8.—Circuit Judge Birk S. Stathers has denied Frank Corbin, former Nutter Fort police chief, a new trial in the case in which he was sentenced at the March term of court to serve three years in the penitentiary for shooting to death William W. Wilson, of Quiet Dell.

Pointing out many errors in the criminal court trial, Judge Stathers refused to affirm the judgment of the lower court and advised Corbin's counsel to take the case to the State supreme court

Ex-Councilman Kills Himself

G. E. Garrett Ends Life With Bullet in Alexandria Home.

Firing a revolver bullet through his right temple, George E. Garrett, 65, former city councilman, committed suicide yesterday in the garage of his home in Alexandria.

Mr. Garrett, once engineer for Arlington County, was a prominent civil engineer and surveyor. Relatives and friends were unable to explain his act.

Arising early, Mr. Garrett donned his bathrobe and slippers and went to the garage. A few minutes later members of his family heard the sound of the revolver, and found him lying on the floor, the smoking weapon clutched in his right hand.

Alexandria Coroner Llewellyn Powell gave a suicide verdict. Mr. Garrett is survived by his wife, Mrs. Veda Garrett; a son, Aaron B. Garrett, and a daughter, Miss Edith Garrett. Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday.

Manassas Park Receives Span To Battlefield

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 8.—The conservation and development commission today announced that in response to a request for its assistance in the development of the Manassas Battlefield into a battlefield park it had arranged for the transfer of a State highway bridge to park authorities and was aiding in other matters.

The commission was informed that the Manassas Battlefield Memorial Park Association, in which State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax, is a leader, has control of about 140 acres in the area. Efforts are being made to obtain additional lands under the sub-marginal land plan.

Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the conservation and development commission, and Dr. J. H. Eckenrode, director of the commission's history and archeology division, have been in recent conferences with National Park authorities in Washington, and today said they are "intensely interested in the development of a national battlefield park at Manassas similar to those at Richmond, Fredericksburg and Petersburg."

Chairman Hall said the commission is interested, also, in the proposed celebration of either the first or the second Battle of Manassas, with a sham battle, as the feature of the opening of the park when "it shall have been acquired by the Government."

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell this decay coming out of our mouth and call it bad breath. We feel the poison of this decay all over our body. It makes us gloomy, grouchy and no good for anything.

What makes the food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much, our bile juice can't digest it. What is the bile juice? It is the most vital digestive juice in our body. Unless 2 pints of it are flowing from our liver into our bowels every day, our movements get hard and constipated and ¾ of our food decays in our 28 feet of bowels. This decay sends poison all over our body every six minutes.

When our friends smell our bad breath (but we don't) and we feel like a whipped tomcat, don't use a mouthwash or take a laxative. Get at the cause. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills which gently start the flow of your bile juice. But if "something better" is offered you, don't buy it, for it may be a calomel (mercury) pill, which loosens teeth, gripes and scalds the rectum in many people. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for—25¢. ©1934. C.M.Co.

Oculist— Optometrist— Optician—

Do You Sometimes Wonder What Are The Exact Duties of Each

Because these three terms are so generally confused—because we wish our customers to know just what services we can render them—we offer a brief explanation of their individual functions:

THE OCULIST, or Eye Physician, is one skilled in medical science, who treats and, if necessary, operates on cases of eye trouble. He also writes prescriptions for lenses.

THE OPTOMETRIST, or Refractionist, examines eyes and writes prescriptions, but does not treat cases of eye diseases. Such cases he refers to an Oculist.

THE OPTICIAN fills prescriptions, performing only the mechanical duties connected with the fitting of frames and grinding of lenses.

Our Optical Section is prepared to serve you in the capacities of Optometrist and Optician. Visit it in its convenient First Floor location.

Omnibus Bill Curb Proposed By Minnesotan

Christianson Would Confine Such Measures to One Subject.

A constitutional amendment making it impossible for Congress to lump half a dozen subjects into one omnibus bill will be proposed in the House in the next few days by Representative Theodore Christianson (Republican), former Governor of Minnesota.

"The Congress shall pass no law which embraces more than one subject," his amendment reads, "nor shall it pass any law the subject of which is not expressed in its title."

The purpose of his proposal, Christianson said, is to call attention to present procedure under which members of Congress are required to express in one vote what they may feel toward the two or three and even five or six measures one bill may contain.

"Almost every large bill now is really five or six bills rolled into one," he declared. "Then when it comes up a Representative is called on to vote 'yes' or 'no' when he may be for one measure and against the others, or the other way around."

Cites Security Bill.

Latest example of this situation, he remarked, is the social security bill which recently passed the House. In this case "a great many of us wanted to vote old-age pensions," Christianson said, "but we did not think it was the time to put a tax on pay rolls for unemployment insurance."

Besides old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, which Christianson emphatically declared are not one subject, the Administration bill also contains old-age annuities, "putting the Government in competition with insurance companies," and various provisions for grants to States.

This practice of forcing members "to swallow all or take nothing" has impressed him particularly, the Representative said, because of the fact that Minnesota has a constitutional provision limiting bills to one subject. Inasmuch as bills that trespass on this injunction run the risk of being declared unconstitutional, great care is taken in framing them, he said.

Would Focus Attention.

The Minnesotan entertains "no illusions" about his proposed amendment, he said, but he wants to use it to focus attention on a tendency he believes to be growing. Republicans were guilty of the same procedure in the past, he conceded, but not to the extent now practiced by the party in power.

The national industrial recovery act, which also set up the Public Works Administration, is another example of one bill containing more than one subject, he declared. The AAA was another. Christianson is studying these and other bills as the basis for a speech he plans to deliver when he proposes his resolution.

While his amendment is aimed solely at effecting a congressional reform, Christianson declared himself in favor of giving to the President the right to veto individual items in bills. If Congress limited each bill to one subject, he said, this problem would be largely solved. In cases of appropriations bills, however, he would permit the President to strike out items instead of being forced to approve or veto the whole measure.

Boy Held After Fight Requests Jury Trial

Faced with a jury trial for allegedly assaulting a high school cadet captain, Richard Huntt, 19, of the 200 block of S street northeast, was free under a $300 bond last night.

The youth, arraigned in Police Court, pleaded not guilty and requested trial by jury. He is accused of striking Cadet Capt. Richard Hilder, 18, of McKinley High School. Huntt, a former student at the school, allegedly harrassed Hilder at a drill period. During a scuffle which followed Hilder lost a tooth.

Don't try your husband's patience too far. Get a bottle from your druggist NOW. It probably will help you, because nearly a million American women know from personal experience that it helps them.

Six Sentenced As Court Ends Present Term

Prince Georges Circuit Bench Finishes Spring Session.

Six men received prison sentences yesterday as the Prince Georges County Circuit Court adjourned its spring session. Another prison sentence of one year was suspended.

Judge Joseph Mattingly sentenced Somerset Williams, Lancaster Quade and Alvin Joseph Williams to 3½ years each in the Maryland Penitentiary for the larceny of chickens from the home of Mrs. Mamie Lovelace, Clinton, Md.

Leslie Jackson, who pleaded guilty to the malicious destruction of fences surrounding the University of Maryland nurseries at College Park, was given four months in the House of Correction.

James Wade, colored, was sentenced to two years in the Maryland Penitentiary for robbery, assault with intent to rob, larceny and receiving stolen goods. Andrew Crawford, also colored, was sentenced to 18 months in the House of Corection for breaking into a grocery store at Upper Marlboro.

Thomas E. Wilson, of Upper Marlboro, was fined $75 for illegal possession of untaxed liquor. A general suspension of sentence was listed for Charles Steward and William Garner, who were convicted of manufacturing liquor illegally.

A sentence of one year in the penitentiary, imposed on Frank Beach, of Silver Hill, Md., for illegal possession of liquor, also was suspended. He was required, however, to pay a $250 fine.

Roper Refutes Peek's Findings On Trade Credit

dent's family should prevail; one side or the other should quit."

Secretary Roper framed his statement as a reply to "numerous inquiries regarding certain interpretations that have been placed upon some of the items contained in its (the Department of Commerce) preliminary report on the balance of international payments issued on April 6"—the basis for many of the figures used by Peek.

Roper Refutes Peek.

Roper asserted that "certain of the implications which nave been drawn from the report are not supported by the department's figures." As an example he contended that "the implication that foreigners are not making use of available dollar exchange to purchase American commodities is refuted by the fact that in 1934 American exports increased 27 per cent in value, whereas merchandise imports increased only 14 per cent." The figures indicated, he said, that "foreigners have, in fact, been purchasing our exports in increased volume."

"Another erroneous implication is to the effect that the net creditor position of the United States is becoming relatively unimportant," he continued. "On the contrary, the department's figures show that in 1934 the total interest and dividends received by Americans from their holding sof foreign securities and from direct investment abroad was nearly three times as great as the estimated amount of interest and dividends which foreigners derived from their investments in the United States.

"A proper appraisal of our international credit position, therefore, leads to the inference that the present foreign trade policy of the Government is sound and that every effort should be made for the further promotion of reciprocal trade treaties of the type now being negotiated by the State Department.

Hits Bilateral Treaties.

"Resort to the exclusive bilateral type of trade agreement would in effect be a denial of a trade policy which is in thorough accord with the present international creditor position of the United States."

Roper said that the "principal source of the misconstruction" placd on the department's report is the use of an item of $549,000,000 representing a number of unidentifiable transactions which "has been erroneously grouped with identifiable items to make up a total of $970,000,000 in order to support a particular contention." The report contained "no such figure as $970,000,000," he asserted.

He contended it was "unsound to assume that the residual items of $549,000,000 are made up to any great extent of security transactions" and that "no conclusion as to the purchase of American securities by foreigners can be drawn by the process of adding this residual item of $549,000,000 to the $421,000,000 which represents the identifiable transactions in securities."

Security Bill Valid, Senate Chiefs Told

hope of reporting it to the Senate by the week-end.

The Justice Department view, however, was challenged sharply in some quarters. Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, said he still felt sections of the security bill were flatly unconstitutional and strong factions within the committee, including other Democrats, were preparing to fight for important modifications.

Also, James A. Emery, general counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers, advised his organization that the rail decision "has significance far beyond its present application, for it operates against the taxing power no less than against the commerce power." The security bill would tax employers and pay rolls for building up pension and insurance funds.

Emery contended that when the court ruled out the railway pension law as an arbitrary seizure of property by legislative fiat, this reasoning would apply to the taxation as well as the commerce powers given Congress by the Constitution.

In official circles there were suggestions that President Roosevelt might seek to get a substitute railroad pension law through Congress if some means could be found to meet the Supreme Court's objections.

On Capitol Hill, however, it was regarded as more likely that the social security bill would be amended to include railroad employes within its general scope.

vealed that retail business in Washington last week was 41 per cent greater than in the preceding week and 9.6 per cent greater than in the corresponding week of last year.

Clearings Up 20 Per Cent.

Bank clearings here increased 20 per cent over the previous week and the same percentage over the corresponding week of 1934. Tourist trade also was greater than a year ago, the Department of Commerce reported.

The Department of Agriculture announced that farm income throughout the country had increased 12 per cent in the first quarter of this year over the similar period of 1934.

Boston, continued improvement in home building and repairs is making labor for construction of homes difficult to find; Cleveland, rentals being raised 10 per cent because of shortage of rental property; Denver, April building permits surpass those issued in any other month in three years; Detroit, $5,000,000 program of county highway construction announced.

Permits Quadrupled.

Indianapolis, value of building permits 400 per cent above same period last year; Kansas City, April building permits largest in several years and five times amount of April, 1934; Los Angeles, building approximately double that of same period last year and gaining steadily.

Buffalo, $823,000 county road and bridge improvement program announced; Rochester, building permits for remodeling projects since first of year 32 per cent ahead of 1934 period.

Baltimore, April building permits 34 per cent ahead of 1934.

Retail trade lagged somewhat as compared with the previous week, but continued above that of last year. Bank debits and clearings were again in excess of the same week in 1934.

Growing restiveness on the part of labor was manifest on the Pacific Coast and caused apprehension in business circles. Portland, Ore., reported 6,000 lumber workers on strike, in Los Angeles ten furniture plants were closed by labor troubles, and the tanker strike continued along the coast.

The Housing Administration said Monday's total of loan applications was almost $1,000,000 greater than any day last week.

Acting Administrator Stewart McDonald commented:

"The total applications for insured mortgages covering new construction and the total of modernization loans insured on these two days (Monday and Tuesday) alone amounted to more than $3,000,000. And these figures, it should be remembered, do not include the large amounts of cash being spent throughout the country for construction work, a big percentage of which unquestionably is due to the Housing Administration's work in promoting both modernization and new construction."

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics, announcing the increase in farm income, said that in all sections except the South Atlantic and South Central States, farm income in the first three months of this year was greater than for any similar period in the past four years.

Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia showed increases for the past quarter, though other States in the South Atlantic group reported declines.

The Dodge corporation's figures were for the 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains. It does not receive reports from west of the Rockies. The total of residential contracts for April, as reported by it, was $42,000,000, as compared with $22,635,000 for April, 1934.

Housing Gain Significant.

"Coming on top of the substantial gain in March and an increase of about 23 per cent for the initial quarter of 1935, as compared with the corresponding period of 1934, the April figures are even more encouraging," said L. Seth Schnitman, chief statistician of the corporation.

"The April total for housing facilities was about one-third of the total contract volume for all classes of construction. This also is a significant development, since in the recent past residential building has formed far smaller a proportion of the consumption volume than is customary for this branch of activity.

"The total volume of construction in the 37 Eastern States approximated $124,000,000 for April. This contrasts with $122,940,000 for April of last year. Of the April total this year a far greater amount was private construction than was true of either the March total or for April of last year. This, too, is an encouraging note. In fact, private construction contracts in April were higher than for any other month since the beginning of 1932."

The plane, groping its way through fog, tore across a road and overturned, scattering wreckage and human cargo over a pasture only 15 miles away from an emergency landing field at Kirksville.

Dafoe to Exhibit History of Babies

Quintuplets' Physician to Attend Convention.

By the United Press.

Chicago, May 8.—Dr. Alan Roy Dafoe, who brought the Dionne quintuplets into the world and has been overseer of their health since, will exhibit a life history of the babies at the Atlantic City annual session of the American Medical Association and Canadian Medical Association, it was announced tonight.

The meeting, the first in which two associations have held a joint session, is expected to attract 8,000 physicians from the United States and 2,000 from Canada. It will be held from June 10 to 14.

Dr. William A. Dafoe, of Toronto, brother of the Callander physician, will collaborate in the exhibit. Dr. Alan Dafoe has credited his brother with keeping the babies alive during their first crucial weeks.

By the United Press.

Callander, Ontario, May 8.—The parents of the Dionne quintuplets responded tonight to Welfare Minister David Croll's "adopt a baby" week plan by tendering a formal request that they be permitted to adopt their own babies.

The letter, signed by both parents—Oliva and Mrs. Dionne—asked Croll's permission to make application to adopt the famous baby girls, at present wards of the king.

officer as "a beautiful blonde," brought down Corpl. Fernandez, who threatened Guiteras. Another soldier and sailor fell.

Naval authorities said seven Guiteristas died, although casualty reports were conflicting. Newspapermen definitely accounted for three dead, including the corporal, a navy noncommissioned officer and an unidentified civilian.

Few Escape.

The Guiteristas sallied from the fort in the face of terrific fire when it became apparent that it might become a trap for all of them. A few reportedly escaped.

It was reported without confirmation that four soldiers had been killed and that severe fighting had occurred between factions of the attacking force and a squad of sailors, which attempted to aid Guiteras make a get-away. Guiteristas always had had a strong following in the navy. It was at a naval station luncheon that an attempt—attributed to the young Cuba party leader—was made upon the life of President Carlos Mendieta in 1934.

If there was any defection in navy forces, however, it appeared of a minor nature because naval forces co-operated to the fullest in tracking down fugitive Guiteristas.

A gunboat was dispatched at mid-day from Havana to Matanzas to reinforce the garrison to permit release of troops to search for Guiteras gangsters reported fleeing inland.

Naval forces on Tuesday had captured the small sailing vessel Amalia at Matanzas on which the gang reportedly had planned escape.

Dead, Wounded Listed.

Known dead were: Guiteras, Carlos Aponte, former aid of the Nicaraguan bandit Sanino and Venezuelian soldier; a navy non-commissioned officer and Corpl. Fenandez.

Wounded included: Antonio Perez, reported dying; Emilo Pilar, a Honduran, and Rafael and Crespo Tamayo.

Prisoners included:

Iomara Challorans, blonde Cuban, alleged by police to have been involved in the Falla kidnaping.

Eleven Guiteristas were held prisoners. Nine men were reported critically wounded.

Cordon Drawn.

A cordon of troops and sailors was flung in a wide radius around the fortress in an effort to apprehend other members of the gang.

The "beautiful blonde" may be held for court-martial and executed.

Guiteras, active in troubled Cuban politics the last three years, had been hunted by the government of President Carlos Mendieta for months. He was described as a dangerous revolutionist and credited with numerous crimes, chiefly of political nature, in an effort to embarrass the administration.

The outlaw's mother, nee Holmes, of Philadelphia, is a resident of Cuba. His father was the late Prof. Calixto Guiteras, who taught Spanish in Girard College, Philadelphia.

Bonus Leaders Press New Bill To Avert Veto

Patman Plan Certain to Be Refused, Roosevelt Tells Press.

(Democrat), of Oklahoma. Both sponsors of the Patman plan and advocates of the unsuccessful Vinson bill were approached.

Although no decision had been reached last night, it appeared likely the Patman bill would be held up in the Senate over today, and possibly over the week-end, pending a canvass of sentiment.

Long Spurns Compromise.

Senator Clark, who offered the Vinson bill in the Senate, was active in behalf of the compromise plan, but declined to forecast the probable outcome. Senator Thomas said he was primarily committed to the Patman bill, because of its expansionist features, but might consider another mandatory payment proposal if it becomes apparent in advance a Patman veto can not be overridden.

Other Patman enthusiasts, such as Huey Long, of Louisiana, flatly refused to cooperate in the compromise movement. Louisiana's "Kingfish" insisted a veto would be overridden. He said the Patman bloc already is assured of within two votes of the necessary two-thirds.

Majority Leader Robinson and Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, were confident, however the Senate would sustain a veto, by even a larger count than the 33 votes cast against the Patman bill.

Senate Minority Leader McNary said he knew of no Republican votes which would shift, if the bill is offered again over a veto. He discounted reports that a number of Republicans who voted "no" on the Patman bill would change to "yes" to embarrass the President on a motion to override.

House leaders conceded that chamber would vote to override a Patman veto.

Senator Austin's attack on TVA yesterday not only held up a vote on the Norris bill, but it delayed consideration of the NRA extension resolution and prevented disposal of the bonus reconsideration motion.

More Speak Today.

Austin said Senators Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina; Walter F. George, of Georgia (Democrats), and L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, will make speeches against the bill today.

The Vermonter said a TVA audit by Comptroller General McCarl showed abuses, excesses of authority, overpayment of salaries, "contracts made in the teeth of the law and overpayment of contracts." It further showed the Tennessee Valley Authority had spent $250,000,000 in its two years of operation, he said, or five times the congressional authorization.

"The members of the Tennessee Valley Authority did not take advantage of their original $50,000,000 bond issue authorization, but have taken sums out of the Treasury by other and devious and unauthorized means," Austin said.

Overpayment Charged.

He charged the Norris bill was an attempt to "patch up" a reverse in the courts, when Federal Judge William Grubb, of Birmingham, Ala., ruled TVA did not have authority to compete with private utilities in sale of its power.

Among allegations made by the Vermonter were charges of dual compensation under TVA, purchase of power lines without a clear title, unsecured loans to co-operative agencies, overpayments for electrical equipment, excessive travel allowances and emergency purchases where no emergency was shown.

It was learned that leaders are impatient to lay aside the Norris TVA bill and proceed with the NRA extension resolution. The existing NRA authorization expires June 16, and there is still a long road of controversy ahead of the resolution reported by the Senate Finance Committee. This provides NRA continuance until April, 1936, but bars intrastate commerce regulation and price fixing, except in mineral resource industries.

Although this resolution falls far short of what the President had asked, House Ways and Means Democrats have decided to bring out a resolution on the other side of the Capitol, for a two-year extension, with amendments acceptable to the Administration.

National Leaders Talk At Zionist Conclave

By the Associated Press.

Newport News, Va., May 8.—National leaders of the Jewish faith will address delegates for approximately 40 communities of Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina and the District of Columbia of the thirteenth annual conference of the Seaboard Zionist Region here Sunday and Monday.

In addition to regional leaders, speakers will include Morris Margulies, national secretary of the Zionist Organization of America; Mendel N. Farm Economy Build-up Voted At Conference

Dearborn Parley Names 15 to Promote Industrial Use of U. S. Crops.

By the Associated Press.

Dearborn, Mich., May 8.—The Dearborn conference took definite steps today to make American agriculture a partner in modern industrial production.

Representatives of agriculture, industry and science approved unanimously a resolution introduced by Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, calling for the creation of a council which would become the co-ordinating agency in "developing new industrial markets for farm products."

The step calls for appointment of a committee of 15 to form a national organization to supervise the practical application in industry of numerous agricultural products which have been utilized experimentally in manufacturing processes.

Backs Ford's Contention.

The resolution was in line with a message to the conference from Henry Ford, who declared he was convinced that farm production of industrial supplies was both inevitable and essential.

"I believe we are on the track of a new partnership between farm and factory," Ford said. "* * * The result will be that agriculture will have an unfailing market and industry will have constant employment, because a balance will have been reached."

The resolution was adopted shortly after proposals to utilize farm products for the manufacture of power alcohol had stirred up a storm in the conference, with experts disagreeing sharply over the merits of alcohol as a motor fuel blend.

Five Objectives Listed.

The resolution contained five objectives:

1. To gradually absorb domestic farm surplus by domestic energy.
2. Put idle acres to work profitably.
3. Increase the purchasing power of the American farmer on a stable and more permanent basis.
4. To increase the demand for manufacturing products.
5. To create new work for idle hands to do, revive American industry, restore American labor to productive enterprise, and relieve the economic distress of the Nation.

Rites Planned Sunday On Jamestown Island

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Jamestown, Va., May 8.—Miss Ellen Bagby, chairman of the Jamestown Committee for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, announced today that Mrs. Ada Brooks Peake will sing Sunday at the annual commemorative services on Jamestown Island in the Old Church. These services, held on the anniversary of the arrival of the first permanent colonists in America at Jamestown Island, will be carried by loud speakers to the audience outside the church.

The services will be in the form of a memorial to Mrs. J. Taylor Ellyson, president of the association for 30 years, and to Col. Samuel H. Yonge, United States engineer, who directed the building of the sea wall which has prevented further encroachments of the James River. The services will be held in the Old Church at 2 p. m. and later on the grounds at 3 p. m., additional features commemorating historical events in Virginia history will be given.

D. C. Zionists to Attend Newport News Session

Delegates from the District, Maryland, Virginia, and North and South Carolina will meet in Newport News, Va., Sunday and Monday in the Thirteenth annual conference of the Seaboard Zionist Region.

Among those scheduled to address the gathering are Morris Margulies, national secretary of the Zionist Organization of America; Mendel N. Fisher, national campaign director of the Jewish National Fund, and Rabbi Irving Miller of Far Rockaway, N. Y. Isadore Hershfield, of Washington, also will participate.

Town Goes Chain Letter Mad, Traffic Halted in Missouri

Make-Shift 'Factories' Do Land Office Business.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Mo., May 8.—Chain-letter "factories"—$18,000 changed hands at three of them within five hours—turned this southwestern Missouri city today into a money-mad maelstrom.

A whirlpool of humanity—society women, waitresses, college students and taxi drivers—jammed downtown streets. Women shoved each other roughly in a bargain-counter rush on the numerous chain headquarters.

It started last night as a joke. By sunup, it was the town's biggest business.

Two, three and five doller chain letters were sold from person to person and attested before a notary.

Letter Notarized.

A customer who purchased a $5 letter was taken before a notary public. The notary made certain the customer put $5 in the mail addressed to the person whose name topped that particular chain list. Two copies of each letter purchased were resold with the new customer's name at the bottom of the lists. With each resale and cancellation, the new customer worked up to the "pay off" position.

Originators of $2, $3 and $5 chains hurriedly rented office space, got stenographers busy typing lists, and hired clerks and notaries to convince customers the chains were "cheater-proof."

The "factories" sprang up in drug stores and corridors, anywhere there was space. Other business was halted. Even executives took up the fad.

College Offered Plan.

Guy Barnes, executive secretary of Drury College, which is planning an endowment campaign, said persons have assured him:

"All we have to do is start a chain letter and within ten days we'll have $50,000."

He did not indicate the suggestion would be followed.

Operators of a $5 chain claimed a total investment of $1,080 within 12 hours. Beauty shops sold the letters to their customers while administering facials and permanents. A taproom operator said he made $875 on a $5 chain, and expected more.

"It's just a sudden release of recklessnes by persons who have been under severe restraint," said Harry P. Study, president of the Missouri State Teachers Association.

But few tried to explain it. They were too busy.

Rotary Indorses Move To Save Historic Trail

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., May 8.—The Frostburg Rotary Club yesterday commended by resolution the Cumberland and Uniontown Chambers of Commerce for their co-operation with Frostburg residents in arousing interest in the restoration of the famous old Braddock trail.

Government investigators have recommended that the trail, wherever possible, be restored as a bridle path memorial to the colonists who marched in with Washington in the Braddock expedition.

Flag-Draped Casket Escorted From Train to Manhattan Home.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—The body of United States Senator Bronson M. Cutting, of New Mexico, victim of the crash of a fog-bound airliner near Atlanta, Mo., Monday, was brought home tonight to the house of his mother, Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting.

The bronze flag-draped casket was taken from a St. Louis train in Grand Central Station and removed to Mrs. Cutting's house at 24 East Seventy-second street.

Funeral services, to be attended by official Washington, are to be held Friday afternoon at St. James' Protestant Episcopal Church.

Body Met by Mother.

Mrs. Cutting, white-haired and dressed in mourning, met the body at the passenger ramp in the dimly lit cavern of the Grand Central Station.

A police honor detail, headed by Inspector Charles Neidig, walked with slow tread ahead of the casket as it was borne by pallbearers to an elevator in the train sheds, where it was transferred upstairs to street level.

Mrs. Cutting, weeping, followed on the arm of a friend with Clifford McCarthy, New Mexico supervisor of Indian relief, and his sister, Mrs. Dean Neimoyer, of Kansas City, who accompanied the body East.

Redcaps Bare Heads.

Gates leading from the train platforms to the brightly lit terminal concourse were closed and only casual workers and a few redcaps were present. All stood silently at their duties with uncovered heads when the casket was borne the short distance from train to elevator.

Upstairs the casket was placed in a funeral hearse and driven to Mrs. Cutting's home. A police motorcycle escort, with muted sirens, cleared a path for the procession through the heavy early evening traffic of Park avenue.

A police guard was posted at the residence until after the services Friday. Burial will take place at Oakdale, Long Island, Senator Cuting's birthplace.

Health Board to Meet.

The advisory board to the public health lay committee of Takoma Park will meet this afternoon at 3:30 p. m. in the town council room of the Citizen's Bank on Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md. General health regarding Takoma Park and the examination of pre-school aged children will be discussed.

Phone Alexandria 523.

A dinner in compliment to Robert L. Insko, department commander of the Department of Virginia, American Legion, was given last night in the George Mason Hotel. Mrs. Felix K. Parker, department president of the American Legion, paid her official visit to the Eighth District and was guest of honor at the dinner, which was given by the Eighth District to the commander and president.

District Commander John W. Haggerty, of Quantico, who was to preside at the dinner, was unable to be present on account of illness, and his place was filled by Sidney Weil, vice commander. Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson, Eighth District committeewoman, represented the auxiliary.

The Alexandria Kiwanis Club will hold its "informal family night" in the George Mason Hotel at 6:30 o'clock this evening. An interesting program has been arranged by Robert W. Eaves, president, who announces that any members not able to attend may retain their attendance record by taking luncheon at the George Mason Hotel today, and registering.

The Alexandria High School will be represented Saturday in the Literary and Athletic Association contest by seven students. These contestants, who will be accompanied by their sponsor, Miss Mary Waller Dickinson, are Robert Gooding and Jack Cowling, debaters; Jared Rolston, Lucy Reynolds and Margaret Brinckman, one-act play; Ann Barr, spelling, and Robert Rutledge, public speaking. These were all winners of the semifinals held at Fredericksburg recently.

It is estimated that Alexandria World War Veterans will receive approximately $367,900 if the Patman bonus bill is approved.

Maryland Apple Buds Escape Harm From Rain

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hancock, Md., May 8.—Dr. E. N. Cory, State entomologist, completed a survey of the apple orchards in this district today and reported that the buds had been unharmed by the five days of rain, and that a pumper crop is in prospect.

Dr. Cory said he found the bees working in all of the orchards and that there was no danger of lack of pollenization, which had caused much apprehension among growers throughout this great apple belt.

Loudoun County Seeks $4,750 in Excess Pay

Richmond, Va., May 8 (AP).—In a report on an audit of Loudoun County records, State Auditor McCarthy Down today pointed out that amounts totaling $4,750, described as excess compensation paid certain present and past supervisors, has not been recovered by the county.

Approximately $4,150 of this total was paid out prior to June 30, 1932, and $3,350 of the whole was paid to a former supervisor, he reported.

The auditor then cited the law regarding the duty of the Commonwealth's attorney to take action to recover for the county.

4-H Delegate Chosen.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Snow Hill, Md., May 8.—Gladys Perdue, of this city, has been chosen to represent Maryland at the national 4-H camp which is to convene on the grounds of the Department of Agriculture in Washington June 13. Maryland will be represented by four 4-H Club members, two boys and two girls and the State leaders.

Chamber Plans Trip.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 8.—Members of the Clarksburg Chamber of Commerce have begun planning for a visit of a group of Eastern Panhandle business men to this section June 10. The visitors will be entertained at a breakfast and accompanied on a tour of the city's industrial and residential sections. Later the visitors will go to Fairmont.

The Public Be Pleased

ONE of the hardiest fallacies in the commercial world is the belief that business thrives by abusing the confidence of its customers.

No corporate milkman has attained community stature by playing fast and loose with hard-earned good will.

He knows that he can prosper only by making good the expectations of the consumer.

He endures and grows by selling his product over and over again to the same individuals.

If he breaks faith, his market is destroyed, and the community takes him off its books as a going concern.

Even were he totally lacking in conscience, he could not long avoid extinction through his indifference to fair dealing.

Every day he submits his service to public judgment.

In a very real sense he operates in a glass house.

There is nothing hidden or mysterious about his business. It is as transparent as the bottles which hold his stock-in-trade.

Consistently he must score in quality, purity, price, and delivery.

That he continues to serve the public is at once a compliment to his integrity and a proof of promises well performed.

Valid Public Works.

Sufficient to the day have been the evils of the depression. The country has had little time and less inclination in the midst of its day-to-day struggles to concern itself with the probabilities of a distant future. It is all the more valuable, then, to consider the predictions of a competent and far-seeing expert. Morris L. Cooke, chairman of the water section of the National Resources Board and one of the recently named directors of the $4,000,000,000 public works program, this week told a Cincinnati gathering that "this country of ours has left to it less than 100 years of virile national existence." He was talking from the viewpoint of a physiographist, in terms of soil and fertility.

Regardless of the Utopian forecasts by science of life 100 years hence, history will bear out Mr. Cooke's contention that failure to conserve soil and water resources may undermine a civilization. China stands as the classic example. Once a fertile land, today it trembles before the fury of floods and drought—results of the failure of its earlier inhabitants to understand the consequences of unsystematic cultivation. The Valley of the Nile, too, once teemed with rich agriculture; the yellow sands now run out in shoals from both shores. Again, man called down his own destruction by willfully failing to cherish the fertility of his land. Countless civilizations similarly have risen, flourished and disappeared again, leaving only barren acres as mute indications of their doom.

Mr. Cooke regards the recent dust storms, violent floods and prolonged droughts as signals of worse things to come in this country. It is immediately necessary, he believes, to develop a national water conservation policy, with attention centering on the "little waters" that gnaw away the soil, in contrast to previous efforts in diking great rivers. Part of the augmented Civilian Conservation Corps has already been assigned to this work. And Mr. Cooke himself, as chairman of the rural electrification division of the Federal works program, will be in a position to do much in the way of erosion and flood control.

This work will be watched with interest. Of all the undertakings contemplated in the works program, none can receive more unanimous indorsement than that designed to conserve the fertility of the soil—from which, in the last analysis, the strength of the Nation has sprung.

Government Salaries.

With the exception of the President, no Government official receives a salary that remotely approximates the amounts paid to the ranking executive officers of many large private corporations. Less than 1,000 Government employes are paid in excess of $10,000 per year—a negligible proportion of the total number in the Federal service. The list of salaries varying from $5,000 to $10,000 is also limited to slightly over 7,000 persons.

Considering the highly specialized training required to fill many positions and the need of competent administrators, the Government salary scale is not high. In fact, if all Federal salaries were to be cut 50 per cent, as suggested by Gov. Talmadge of Georgia, starvation conditions would prevail among the lower-salaried groups, while the better paid, responsible positions would be shunned by men with the training and ability essential to insure efficient performance. As it is, Government salary scales are in many cases too low to attract qualified individuals, unless they have outside sources of income.

It is not the total amount paid to the few thousands of persons receiving over $5,000 that calls for criticism. It is the obvious failure to relate the scale of pay to the character of the work and the arduousness of the duties. A glance at the top-notch salaries paid to subordinates in the RFC or the AAA, for example, indicates that the emergency organizations are getting more than a fair share of the $10,000 per year jobs. It does not appear that these individuals are entitled to salaries as large, or almost as large, as those paid to the heads of some of the important permanent agencies. In exceptional cases, it may be necessary to engage the services of experts who can be drawn from private activities only by offers of pay above the level of their titular superiors, but those cases are few. Such a practice can not be justified as a permanent policy on an extensive basis.

Exemption from the merit system of the employes of the new emergency agencies and the large discretionary spending powers vested in executive heads have tended to aggravate inequalities in pay and to multiply the number of temporary positions in the high salary categories. What is needed is not a general lowering of the scale of Government salaries but salary readjustments that will eliminate irrational inequalities by relating remuneration to merit.

The FERA And State Rights.

In Illinois angry men and women are threatening to march on the State capitol to demand reopening of relief stations closed for lack of funds. Meantime the Legislature, confronted with an ultimatum from Administrator Hopkins, is pushing toward passage of a sales tax measure designed to provide the supplement to Federal relief contributions demanded by the FERA.

Where does the blame lie for this unhappy situation which has suddenly deprived thousands of destitute people of the funds with which to support bare existence? A measure of sympathy goes out to Mr. Hopkins, who undoubtedly finds it painful to enforce his demands at the expense of the suffering unemployed and their families. However, there is also ground for sympathizing with legislators who resent the apparently arbitrary demands of a Federal official, telling Illinois just how much the State can and must contribute to a joint fund for relief of distress.

The difficulty undoubtedly traces back to the lack of preliminary planning and imperfect coordination between the Federal Government and the States. The situation in Illinois merely provides a conspicuous illustration of the kinds of difficulties that have arisen elsewhere. In Louisiana and Georgia, for instance, Mr. Hopkins has had no success in persuading the State authorities to vote taxes for relief purposes. Administration of relief has already been taken over in both these States by the Federal authorities, and it is now reported that the Federal Government is preparing to assume full command of relief administration in all States after the first of July.

If Federal officials are to be the only responsible relief administrators, and if Federal relief standards are to be applied without consultation with local officials, the States that have refused to shoulder their fair share of the relief burden will probably be confirmed in their obduracy. Gov. Talmadge, for instance, will find it easier to obtain credit for his opposition to all new tax levies that would enable Georgia to cover a part of the cost of caring for her own unemployed. Neither Georgia nor any other State in her situation can be expected to acquiesce willingly in policies that raise relief wages above local standards or that call for expenditures of State funds upon construction which locally appears unnecessary or even absurd.

If the States are to retain any measure of control over their own affairs, they must be in a position to influence the amounts and the types of expenditures carried on within their boundaries. That holds true not only for the FERA, whose haphazard methods have brought about the conflicts in Illinois and elsewhere, but even more for the new work relief program in process of development. So far few definite details of that program have been made public, but President Roosevelt's statement that no hard and fast rules on loans to cities would be formulated suggests trouble ahead.

Loans and grants of all sorts must be apportioned on some more or less systematic basis if justice is to be done to all sections. Above all, if even a vestige of State and local governmental autonomy is to be preserved, the States must be forced to defray part of the expense, insofar as they are able. To determine their taxable capacity, however, is a work that does not lie within the province of a Federal relief administrator who arbitrarily opposes his judgment to that of the State authorities.

The White Man's Burden.

Italy's latest mobilization order is accompanied by an outpouring of propaganda designed to convince the world that the powerful Fascist nation is merely taking essential "precautionary" measures against the primitive African state of Ethiopia. But the concentration of a new army, estimated to number 100,000, speaks so loudly that special pleading in the Chamber of Deputies and in the Fascist press is scarcely audible. The policy which Mussolini has chosen to pursue in Africa is all too evident in the roll of drums and the march of armed men toward ports of departure for the "front."

Negotiations of a very ineffective sort are still going forward for a settlement of the Abyssinian dispute. No progress seems to have been made. However, the situation has not been aggravated by further border incidents. And since summer rains will soon make serious fighting in the disputed area impractical until the autumn there seems to be no reasonable excuse for the shipment of entire Italian regiments to Africa. Mussolini's real purpose of large-scale and bare-faced conquest thus becomes more and more evident.

A clue to the situation is contained in the remarks of Allessandro Lessona, undersecretary for colonial affairs, before the Chamber of Deputies. Not merely the security of Italian lands is at stake, he said, but "the whole European civilizing mission." So Mussolini is going to take up the somewhat dog-eared and discredited "White Man's Burden." Virtually all sponsors of aggressive war used to ease their consciences by platitudes about saving backward peoples from the consequences of their own ignorance. But the world had thought that Il Duce was too much of a realist to try to fool his people with that line.

By his deliberate preparations to crush a relatively powerless nation Mussolini is alienating the sympathy of people in all countries. If his belligerent policy should result in war he will have a good deal of explaining to do at Geneva. And if the reported distress of his conscripts in the torrid African climate should bring this ambitious venture to a tragic end of a different sort, he may have to do a good deal of explaining to his own people.

Only A Veto Will Serve.

As the bonus bill is being sent to the White House every vestige of compromise has been eliminated. The crude proposal of Representative Patman to pay an unmatured Treasury obligation with fiat currency places before the President the stark issue of tampering with the monetary system for the benefit of a special group. It is impossible to believe that he will acquiesce in this demand, particularly after his intimation of a veto yesterday.

Senator Harrison's so-called compromise measure made a very poor showing. Administration leaders joined with the inflationists and bonusites in substituting the Patman bill for the Vinson pay-off plan apparently with the view of forcing a veto. For the two-edged nostrum finally approved by both houses is far more distasteful to the Administration than any other bonus measure that Congress might have passed. It gives the President no opportunity to withdraw gracefully from the stand he has taken against prepayment of the bonus while more important obligations are putting a heavy strain upon the national credit. Since the bonus advocates have ruthlessly flouted the compromise gesture, they must expect the President to strike back with equal force and far more courage.

Regardless of Senator McAdoo's specious oratory about blazing new trails, the Patman bill represents nothing so much as a feeble surrender to a highly organized lobby. The only trail which is being "blazed" by this action is that leading from the Treasury to the ballot box which uncourageous politicians have been following for centuries. Attempts to justify this course by relating it to the experimentation policy of the New Deal serve only to illustrate the paucity of reason behind the bonus drive.

Having won its case in Congress, the bonus lobby has already trained its guns upon the White House. Will the President be influenced by the thousands of pro-bonus letters and telegrams pouring in on the White House and Congress in response to emotional appeals by Father Coughlin and other demagogues? When similar tactics have been used to frustrate legislation sponsored by the President the "propagandists" have been sternly rebuked. For the sake of consistency as well as the national credit, therefore, the President may be expected to remain aloof from the clamor of the bonus "interests."

The Mayor of Baltimore.

In the reelection of Mayor Howard W. Jackson, Baltimore may look forward to a continuance of a sound administration of its affairs in the difficult days ahead. Mr. Jackson during the last four years has kept the municipality solvent and functioning without impairment of any essential service. In view of what has happened in many cities that is saying a great deal.

With the petty quarrels and factional rivalries of Democratic political leaders in Baltimore, we have no concern nor, it appears, have the majority of Baltimoreans. It is only natural that Mayor Jackson should aspire to the Governorship of Maryland. In that ambition, he will be greatly aided by adhering to his pledge of giving to Baltimore the best that is in him, without thought either to partisan considerations or the will of party bosses. After all, good government is the smartest politics.

Comment on the Baltimore municipal election would not be complete without a word for Blanchard Randall, jr., the defeated Republican candidate for Mayor. Mr. Randall, who has won the respect of his fellow citizens by his ability in business ventures, his fine sense of public service, his integrity and his personality, fought an honorable fight and went down to defeat with honor to himself and his party.

Due to the overwhelming Democratic majority in Baltimore, Republicans of ability unfortunately are too often reluctant to enter the political arena. Mr. Randall's defeat should not discourage his party from putting forth its best members, nor dissuade the latter from becoming candidates. Mr. Randall's only fault was a lack of experience in public life, inevitable in the case of one of his relative youth. Had his opponent been a man of less ability and proved experience than Mayor Jackson, Baltimore today might be happily celebrating the election of this popular member of an outstanding Maryland family.

A Forgotten Indian War.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

It has escaped the war correspondents, but the Seminole Indians of Florida have considered themselves at war with the United States for more than a century. Now they are conquered, they say, not by military force, but by the depression, and want to make peace. The Seminole war—described by historians as the fiercest of all conflicts by the United States against Indians—ended in 1843 for the greater part of the tribe. Those who surrendered, about 3,800 in number, were removed to Indian Territory. The die-hard faction fled to the Florida swamps, where some 500 tribesmen still live, in abject poverty.

It is the Florida Seminoles' contention that they have not received Government benefits that have been granted other tribes, despite numerous promises. They inform Secretary Ickes that they want land, schools, a hospital, cash allowances and the right to hunt game for food. It is a far cry from the Seminoles' heyday as masters of Florida to their present lowly estate, but their history closely parallels that of other tribes. The Government can end a forgotten war and redeem the ancient promises by seeing that justice now is done this tribal fragment.

Ark Builder: "What! No Flood?"

During the temporary absence of Mr. Elderman, The Post's cartoonist, a symposium of editorial reaction to current national and foreign affairs will be published from day to day in this space. The reprinted drawings will not necessarily represent our own viewpoint, but are selected as reflections of considered opinions on the passing scene. The editors of The Post wish to make full acknowledgment of the courtesy of their contemporaries in granting permission for this procedure.

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Railroads' Responsibility.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is interesting to note, in the case of the deplorable accident at Rockville, how the B. & O. immediately absolves itself of any blame in connection with the tragedy.

Yet it is also interesting to note the following: the watchman at that particular crossing leaves at an early hour. Also, on stormy nights, it is practically impossible to hear the bells, which without a watchman on guard, doubles the hazard. Besides, there are no lights at this crossing, unless they have been installed within the last two years, which is improbable when we read that a watchman is kept at the place. This particular crossing has for years been a menace to the people of Rockville.

On rainy or snowy nights, also, it is almost impossible to see even the signal lights at Beltsville, until they reflect on the windshield, and one still less seldom hears the bells.

Check up on your accident toll, and I believe you will learn that most accidents are due to the fliers; not the freights. Personally, I think the railroads are chiefly at fault. They own and operate the trains and they should work for safe crossings. A. J. AHANE.

Against Interference In Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently a series of vituperative attacks upon the Mexican government have appeared in the section of your paper devoted to "Letters to the Editor." With all due respect to the probable sincerity of the authors of these communications, it appears imperative to point out that in their desire to further the aims of their friends and fellow religionists who aim at the overthrow of a friendly government, they have deliberately or through ignorance obscured the true state of affairs in Mexico.

It would be interesting to determine how many of these eloquent penmen have ever lived in Mexico, or have bothered to study objectively the cause they have espoused. Have they considered the dignity and position of the Catholic Church of the United States when they ally that church through the public declarations made by its highest functionaries with a group of assassins who struck down one Mexican president, launched an abortive revolt, and who have recently attempted under the cloak of a religious faith to regain the temporal power wrested from them by Benito Juarez, who emancipated the Mexican peasant even as Lincoln did the American slave?

Is it not logical that a nation freed from a heavy yoke which included the Inquisition, ruthless taxation and exploitation, lax morality and the deliberate maintenance of ignorance, would prefer to retain its hard-won gains? It is understandable why those who have most to gain personally would gladly sponsor a return to the "good old days."

The solicitude of the International Catholic Truth Society about the "persecution of all religions in Mexico" (The Post, May 3, 1935) is touching, particularly when the position of non-Catholic religious groups in Mexico under the Catholic regime is remembered. It might even seem as though those who stamped the hardest when their power was supreme are first to remember the universal brotherhood of Christianity when conditions are reversed.

Why should we, the people of the United States, assist in this attempted interference in the purely domestic life of a friendly foreign state? We would not tolerate such interference in our own domestic affairs, and our interference in Mexico would not and should not be tolerated. JOSEPH BUSCH.

Washington, May 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The policies of the present Mexican government have not and do not endanger the lives of American citizens or menace our institutions. And so long as this condition prevails it is no concern, either of our people or our Government, what steps the constituted civil authority of the Republic of Mexico may take to insure prosperity, liberty (of conscience and of action) and domestic tranquillity to its citizens.

Partisanship over this subject has been solely between officials of the Catholic Church and the Mexican government and its representatives. The Mexicans rigidly maintain their side of the question, and the Catholics denounce the Mexican government for allegedly persecuting Catholics.

Failing to convince our government that the situation in Mexico warrants intervention, opponents of the Mexican policy are now endeavoring to arouse American opinion to such an extent that it will compel action by the United States Government. To this end many varieties of denunciation have been indulged in, among them being numerous attacks on Ambassador Daniels, our State Department, and the President of the United States.

It seems strange that the Catholics of Mexico, who constitute roughly 90 per cent of the population of that country, can not take care of themselves without appealing to the United States to pull their chestnuts out of the fire. Just now they are charging religious persecution; but readers will recall publication in The Post recently of excerpts from the former Mexican constitution in which Roman Catholicism was established as the state religion and the practice of all other religious faiths forbidden. Where was the persecution and where were the defenders of religious liberty in those days?

The crux of the whole matter lies in the fact that the Mexican government is trying to break the strangle hold of the Catholic Church on the schools of Mexico. That government is interested in freedom of education in the hands of the state, an educational system which has been the corner stone of our own freedom and progress.

We in this country can not envision a school system entirely in the hands of the church, and surely we can not believe that absolute liberty of conscience, such as we know it here, is possible under such a church educational system.

I believe this is the basis of the "persecution" cries; and if it is, I feel firmly confident that America will never consent to defend a system which strikes at the very backbone of one of the cardinal principles of democratic government: the complete separation of church and state. LET THERE BE LIGHT.

Washington, May 4.

Strong, Beyond Question.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to add my strongest possible protest to those of Charles Edward Russell and of "Fair Dealer" in your May 4 edition against your editorial attitude toward lynching and the pending legislation against it. I had congratulated myself that at last I had found a Washington paper whose editorial position I could support. But I see that it is a case of et tu, Brute. "Alas and alack and alacker!" there is no health in any of you!

Some months ago I felt that I must protest against your provocative editorial toward the Japanese (not from any partisanship for that country), and your reply was, "We can't be responsible for the news." It was not "news" that I had criticized, but your small-boy-nose-thumbing at a people already dangerously on edge. You should be "responsible" for your printed expressions of opinion. I received many expressions of commendation from friends who read my letter and your comment.

A further criticism I feel I must make is on behalf of the children. You provide very interesting matter for them so that they are sure to look through the paper eagerly, but you do not hesitate to spread on your page that degrading cartoon, "Senate Filibuster."

I am very faithfully yours,
AGNES GODFREY GAY.

Washington, May 5.

Our Wandering Hordes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Here is vacation time at hand again and not a thing in the world done to keep our school boys and girls from roaming all over the country, sleeping in box cars, transient camps and everywhere else they can find. But instead of stopping them from traveling, the Government puts up camps and invites them to come to the city to live.

Some of the newspapers in our country are greatly worried about the rambling hordes of children in Russia. Why worry about Russia? Let's worry about our own wandering herds of lawless children and do something to stop them from running all over the country.

I have tried to get someone with enough influence in the right places to do something to put a stop to the boys and girls riding freight trains, but nobody seems to be interested in them till they get in court, jail or hospital with a leg or arm cut off. P. J. HORNE.

Washington, May 6.

Stock For Strikers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The strikers in the automobile industry should be made to buy one share of stock in the company they work for. This would give them an interest in the welfare and prosperity of the company, and they would be able to judge if the demands of the employes were just, and also be able to determine if the company could afford the demands of the workers.

This method should apply to the railroads and all other industries. It would also be a form of unemployment insurance, as in case of a temporary shutdown, the employe could sell his stock to pay his expenses. ALICE PAYLER.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would suggest that you advertise "Buy American." I went around town today for six hours and found that 75 per cent of the stores sell Japanese-made goods.

The Post Impressionist

"Devoutly To Be Wished."

Post Office, Thursday.

THAT stanch Shakespearean, James M. Beck, has something to say about our recent Column on Shakespeare.

At the Shakespearean Fellowship's celebration in New York, this former Solicitor General of the United States spoke on the Shakespearean theater, and his words, pronounced in the Mall of Central Park, were carried to an audience at Stratford-on-Avon—the first time America has thus directly communicated with Stratford. Now that Mr. Beck has been talking to the Post-Impressionist on the same theme, we should not be doing our duty by you if we failed to report his words as well as we are able.

* * *

"Shakespeare," he said, "can't be too much read, but he is too little acted. A library in Washington dedicated to his memory is much; so is a theater similarly dedicated on the banks of the Avon. But why do the children of his brain find so little place on the living stage of our day?

"Were he here now, he would be delighted by Miss Cornell's admirable portrayal of Juliet. Yet wouldn't he be puzzled by the neglect of Rosalind, Perdita, Miranda and Imogene?"

* * *

Mr. Beck is no halfway revivalist. "It may seem sentimental," said he, "to regard the revival of the Shakespearean theater as a debt to Shakespeare, but such a revival is a very practical debt that we owe ourselves."

* * *

There is the "Old Vic" in London, with its traditional devotion to Shakespeare? There is that aforementioned theater on the Avon to the existence of which America made a substantial contribution?

"I am not unappreciative of either," said Mr. Beck. "What I regret is that there are not more such institutions to praise.

"Those isolated instances aren't enough to redeem our neglect. That only two Shakespearean theaters exist is a reflection on the English-speaking world. Every city in that world should have one.

* * *

"You may call it wonderful that Shakespeare could have written 36 such plays as he did write," Mr. Beck continued. "It is also a matter of wonder that in the age of Elizabeth, when the population of London was under 300,000, there was an audience which could appreciate all those plays. We like to talk of our advance in culture—yet today, with the inestimable gift of that genius at our free disposal, we prefer, in the living theater, the ephemeral, the trivial, sometimes the debasing."

* * *

What is the reason?

Mr. Beck finds it in the impact of mechanical civilization:

"I don't deny," he said, "that mechanism has added to the potential triumphs of man's dynamic power, but I do believe that it has added very little to his spirituality. The clamor of the machines has dulled the imagination of the average man.

"Cultural advancement? If the Greeks of the Periclean Age crowded into the Hippodrome, they weren't any the less eager to see the plays of Greek masters in the classic theater at the foot of the Parthenon. If the English-speaking races took as much interest in the performance of Shakespeare's plays as they do in the cricket field and the baseball park, wouldn't our level of culture be immensely raised?"

* * *

So the creation of more Shakespearean theaters is Mr. Beck's theme:

"Here is an opportunity for the leaders of thought on both sides of the Atlantic. Few greater services could be rendered to the masses in this Machine Age than to stimulate their imagination and enrich their thoughts by the adequate production of Shakespeare's masterpieces on the stage. That indeed is 'a consummation devoutly to be wished'."

* * *

And if it is a consummation not to be achieved?

Well, after all, everything is not lost. There still remains, said Mr. Beck, in his Central Park address, the consolation of the closet:

"If the Shakespearean theater be denied us, we do at least have the lesser privilege of reading Shakespeare in our libraries and making of him 'a guide, philosopher and friend' . . . Even the dull imagination of this working-day era of ours can not wholly exclude the wholesome sunshine of his mighty influence, for it may be said of Shakespeare, in his own words:

"'A kindlier and a wiselier man
Framed in the prodigality of nature
This spacious world does not enfold'."

THE WHIPPING POST.

"A message sent by Sinclair Lewis, defeated Democratic candidate for Governor of California, urging that workers and unemployed capture the Democratic party, was interpreted as a further deterrent to a third party movement." So says an Associated Press dispatch as reproduced in our own newspaper. But shouldn't the message have been interpreted as plagiarism on the part of the author of "Main Street," with the author of "The Jungle" for its victim?

Along The Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

One for the Dry Side.

"I GUESS," said Pete, the taxicab driver, "that that-there Senator McAdoo is fixing to run for President again. Yes, sir, when I see him joining the inflationists and wanting to give the veterans the bonus, I says to myself, I says, that man is fixing to run for something again. And it must be the presidency.

"I never will forget when he was getting ready to run for the presidency before. If he had had to get ready longer the railroad men of this country would have been sitting pretty. Indeed, they would. They wouldn't have to be worrying about pensions or nothing else. They'd probably owned the railroads. He was sure good to those fellows. I wished I was a railroad man.

• • • •

"Yes, sir, I remember it just as well as I'm sitting here. Only this morning I says to my wife—lotsa times in the mornings I think of things and say them to my wife on account of her being an understanding sort. It keeps us knowing what the other one is thinking about. Lotsa men are glum. They never say nothing around the house except when they want to bawl somebody out. But I'm different, I'm always saying things to my wife.

"Well, sir, the first thing I says to her this morning—I looks in the paper and sees where Senator McAdoo stepped into the bonus fight and I says, 'Oh, oh, he's gonna do it again.' And my wife says, 'He's gonna do what?' That's where my wife's different from most wives. She's interested in what I says. Lotsa wives woulda just said, 'Oh, he is, is he?' without knowing what it was he was gonna do. But she right up and says, 'He's gonna do what?'

"'He's gonna run for the Presidency again,' I says.

• • • •

"You know what—he's a persuasive man, too. Did you hear him when he made his speech? Well, now, I never gave no thought to this business that you can get something for nothing. I figure the Government has got no money of its own. At least, it don't grow it, do it? I always thought the only money it had was what it took from us.

"But, now, there's Senator McAdoo—he says this ain't necessary at all. He says it's perfectly all right to issue Treasury notes to pay the bonus with; and not only that, but when the Treasury issues notes like this we don't have to pay the bankers or anybody else any interest. Course, Mr. Brisbane has been saying this for a long time, and I guess that is where Senator McAdoo got the idea from. But you'll have to admit the way he says it it sounds reasonable.

• • • •

"Aw, I'm not saying I agree with him. I gotta mind of my own. My wife, she says, she says sometimes it's amazing the way I work things out. I don't care how they figure it I can't see where the Government has any money that it don't get from us, and, of course, the money it borrows and expects to get from us later. And if it don't pay the interest to people who it borrows, the money from I don't see how it's going to get the money, that's all.

"But what I'm talking about is how reasonable Senator McAdoo can make it sound. He's the most reasonable sounding man you ever listened to. He's always been reasonable sounding, too. When he was raising the pay of the railroad men when he was getting ready to run for President before people said 'he's gonna wreck us just so he can be President, he's gonna give the railroads to the men.' But he talked just as reasonable sounding about it.

"The only time he wasn't so reasonable sounding or at least he wasn't reasonable sounding enough was at Madison Square Garden. Sort of looks like when the crisis came in his reasonable sounding he just couldn't quite be reasonable sounding enough. I've known lotsa people that way, though. They train all their lives for something and then when the big fight comes they find they have up and overtrained. I guess that was what was wrong with him at Madison Square Garden. He had overtrained in reasonable sounding.

The Church In Mexico

Catholic University Scholar Of Latin-American Affairs Urges Scientific Approach Through History In Solving Differences Between Church And State.

By Rev. Francis Borgia Steck, O. F. M., Ph. D.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THOSE who have been reading recent periodicals and newspapers on the religious controversy in Mexico must have observed how the problem is being approached in two ways. These may be termed the direct and the indirect way.

No right-thinking person, of course, north of the Rio Grande or anywhere else will sanction all the means employed these past few years by the Mexican government to achieve its ostensible aim—namely, the elevation of the so-called proletariat to higher standards of living and the improvement of social and economic conditions. Laudable as this aim and unselfish as its pursuers may be, there is reason for serious doubt whether violence and oppression of the vast majority group will achieve it. Be that as it may. The fact is—and every day it is becoming more evident—large numbers of non-Catholics in the United States are siding more or less, if not entirely, with the Catholics. This is apparent from recent articles in our newspapers and in such widely read periodicals as Today, Current History, The American Mercury and Collier's.

Where one notices a difference of opinion among Catholics as well as non-Catholics is in the method of approaching the difficult problem. Regardless of the question as to which of the methods—the direct or the indirect—is the more advisable, there can be be little doubt as to the sincerity of those who are sufficiently interested to select one of the ways and to work toward a solution of the problem that so intimately affects Mexico's friends and neighbors north of the Rio Grande. Obviously, one's choice of method depends largely on circumstances more or less beyond one's control.

THE direct method connotes direct action: viz., creation of public opinion by propaganda, individual as well as corporate expression of justified indignation, legal and orderly presentation of resolutions to our Government leaders, and advocacy of Government action in the shape of either a formal protest or of an officially instituted investigation. There is nothing objectionable, either historically or otherwise, in this method of approach. It has certainly been pursued before and by pursuing it now one is fully within one's rights. It occupies itself primarily with current events and with the actual state of affairs.

The indirect method connotes indirect approach. It aims at a scientific study of the tenability of the charges which, since the winning of independence in 1821, have been hurled against the Catholic Church in Mexico by successive government groups and upon which also the present persecution—for such it really is—depends for justification. This indirect approach deals specifically with Mexico's historic past and endeavors to show that, from the standpoint of history, the position of the Mexican government today is scientifically untenable. Those who advocate and pursue this method believe that by refuting the charges one necessarily undermines the justification of the policy that rests on them. Naturally, the indirect method is more remotely, but perhaps for that reason also more lastingly, effective. On the basis of a scientific investigation of Mexico's past it seeks to prepare the way for a permanent solution of the present problem.

• • • •

OBVIOUSLY, limitation of space will permit only a cursory inquiry into some of the more current charges.

1. It is said that a century ago the Catholic Church was opposed to Mexico's independence and for this reason excommunicated leaders like Hidalgo and Morelos. The first part of this charge is answered by Sherwell in his "Simon Bolivar" (page 58, note 1). What he says of South America applies also to Mexico: "The greatest proof that the Church is not to take any blame or praise for whatever happened in the war of independence is that it did not force its dignitaries to take any particular stand. They did as they pleased." As to the second part, whoever knows canon law knows also that the reason for the excommunication of Hidalgo and Morelos was not alone their attitude toward independence. Both were priests and the same would have happened to any priest in their day who would have done what they did, regardless of what they were striving after.

2. The constitution of 1824, some say, proves that the Catholic Church was intolerant of other religious beliefs. It must be remembered, however, that in 1824 the vast majority of Mexicans professed the Catholic faith. Hence there was not the same emphasis on religious toleration as, necessarily, in the United States in 1789, when our Constitution was framed and adopted. As a matter of fact, during the framing of Mexico's 1824 constitution, the question of religious toleration did not come up for discussion. Its framers, for one thing, were convinced that they possessed the one true faith. Besides, out of a population of somewhat less than 8,000,000, there were only a few thousand non-Catholics in Mexico in 1824; while in 1857, as everybody knows, the Catholic Church had nothing to say in the framing of the constitution.

3. Regarding the Spanish Inquisition, fair-minded historians are now conceding that it was not an ecclesiastical but a political institution. What C. E. Chapman, a non-Catholic historian, writes in his "Colonial Hispanic America" (p. 195) is worth quoting. "In spite of governmental precautions, however, revolutionary ideas developed in the Americas. The Inquisition joined with the civilian authorities in attempts to check them; indeed, this was possibly a much more important feature of its work in the eighteenth century than the repression of Protestantism or other heresies, which in fact were never a matter of grave concern in the colonies."

4. The Church was too wealthy, it is charged, and therefore too powerful and influential. Perhaps she was, and certainly she has paid dearly for it since 1857 for the benefit of the so-called "reformers," but with little or no profit to the people. Granting that the Church was wealthy and powerful, the historian seeks to find out what she did with her wealth and power. Though, unfortunately, complete figures are not available, there is enough evidence at hand to show that in colonial times, and later, the wealthy and powerful Church was far more honestly and effectively interested in the welfare of Mexico and its people than the Church's despoilers after 1857.

5. But the Church, it is said, was in politics. Of course she was, and she had both a right and a duty to be, if by being in politics means using position and influence for a strong and orderly government against selfishly scheming politicians and peace-disturbing militarists, persistently preaching submission to and support of legally constituted authority against usurpers of government and fomenters of rebellion, advocating law-observance and mutual cooperation toward the common good, urging and promoting the exercise of justice, fostering and practicing the works of charity. In a word, teaching and emphasizing those civic virtues that make for public peace and national stability. On this score, most assuredly, the Church has nothing to fear from a scientific historical investigation.

6. During the long regime of Diaz (1876-1880 and 1884-1911), we hear it said, the Church neglected to solve the social problems that confronted the nation. This charge can apply, of course, only to the period after 1857; had the Church neglected these problems before 1857, she would not have been attacked by the "liberal reformers." But let us not forget the condition the Church was in after 1857. No one can be up and doing, enthusiastically and effectively, if one is bound hand and foot with all sorts of legal impediments and petty restrictions. During the last decade or so of the Diaz regime, after the rigidity of the anticlerical laws was unofficially lessened for the good of the nation and the Church was freer to act on behalf of the public weal, her interest was almost immediately centered on the many social problems of Mexico. Witness the three Mexican Catholic Congresses which were held between 1896 and 1906 and the extensive programs of social reform whose full fruition was unfortunately prevented by the revolution of 1910.

• • • •

TO TAKE up and study charges of this kind—and there are more than the ones here cited—and to show on the basis of sound historical scholarship what truth there is really in them and with what justice they are leveled against the Church, this is the method of procedure advocated and pursued by those who are endeavoring to approach the present problem indirectly. It is to be hoped that the indirect method will attract more followers in the future, so that historical scholarship, both in the United States and in Mexico, will gradually lay the foundations of a scientific and effective knowledge of Mexico's past.

It seems almost self-evident that, in order to understand the present situation in Mexico, with its many ramifications, we must go back to the year 1814, when the religious troubles really began; and that, in order to understand the history of independent Mexico between 1814 and 1935, it is necessary to know and take into account the preceding three centuries of Mexico's colonial history, in the light of which the religious troubles since 1814 can be easily explained and the charges against the Church quite adequately refuted. The better we know the colonial era of Mexico, the better will we understand the independence era; and thus fortified, we will be equipped to estimate the present problems and to work irresistibly toward a lasting solution of them. History, it would seem, supplying facts and figures that can not be denied, is even in a crisis like the present one a powerful weapon, and will go a long way toward the reestablishment of political stability and social tranquillity.

Airplanes Come of Age

WHEN Grover Loening was a little boy in 1908 he had his first sight of an airplane. One of those rickety and complicated biplanes in which the pilot sat on a bicycle seat out over space. It stood on the Morris Park race track among a crowd of enthusiasts. The inventor—about to fly it—and his mechanics fussed over the contraption, wheedled the stubborn propeller, spouted with technical talk of "induction coil" and "gas tank pressure." Suddenly the engine started. The inventor piled into the seat, "willing hands held the shaking plane at all available edges, the propeller was whirling up dust and blowing it every way, strident voices yelled to clear the track ahead, the inventor fastened his goggles, held his hand in the air, set his face grimly, and dropped his hand as a signal to 'let go'—and the plane slowly and deliberately backed up into the fence and crushed its tail!"

Young Loening's shock at such a silly mistake as their putting the propeller on backwards, and no one noticing it, was probably, he says, the root of his particular interest in aviation. From that grew the career of one of the most distinguished aeronautical engineers of the country—assistant of Orville Wright, designer of the Loening amphibian and manufacturer of world-record planes.

And in "Our Wings Grow Faster" (Doubleday, Doran, $3.75), Mr. Loening tells a crackajack story of aviation, from the days of the crude "fence-hoppers" to the present with its 180-mile-an-hour transports and its 440-mile-an-hour speed planes. I myself have no aviation bug at all, and yet I enjoyed the book from cover to cover with that constant huzzah-feeling inside which is due a grand tale superbly told.

YOU get the impression from these pages: how on earth did the idolators of airplanes ever hang to it and bring them out of their primeval puddles? Look back to 1909, when Bleriot flew the English Channel (one, with the first Wright flight and Lindbergh's, of the three great flights of the world, says Mr. Loening), when Curtiss won the Gordon Bennett Speed Trophy with the achievement of 47 miles an hour, when Latham gained the world's altitude record of 508 feet, when Farman hung up the long-distance title with a nonstop flight of 178 miles! Five years later airplanes were killing men at a rate which only our nice little domestic holacaust of automobile murder could put to blush—when Mr. Loening arrived, in 1914, as the engineer consultant at the Army field in San Diego, for example, he found that out of 14 pilots already licensed 8 had been killed. And what was the reason? They were "stalling" in the air. Modern aviators will be astonished to learn that up to the outbreak of the war the fact was completely unknown that the way to come out of a "stall" is to put the plane into a "dive." Orville Wright found that out—a point which should gain him almost as much honor, I think, as his first flight.

Yet, the surviving aviators hung on. The designers did all they could to clear up the bad points. Largely it was a matter of progress in engines—in 1911 the Antoinette people in France had a cantilever, low-wing, stream-line landing-gear plane, exactly similar in concept to the very successful Northrup and Douglas cantilever monoplane of 1934, but where the Antoinette was trying to work on a 90 horsepower engine, the Northrup uses 700 horsepower. And despite motor failures and clumsy struts and gas-line trouble and lack of stream-lining and all the other adverse factors which are so easy to see in retrospect, and with professional stoicism over its fatalities, aviation grew up and came of age.

And nothing else did it, says Mr. Loening, but "individualism"—"the magic development of aviation to date is the outstanding example of an industry based on . . . the vision, the initiative, the personal ambition of a Wright or a Lindbergh or a Sikorsky or a Sperry." Could one have had that success by taking orders from a board of regimentation? No, cries Mr. Loening with heat—because "a board is long, narrow, and wooden, and you can not create or inspire talent by order of a commanding officer."

• • • •

IF you catch the fine air of frankness in Mr. Loening's remarks you will enjoy his outspoken account of such things as the bitter Wright-Curtiss rivalry, the fiasco of our first year of wartime airplane construction (close to $640,000,000 spent, and not one American-made war plane flown even in this country), his own Newport-New York Airline, which failed in 1923 because a passenger slouched back in his seat, got his foot caught in the controls and caused a crash, and the Langley-Wright controversy, which has resulted in the world's first airplane being in England.

And here I haven't mentioned the dozens of splendid illustrations, one on nearly every page, from the picture of the world's first flying boat (designed by Mr. Loening) to the great four-engined Sikorsky Clipper; from Grover C. Bergdoll (a leading sportsman aviator in 1913) to the three officers of the N. C. 3 before and after their forced landing near the Azores (which will show you "before and after" with a vengeance).

A lively, self-respecting and continually interesting book. If you have wing-dope in your blood, you mustn't miss it. If, like the darky, you say "Ol' terra firma fo' me, and the mo' firma, the less terra," come and take an inoculation of sweet spirits of flight.

The Pole Flights

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

TODAY, May 9, is the anniversary of the first flight over the North Pole.

Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd was born in Virginia October 25, 1888, when I had the pleasure of presenting him for an honorary degree of Yale University. I pronounced his middle name with the E long, as in Eve. He was kind enough to tell me afterward that he was pleased to hear it correctly pronounced. As a matter of fact, I remembered that a President of the United States had mispronounced it, hence I took pains to get it right.

• • • •

Admiral Byrd's mother named her three sons Tom, Dick and Harry; they all did honor to the great family name. Dick traveled alone entirely around the world when he was 12 years old; then after studying at the University of Virginia, he went to Annapolis and was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1912.

In 1917 he left the water for the air, and on May 9, 1926, with Floyd Bennett as pilot, he flew from Spitzbergen over and around the North Pole, and covering 1,360 miles in 15 hours, returned to the base.

• • • •

At the end of June, 1927, with three companions, he flew in 42 hours, covering 4,200 miles, from New York to France.

November 29, 1929, with three companions, he flew over the South Pole, being in the air about 19 hours.

Thus Byrd is the first man to have flown over both the North and South Poles.

Each of the two planes which he used for the poles was bought and equipped by Edsel Ford.

Admiral Byrd is a born leader, and is remarkably successful in commanding companies of men in difficult adventures; and like most courageous commanders, is simple and unaffected in manner.

Vienna Cathedral May Get Back Priceless Art Treasures

Creations Scorned by Sophisticates to Be Replaced in City.

By the United Press.

Vienna.—Vienna's venerable and proud Cathedral of St. Stephen soon will recover priceless treasures of which it has been deprived for two centuries, it present plans materialize.

Beautiful Gothic stained glass windows from the fourteenth century, when this art was at a height never attained again, will be put back into their original places from where they have been banned for 200 years, according to a project sponsored by Cardinal Theodor Innitzer, Viennas' Archbishop.

In the early eighteenth century, when a sophisticated society disdainfully looked down upon medieval art and snobbishly labeled as "crude and clumsy" the creations of early masters, Gothic altars and many other objects which so perfectly matched the austere lines of the building were removed from the cathedral and replaced by gorgeous gilded baroque.

What was left of the ancient stained windows — and in Vienna there were at that time more than in most other cities—were cast away with a shrug of the shoulders. Only a few windows in the choir were spared, probably because the "beautifiers" reasoned that they would be concealed by the huge new baroque altar.

A few of the eliminated windows escaped destruction. Among these were the windows of the "Chapel of the Dukes," which was added to the church by the Dukes Leopold III and Albracht III after their reconciliation in 1379. These windows represented portraits of the earlier dukes. And this apparently was the only reason why they were preserved and why they later found their way into various Austrian museums.

The chapel, a highly interesting structure with particularly beautiful carved keystones, has been used for many decades as a lumber room and has been inacessible to visitors.

Cardinal Innitzer plans to restore it to its original aspect. When the windows, of which all but one have been traced, are reinstalled the chapel will be one of the few in Europe to give the true atmosphere of a medieval Christian sanctuary.

Bloc Proposed For the South At G.O.P. Rally

Suggestion Made in Georgi Along With Prediction of Democratic Split.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, May 8.—Predicting a wide Democratic split in the South next year, Republicans of this section had before them today a suggestion for a solid party bloc to preserve their national convention voting strength.

They frowned on suggestions of young Western Republicans that the South should be stripped of its delegate power in the national party councils because this section ordinarily lines up solidly at the polls for the Democrats.

"This is hardly the time to worry about delegate strength," said Osro Cobb, Arkansas Republican State chairman. "It is apparent that in 1936 the Democratic vote will be widely split in the South."

The plan for a solid Southern party front to fight any attempt to cut down the convention voting strength came from William J. Howey, Florida party chieftain.

"A caucus placing a solid Southern delegation behind the candidate would serve the same end the young men are seeking," he said. Howey thought the unity of Southern delegates at the convention would prevent "horse trading and remove the implication of 'carpet bagging' which has sometimes characterized performances of small Southern delegations of the past."

Josiah T. Rose, Republican chairman in Georgia, said:

"I consider it utterly unthinkable."

At the Republican Chicago convention in 1932, the South was given an increase of 47 votes because Herbert Hoover in 1928 carried four States in this section that had been Democratic since reconstruction days. Whether the South will lose its 47 "bonus votes" is a matter which has not been decided.

Morgue Clerk Freed In Disorderly Case

Disorderly conduct charges against J. Bradford McCoy, chief clerk of the District Morgue, were dismissed in Police Court yesterday after Judge Gus A. Schuldt described the alleged offense as a "tempest in a teapot."

McCoy testified he was "humiliated and manhandled" by Policeman A. C. Poulsen, attached to administration headquarters. The Morgue official said he was parking his automobile near the District Building when Poulsen shouted at him.

An argument followed and McCoy declared the policeman grabbed him, twisted his arm and shoved him to a patrol box. Poulsen said McCoy cursed him, but nearly half a dozen District Building employes appeared to testify otherwise.

Roosevelt to End 'Suppression' Of Business Council Criticism

Protests About Statement on Chamber Brings Plan for Publicity.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

After members of the Business Advisory Council protested against apparent suppression by the White House of some of its reports in New Deal measures, President Roosevelt yesterday agreed to their publication after the Administration had an opportunity to discuss any recommendations or criticisms made by the council.

Under the plan proposed by the President and accepted by Henry P. Kendall, chairman of the council, the Administration will be in a position prior to publication of the reports either to persuade the council's committees to withdraw their criticisms or to adopt the committee's recommendations.

The President urged such a plan as a constructive step in achieving as nearly as possible harmony between the Administration and the business world on major questions affecting the latter. The council has prepared six or seven reports, some of them said to be sharply critical of features of tre New Deal program.

Reports Withheld.

None of the critical reports has been made public by the White House. Instead, the White House last Thursday released the Council's report approving of the NRA and urging its extension for two years. This was done the same day the United States Chamber of Commerce adopted resolutions flaying the NRA as well as other New Deal measures.

The President was regarded as setting up the council, comprised of outstanding industrialists, including Henry I. Harriman, retiring president of the Chamber of Commerce, as a buffer against the Chamber of Commerce and as demonstrating that the chamber's denunciation of his policies did not represent the entire business world.

Some of the members of the council were embarrassed by this action. Several privately expressed resentment that they should be used in such a manner. While the group as a whole is heartily in favor of supporting the President in his fight on the depression and in the main agree with his efforts, it was authoritatively explained, the majority of the council does not favor everything Mr. Roosevelt has proposed.

Kendall Sees Roosevelt.

These members of the council could not understand why the NRA report should have been singled out for publication and why reports containing criticism should have been withheld. They were especially perplexed because the day previous to their visit to the President a week ago, the group adopted a resolution providing that the reports should be sent to the congressional committees dealing with the respective questions considered.

Kendall called on the President yesterday to discuss with him the publication of the council's reports. He was closeted with the President for almost two hours. What occurred between them was not revealed. But it is believed that Mr. Kendall urged that all the reports be published and that the President agreed, but contended that in order to achieve a constructive purpose the Administration should be enabled to examine and discuss such reports before their publication.

When he emerged from the President's office, Kendall revealed that it had been agreed that the chairman of the committee of the council preparing each report should take up the report with the interested parties. The latter were defined as those Administration officials principally concerned with each measure.

Seek Opposite Viewpoints.

Thus the report on the social security bill would be discussed by the chairman of the committee which prepared a report on that subject with Secretary of Labor Perkins. The chairman of the committee which prepared a report on the Eccles banking bill would take that question up with Governor Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board and other banking and financial officers of the Administration.

It is understood that in these meetings of the committee chairmen and the Administration officials, the purpose will be for each to understand the viewpoint of the other. Thus it may be found that the council committee's criticisms were based on a misunderstanding of the purposes of proposed legislation. On the other hand, the criticism may be found to be sound and agreement may be reached that changes should be made in the legislation.

When the conferences end, participants will proceed to the White House with Kendall, for a discussion of the report with the President. After that procedure the President is willing for the reports to be given out for publication by the council.

When the reports are published, a statement will be attached to them, explaining whether the recommendations meet with the President's approval. Kendall agreed to this plan of procedure on the ground that it was both "fair and constructive."

The council has prepared reports on every major question now pending before Congress. These subjects include, in addition to NRA and social security, the Eccles banking bill, the publicity utility holding company bill, the Wagner labor bill, the Black 30-hour week bill and the cotton textile situation.

Powell at White House.

While the council approves the social security bill in principle, it pointed serious objections to some of the provisions of the pending measure. Likewise it does not approve the utility holding company measure. It is understood to have strongly opposed the Wagner labor and 30-hour week bills.

Earlier in the day the President received F. E. Powell, president of the American Chamber of Commerce in London, and thanked him for defending the Administration before the Chamber of Commerce convention last week. Powell criticized the chamber for failure to co-operate with the Administration.

Leaving the White House, Powell said he believed "there is a very strong element in the Chamber of Commerce that would support Administration policies if they could only make their voices articulate."

"It may be difficult to do that," he asserted, "but that is my deliberate judgment after conferring with a number of delegates. I do not believe the chamber is antagonistic at all."

Married Men Veto Bill Against Balm

By the Associated Press.

Lincoln, Nebr., May 8.—Five married men and a bachelor, a majority of the Nebraska Senate's judiciary committee, today vetoed the anti-heart balm bill of Mrs. Marjorie J. Stark, Norfolk legislator, which passed the House of Representatives.

Disregarding Mrs. Stark's plea that "an itching palm belies an aching heart," the committee voted, 6 to 2, against the bill.

Senator Arthur L. Neumann, wealthy banker-bachelor, however, immediately announced his intention to ask the Senate to override the committee.

"Well, I'll be darned," said Mrs. Stark, the only married woman in the Legislature, when informed the committee had postponed her bill indefinitely.

She pushed the bill through the House Monday by a 56-to-27 ballot, after she had forced the sergeant at arms to bring the bachelor members of the House back into the chamber to vote.

3 Keep Blue Eagles By Injunction Method

Injunctions restraining the National Recovery Administration from removing the Blue Eagle of three concerns were issued by District Supreme Court Justice James M. Proctor yesterday.

The suits were filed by the Sibley Manufacturing Co., and the Enterprise Manufacturing Co., both of Augusta, Ga., and the Berger Manufacturing Co., of Canton, Ohio. All three charged the National Labor Relations Board with interference in internecine labor disputes. The petitions showed the complainants had attempted to comply with the collective bargaining clause of the NRA, but had met with obstacles thrown into the debates by the labor board.

A DEDICATION

Warner Bros. take this occasion to dedicate this picture officially to the men whose daring and devotion halted America's March of Crime...to acknowledge publicly their debt of gratitude to the fearless Federal Agents whose heroic exploits and inspiration made this picture possible.

Miss Louella Parsons has called "G-Men" "a grand tribute to the Department of Justice." We hope it is that—and something more.

For Warner Bros. have consistently demonstrated their belief that the screen is not merely a medium of entertainment. It is an institution significant socially and responsible morally. Its obligation is to inform, to interpret, to lead, and—most important of all—to establish an enduring record of our forward marching civilization.

We believe that "G-Men" fulfills, as few pictures have before, that end and those purposes. Its importance as an exciting new entertainment is dwarfed by its significance in the scheme of humanity's affairs—right here in America—at this very hour.

Other pictures have glorified fabled figures of the past. But Warner Bros. have chosen to celebrate the heroes of the present—to create a graphic and enduring record of that stirring chapter in American history written by Uncle Sam's stalwart Legion of the Law—the

Labor Holiday Called to Back Illinois Strike

Use of Outside Workers Protested by 3,000 in Stove Plants.

By the Associated Press.

Belleville, Ill., May 8.—Industrial activitiy neared a standstill here tonight as organized labor took a holiday to protest against the hiring of new men by the Illinois Power & Light Co. to replace its striking workers.

Twelve stove plants, the city's major industry, and several other manufacturing establishments were forced to close their doors as union workers walked away from their jobs. An unofficial estimate said more than 3,000 men were participating in the holiday called by the Central Trades and Labor Union.

Al Towers, secretary of the labor union, said the action was to protest against "the hiring of armed guards and strike breakers" by the power company. "Untold trouble is in sight if these guards remain in St. Clair County," he declared, insisting armed men had been brought in from other States to protect the new employes.

The power company hired outside electrical workers to replace strikers after the Illinois utilities commission issued an order that it restore service immediately. Unable to get the strikers to return to work, the company employed new men, and special deputy sheriffs were appointed to protect them.

The general labor holiday began this morning when 2,000 stove plant workers left their posts. They were followed by another 1,000 men from clothing and shoe plants and gas workers from the power company who were not involved in the previous strike. William Adrian, a striking gas worker, estimated gas on hand would last only two days.

As the gas workers walked out a crowd of nearly 3,000 men gathered at the power plant, and, although they made no demonstrations, virtually made employes prisoners inside the company's buildings. Union leaders did not indicate how long the holiday would be in force.

Hagerstown Jails Man Wanted in Check Case

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 8.—A report received from the Department of Justice, Washington, indicated that a man held in the Washington County Jail here under the name of Russell A. Goff, has served prison sentences in several Federal institutions and State prisons.

Detainers were placed against Goff by Frederick County authorities, who sought him on charges of cashing stolen Potomac Edison Co. checks at a Frederick bank on March 29.

Inspected Sites for 5 CCC Camps.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 8.—Army officers of the Third Corps Area, Baltimore, with District Forester H. C. Buckingham, inspected sites for five new Civilian Conservation camps in Garrett County yesterday. The camps will be opened June 1 when five CCC companies will be sent here to work on a program of reforestation. They will be located in State forests. This will make 12 companies stationed in Allegany and Garrett counties.

Silver Spring Lions to House Homeless Widow, 8 Children

Club Will Replace 2 Tents Destroyed by Fire and Provide Help.

A widow and eight children made homeless two weeks ago when fire destroyed two of three canvas shelters in which they lived near Silver Spring, Md., for the last two years, will be provided with two new tents by the Silver Spring Lions Club as a result of action taken by the club.

The widow, Mrs. Grace Myles, has succeeded in maintaining a home in the scanty shelter of the three tents during two of the coldest winters of the past 20 years. The Lions Club assisted the family with food and clothing and the brood was comfortably situated in its back-to-Nature environment until most of the shelter was burned. Since that time the entire family of nine has lived in a small tent, notwithstanding heavy rainfall during the past week.

The decision to purchase the tents and provide additional assistance was reached at a ladies' night meeting in the Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church.

A feature of the meeting was a lecture on India by Stanley J. Kapa, of Washington, who formerly was an engineer in the Orient. A musical program was given by Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Randall. Nicholas A. Dunaev, former Mayor of Hollywood, was a guest at the meeting.

Squirrel, Crows Fight Over Tree of Gifts

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., May 8.—Maple trees, as a general rule, do not produce nuts, but a battle royal is going on here for possession of such a tree just the same.

For two years, Dr. and Mrs. Alonzo L. Sterling have been placing nuts in and around the tree for the special benefit of a squirrel which had become a family pet. The fact that the squirrel found pecans, walnuts and other varieties "growing" on the tree failed to arouse any suspicion on its part.

But, last week a large crow appeared on the scene to contest with the squirrel the right to the tree. Neither contestant has received a decision as yet.

Resolutions Honor Late Justice Digges

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Prince Frederick, Md., May 8.—At the afternoon session of the May term of the Circuit Court for Calvert County, which convened here Monday, a meeting of the Prince Frederick Bar was held in the courtroom for the purpose of offering resolutions commemorative of the late Chief Judge Walter Mitchell Digges, of the Seventh Judicial Circuit of Maryland. The resolutions were offered by a committee composed of John B. Gray, Arthur W. Dowell and Benjamin Hance, appointed at the November term, 1934, of the circuit court.

Gray, as chairman of the committee, presented the resolutions, and made a short address. Addresses also were made by J. Briscoe Bunting and J. Frank Parran. The court, represented by Chief Judge Walter Mitchell, successor to the late Judge Digges, and Associate Judge William Neverall Locker, each made appropriate addresses in accepting the resolutions.

Illinois House Presses Bills To Help Needy

Threat of New March on Capital Spurs Drive for $3,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., May 8.—The eyes of Illinois' 1,200,000 unemployed turned to Springfield today as the House of Representatives assembled for a final vote on bills designed to end the protracted relief crisis.

Administration leaders, picturing chaotic conditions as the alternative, sought to marshal 102 votes to enact the measures on an emergency basis and make them immediately effective.

They had been unable to muster this strength in two previous tests, but were confident they could push them to adoption by a simple majority of 77. This would make them effective July 1.

Could Reorganize Quickly.

The bills would raise $3,000,000 a month as the State's contribution to relief costs by increasing the sales tax from 2 to 3 per cent and extending the levy to all public utilities with electricity sold for industrial purposes or resale excepted.

Harry Hopkins, FERA administrator, has demanded that the State underwrite its share of the relief burden before he would resume Federal grants. Legislative delay resulted in the State being dropped from Government allotment lists April 30. Breakdown of the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission and suspension of aid to most of the needy were the consequences.

Officials stated they could revive the relief organization in 24 hours and promised fresh supplies of food for empty larders if the measures were adopted as emergency legislation.

91 Counties Out of Cash.

There was only confused conjecture as to what would happen if the State's appropriation were not available until July. Hopkins has insisted on an immediate advance but Washington dispatches reported today he was considering releasing money up to July 1 if the Legislature made funds available after that date.

The Senate has already adopted the bills but would have to concur in House amendments.

The IERC announced the roster of counties without commission supplied funds grew to 91 today.

A threat of a new march upon the State capital by disgruntled relief clients and further organized protests hung over the legislators as they met in the crucial sessions.

Rule Asked on Demand For Larger Allowance

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 8.—Members of Berkeley County Court have asked State authorities for a ruling on a demand from J. C. Ellis, member of the court, that he be paid $100 a month, which was the allowance when he became a member of the court five years ago, instead of the $30 which was set as the figure a year ago when the State took away a considerable proportion of the county court's work by assuming maintenance of rural highways.

The other members of the court asked Prosecuting Attorney Herbert E. Hannis to submit the question.

WHY AMERICA PREFERS BUDWEISER . . .

Its age-old TASTE is found only in Budweiser

Hundreds of years ago, an ancient monastery in Budweis, Bohemia, brewed a beer of such distinctive and exquisite taste that connoisseurs pronounced it the finest in all the world. Its taste was slightly tart with a delicious, unforgettable tang. Those who drank this beer never tired of it.

Sixty years ago, Anheuser-Busch obtained from the Bohemian monks their age-old formula. And so BUDWEISER came to America. Its popularity swept the country and then the world. The demand for BUDWEISER built the world's largest brewery.

Refinements of method and facilities, yes,—but the ancient formula of BUDWEISER remains unchanged. And so today, as of yesterday, BUDWEISER holds an unmatched record—the biggest-selling bottled beer in history. Its distinctive, age-old taste makes it so.

Outstanding reasons why BUDWEISER is the most famous beer in the world

1. Its distinctive taste and delightful tang have made it America's first choice for three generations.
2. Its quality has made it the biggest selling bottled beer in history and built the largest brewery in the world.
3. Brewed by the same formula since 1876—always uniform—everywhere.
4. Not artificially carbonated—BUDWEISER is twice fermented for natural carbonation and sparkle.
5. Brewed from the cream of the barley crop and the choicest selection of domestic and imported Bohemian hops.
6. One Brewery that makes its own Malt—Anheuser-Busch never buys it from outside sources.
7. Pioneers in pasteurization of bottled beer—every bottle sterilized.

U. S. Witnesses In Liquor Trial Tell of Traffic

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 8.—The Government put a string of witnesses on the stand in Federal District Court here today to tell of large quantities of liquor hauled out of Franklin County and the failure of local officers to break up the traffic.

Most of the witnesses admitted they were former liquor runners as they testified in the trial of 23 persons accused of conspiracy to evade federal liquor taxes.

New Hauls Revealed.

Before adjournment on the thirteenth day of the trial more than 100,000 gallons of liquor had been added to the total reported transported, most of it to Roanoke. A witness—the eighty-third of more than 175 the Government may call—was telling about hauling the product of unlicensed stills to "concentration" points in the county when the session ended.

George Barbour, the last witness, said he had trucked as much as 300 gallons through Rocky Mount, the county seat, in broad daylight. He stated much of the 93,600 gallons of liquor it was estimated James B. Kelley, of Roanoke, had transported came through Rocky Mount. Occasionally whole caravans, bumper to bumper before they entered, shot through the streets of the county seat, first separating "a half-block apart," Barbour said.

Tells of "Frame-Up."

Elliott said White, one of the defendants, once brought him back to Roanoke after Elliott himself had assisted in "framing" a bootlegger on the Windy Gap road.

Jack Bess, another defendant, was implicated by Kelley in the liquor traffic. Barbour named six of the defendants—Walter (Peg) Hatcher, T. Roosevelt Smith, C. O. (Cap) Griffith, Herman Shiveley, Clifford Martin and David A. Nicholson—among those for whom he hauled liquor from "the mountains" or from their homes to Burnt Chimney. Nicholson is a former Virginia Assemblyman.

Industry 'Plows' Labor Under, Wallace Charges

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—Industry was accused today by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace of a "plowing under" program to the detriment of workers.

Speaking before a class at Northwestern University, he asserted:

"During the last four years, industry has plowed factory space under and workers into the streets. Industry is 1,000 times more wicked than agriculture. Industry stopped producing things for which there was a market at home. Agriculture only stopped producing things for which the foreign market had failed on account of the tariff."

Reynolds Divorcee Ridicules Smith at Alienation Hearing

Cannon Heiress Denies Father Influenced Second Divorce.

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, N. C., May 8.—Anne Cannon Reynolds Smith asserted in court today the only reason she married F. Brandon Smith, jr., was "to get a home" and denied her father influenced her decision to divorce him.

She was testifying in defense of her father, Joseph F. Cannon, Concord millionaire, in the $250,000 alienation of affections suit brought against him by her former husband.

Adding her own bit to wise-cracks which have featured the trial, the young textile heiress with a broad smile told the jury:

"Brandon was dumb and I was dumb for living with him."

As the laughter in the courtroom died down under the rapping gavel of Judge W. F. Harding, who had warned that he wasn't going to have "my courtroom turned into a vaudeville," she added:

"The only reason I married him was to get a home."

The witness was asked if Smith had been kind to her.

"Too kind," she answered.

Anne and Smith were married in 1932, a few months after her divorce from the late Smith Reynolds, of the Winston-Salem tobacco family. In May, 1934, she secured a divorce in Hot Springs, Ark.

Before Anne took the stand, her father spent 2½ hours in the witness chair, during which he admitted numerous wild escapades on his part during the time of his daughter's married life with Smith—the period to which questioning of him as to his character was limited by Judge W. F. Harding.

'Inflated' Man Near Recovery, Doctor's View

Rare Case Diagnosed as 'Emphysema,' Caused by Lung Injury.

By the Associated Press.

Anniston, Ala., May 8.—Physicians tonight watched J. R. Ragsdale, 35-year-old ice trucker, ready to puncture him if necessary to relieve pain as he reinflated in his left side from an injured lung.

"He is progressing nicely," his attending physician said, "and should recover unless complications develop.

"Unless the 'inflation' continues until it impedes blood circulation in the skin, we do not plan to puncture at an early date.

"Barring complications, the lung puncture will heal, shutting off the air now going into the tissues."

Ragsdale's temperature was almost normal, but his respiration was slightly accelerated. Sedatives were being administered.

The patient was strapped tightly with adhesive tape when it was discovered he was becoming "inflated."

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

New York, May 8.

Dawn Patrol

YOU don't generally associate gypsies with such a city as this New York of ours. It is more in keeping with the gypsy background to think of them roving the woods and vales of the countryside. Yet Detective Jack Sheehan, known in the New York Police Department as "King of the Gypsies," because he works exclusively on them, tells me that there are approximately 10,000 gypsies in the five boroughs. "It is the gypsy legend that each of them must steal," explains the white-haired Sheehan, who looks a great deal like George M. Cohan. "I've talked to hundreds of them, asking them why most of them were thieves, and each one of them has given me the same answer. According to them, there were four nails set aside for the Crucifixion, one to pierce each hand, one to pierce the feet and another nail to pierce the heart of the Son of God. The gypsies say that it was a gypsy who stole the fourth nail, and from that time on, they were cursed and forced to steal. They believe this firmly, and they will show you pictures of the Crucifixion to demonstrate that only three nails were used. Yet gypsies never commit a violent crime, such as murder."

• • • •

The 10,000 gypsies in New York, Sheehan tells me, are divided into four broad groups. First and most important is the Much-Twier group. These are the Serbian gypsies, and the cleverest of all their light-fingered colleagues. Ranking next to them are the Kalderish group, made up of Serbians and Argentine gypsies, the greatest pickpockets of the gypsy kingdoms. The third group is the Boy-ish division, whose women specialize in house-to-house thievery of petty dimensions, and fourth in order are the Russian gypsies, lowest of petty thieves, but greatest of the gypsy musicians and singers.

• • • •

The Much-Twier gypsy groups operate the "handkerchief switch" so expertly that Detective Sheehan estimates that their "take" for the past year in New York City alone has been $150,000. The handkerchief switch plays first upon the superstition of the victim, and secondly upon his greed. First, comes the egg trick. The fortune teller learns that the victim is bothered say, with rheumatism, "All of your pains trace back to an evil hair," says the fortune teller. "Go out in the markets and bring me back a white egg." In the meantime, the gypsies have prepared their own white egg, punctured it with a needle and inserted a long horsehair. The victim returns with his white egg, and while the fortune teller apparently is praying, she switches eggs and tells the victim to break it open. Sure enough, the broken egg reveals the hair. The victim now is awe-struck, as well he might be.

• • • •

This is the first stage of the build-up. Having played upon the victim's superstition, the fortune teller now gets down to brass tacks and plays upon his or her greed. "Give me a $5 bill," says the fortune teller, and receiving it proceeds to wrap it in a handkerchief. "Turn behind you and get me the needle and thread," says the fortune teller, and as the victim turns, the handkerchief switch is effected. The victim hands over the needle and thread, the gypsy sews up a doctored handkerchief and directs the victim to wear it next to his body for 24 hours. "I will go to the cemetery tonight at midnight and talk to the spirits," says the gypsy, "but if you tell anyone that you have this handkerchief, the spirits will avenge themselves. Return tomorrow." The next day the victim is on hand. "Open the handkerchief," says the fortune teller, and to the victim's amazed delight, his money has doubled. Instead of a single $5 bill, during the night another has arrived in the tightly sewn handkerchief.

• • • •

Now the gypsies are ready to strike and strike hard. The victim, his greed and superstition both excited, goes to the bank, extracts his life savings and returns to the fortune teller's store. The same process is gone through, but as the victim turns for the needle and thread, this time the handkerchief switch brings to the chump a handkerchief filled with carefully-cut newspapers. "Come back in six days," says the fortune teller "and tell nobody that you have this magic handkerchief on you, or the spirits will not double your money." When he returns, the gypsies have fled, with a six-day start.

Sheehan, who carries his own rogues' gallery in his pocket, pointed out to me some of the greatest gypsy grand larceny experts. "She got $14,000 from a German baker in Astoria," he'd say, or "she clipped a Bellevue nurse for $8,700 last week." The Much-Twier group, the Serbian gypsies, are not pikers. No wonder they scorn the Russian gypsies, who steal potatoes from stores.

The first question to ask about a 1935 car—

BODY by FISHER?

EVERY few years a really vital and revolutionary advance in motor car design is announced to the public.

When you examine the new solid steel "Turret Top" Body by Fisher, on Chevrolet (Master De Luxe series), Pontiac, Oldsmobile and La Salle closed cars, you'll acknowledge that.

This body not only surrounds you with protective steel—

It puts over your head a solid seamless steel roof—steel braced with steel, arched and formed like the battleship turret from which it takes its name.

This great seamless solid steel top is welded to the steel panels all round—including the windshield pillars—so that the entire body is a super-rigid, shock-proof, weave-proof unit.

The corners of this "Turret Top" are rounded, sphere-like, down to the steel side panels, because sphere construction gives the maximum over-all rigidity and strength.

Safety? The very last word in it!

And the last word in advanced beauty too! Because the "Turret Top" flows fore to aft in one unbroken sweep of streamlined sleekness.

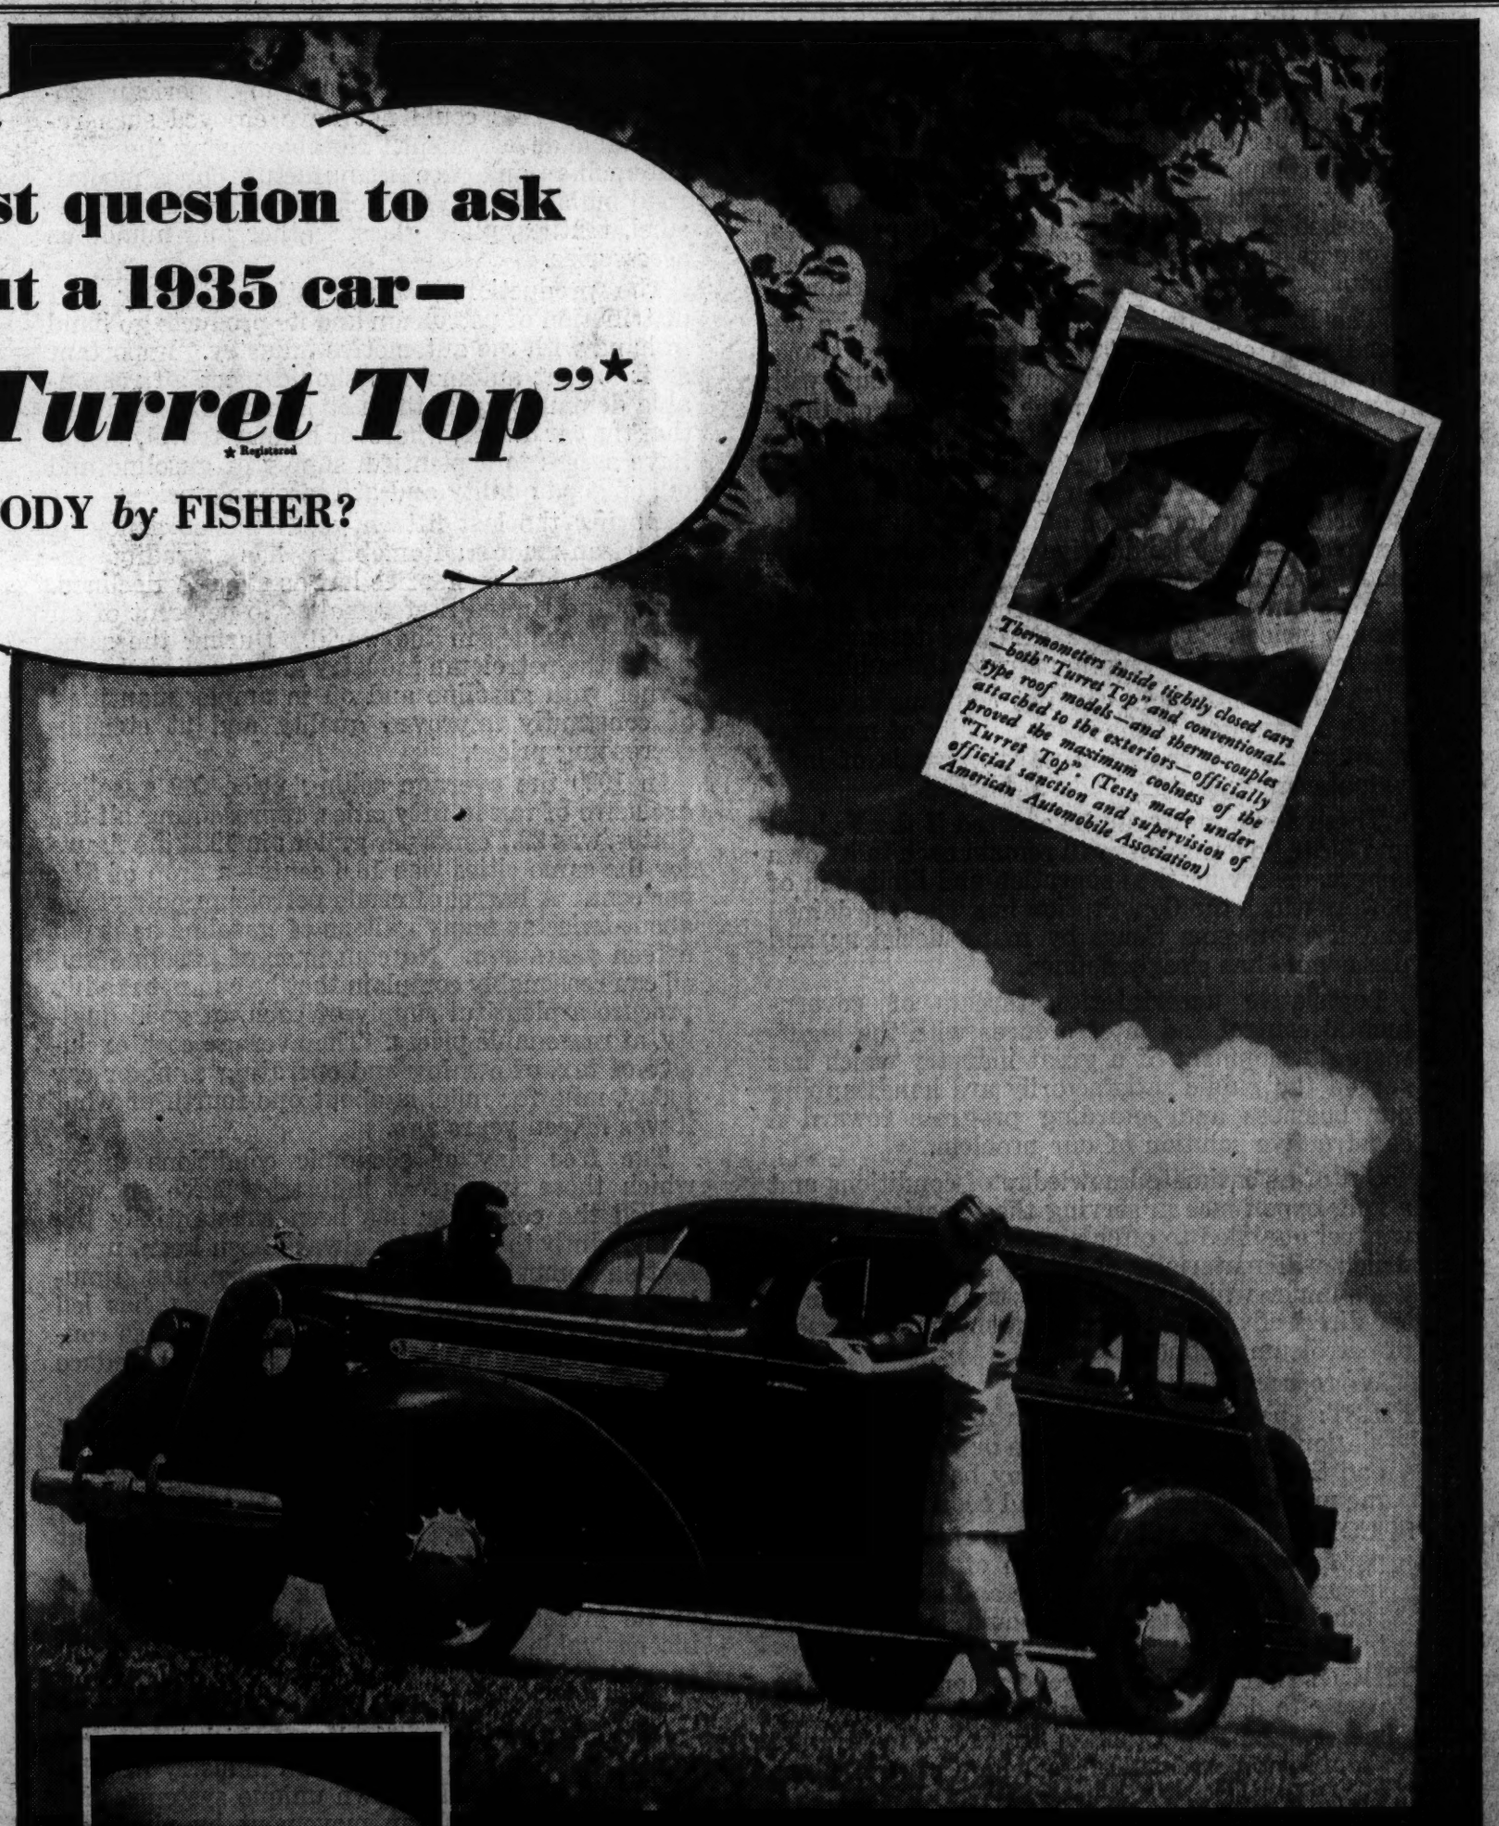
Temperature-resistant insulation, scientifically developed by Fisher engineers, has taken care of that.

We've officially proved it with thermometers in tightly closed cars—both "Turret Top" and "conventional" top models—under the blazing sun of Key West, Florida, and results were officially checked under American Automobile Association supervision.

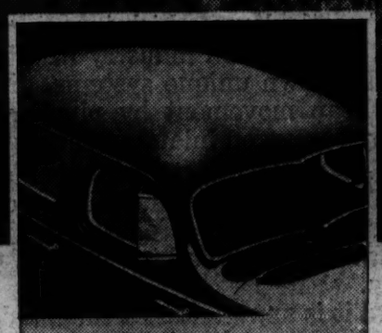
We've also conclusively demonstrated that in roughest going at top speed, these "Turret Top" cars are quieter, more restful, than cars with the conventional roof.

Remember, too, that the solid steel "Turret Top" is as enduring as the car itself. Ends roof leaks for good and all. Puts an end also to the expense of dressing or re-covering the top.

Try out these remarkable new "Turret Top" cars! And when you do so, notice, too, the desirability of that other great contribution to motoring health, comfort and safety, Fisher No Draft Ventilation.



Thermometers inside tightly closed cars—both "Turret Top" and conventional-type roof models—and thermo-couples attached to the exteriors—officially proved the maximum coolness of the "Turret Top". (Tests made under official sanction and supervision of American Automobile Association)



The "Turret Top" body is warm in winter as well as cool in summer. This is due to the highly effective insulating material under the solid steel roof

"The most beautiful thing on wheels" is the tribute which people are paying the new 1935 Pontiac. And the focus of this admiration springs from its smart styling, crowned by the new gracefully contoured solid steel "Turret Top" Body by Fisher, pictured here

A Petition to the Congress of the United States

Submitted by

The American Petroleum Institute

Adopted Unanimously by the Board of Directors in a Meeting at Chicago, Ill., May 3, 1935.

The American Petroleum Institute, with a substantial and representative membership from a twelve-billion-dollar industry, which has more than two million owners and over 1,000,000 employees, respectfully petitions Congress to pursue policies which will permit this industry to take its rightful place in the march of recovery.

The Institute asks this with full appreciation of the earnest endeavors which have been made by the Federal authorities, in the past two years, to speed recovery. These efforts the petroleum industry has generously supported, recognizing that in a time of such emergency it had a patriotic obligation to co-operate in bringing about re-employment and restoring the country's purchasing power. Its annual pay roll, approximating $1,569,600,000, is practically equal to the 1929 pay roll and in real wages it is 7.2 per cent higher. In fact the per capita yearly wage paid by most of the oil companies has always ranked high in industry. In the past two years the industry reabsorbed 217,200 persons. Taxes on its properties, products and operation contribute $1,250,000,000 annually toward the maintenance of government.

The Institute believes that the people who depend upon our 24,600,000 automobiles for transportation, the farmers who cultivate the land with tractor-drawn equipment, the operators of thousands of industrial plants and the many other users of petroleum products are best served when competition is free, when the operation of economic law is unhampered and when the profit incentive stimulates initiative and inspires invention. The free operation of these forces inevitably tends to insure quantity, improve quality and to reduce prices. These are the true tests of the service rendered by any industry to the public.

Gasoline consumers can not continue to enjoy these advantages if the responsibility of management is transferred from the thousands of individual companies to a Federal bureau.

These advantages can be assured if the Federal and State governments will remain each in its own sphere, observing the separation and limitation of powers which the Constitution has wisely ordained and the Supreme Court by many decisions and precedents has clearly defined.

Legislative uncertainties, threats of governmental control and interferences with the legitimate development of a great industry which has served the public satisfactorily are handicapping our business and retarding progress toward a constructive solution of our problem.

Out of an intimate knowledge of conditions and a long experience in serving the American people we feel qualified to offer a program of principles, which will materially assist in stabilizing conditions under which the oil industry can operate to the direct advantage of both the makers and users of petroleum products.

We respectfully submit:

FIRST: That there should be a minimum of regulation by government, State or Federal, to the end that private industry may be free to serve the public most efficiently and economically.

SECOND: That the State governments, having the power to regulate production of crude oil and natural gas to prevent waste and so conserve a valuable natural resource, should be encouraged in that effort.

THIRD: That the Federal government, having the power to deal with interstate and foreign commerce, and to authorize interstate compacts, should supplement the production control effort of the States:

By making permanent and rigidly enforcing the Connally Law (S. 1190) prohibiting the shipment in interstate and foreign commerce of oil produced in violation of state laws;

By approving the interstate compact which has already been ratified by the legislatures of five of the principal oil producing states;

By directing the U. S. Bureau of Mines, a competent fact-finding agency, to ascertain the crude oil production necessary to meet the consumptive demand of the nation and to make its findings available to the interstate compact commission and the respective conservation authorities of the oil producing states;

By exercising control of imports to a proper ratio to domestic production for such a time as is necessary.

FOURTH: That as concerns marketing, the field of greatest competition, there is no reason to single out the oil industry for special Federal intervention. That industrial pacts and agreements when voluntarily made by any industry for the purpose of eliminating unfair methods of competition should be permitted.

FIFTH: That any such economic straitjacket as is contained in S. 2445 or similar proposals for the enlargement of the N. I. R. A. would serve to increase the price of gasoline and demoralize the industry.

In support of the foregoing we point to the record of the oil industry during the last fifteen years as one of outstanding public service.

But for cheap gasoline many industries which have contributed substantially to American economic progress could not have enjoyed such remarkable development. Notable among these are automobile and tire manufacture and modern road building, with the related industries such as steel, textiles, plate glass, leather and numerous accessories.

The production, transportation, refining and distribution of petroleum and its products go hand in hand with the automotive industry. Important as it is that automobiles should meet all reasonable demands upon them it is equally important that the car owner, wherever he may travel, should have access to a plentiful supply of gasoline and oil, of good quality and at reasonable prices.

During the last fifteen years the efficiency of American-made automobiles has steadily increased, while their price has as steadily declined. Today the United States makes 75 per cent of all the automobiles in the world. During the same period the petroleum industry has supplied the car owner with gasoline and oil in ample quantities, of constantly improved quality and at steadily decreasing prices.

In 1920 the average selling price for gasoline exclusive of tax in fifty cities, representing all the States, was 29.7 cents per gallon; in 1934 the figure for the same cities was 13.6 cents—a drop of 54.2 per cent. A barrel of crude petroleum now yields about twice as many gallons of gasoline as it did fifteen years ago. No consumer of gasoline and oil can reasonably complain that he can not readily procure a plentiful supply of each, of good quality, at reasonable prices. The average cost, exclusive of tax, of owning and operating a motor car today, mile for mile, is about one-fourth of what it was fifteen years ago.

The free play of economic conditions under which these two great industries have so well served the consumer has been substantially the same. In both there has always been keen, unrelenting competition; and this, in turn, has stimulated new discoveries and new methods, has led to the development of new markets and has constantly tended to improve quality and reduce prices.

Because it has grown so fast, the oil industry has constantly needed large amounts of new capital. Its investment increased from $6,350,000,000 in 1921 to $12,200,000,000 in 1932. During these twelve years $2.94 of new capital was put into the industry for every dollar that was earned, and the annual average earning of the oil industry on its investment was only 1.66 per cent. It is inconceivable that political management could operate a fast-growing and hazardous business on so close a margin as this.

In transportation, particularly, which is such an important factor in costs, the oil industry has devised and developed its own unique systems, giving incomparably cheap movement by pipelines, ocean tankers and by barges on inland waterways.

Every resource of science and technology has been enlisted in the search for new supplies of oil in the earth. In fact, the chief offense imputed to the industry is that it has been all too successful in finding new pools.

With such a record it is apparent that the hands of the oil industry should not be tied by governmental bureaucracy. The issue between government and private responsibility for this vast industry should not be obscured by vague declarations that the petroleum industry has become affected with a public interest justifying governmental control just because conservation has come to be recognized as a responsibility of government.

The distinguishing characteristic of petroleum and natural gas is their liquid and fugacious nature. In other mining industries the situation is entirely different; for instance, the owner of coal land is not subject to drainage, for he can keep his coal if he likes and his neighbor cannot take it. But when a well is drilled into an oil-producing area the "law of capture" permits the surface owner to draw the oil from his well even though it may drain the supply of the adjoining land owner. Therefore, the neighbor must drill and produce his share of the oil or lose it; and his neighbor in turn must do likewise . . . This was a situation beyond the power of the industry to remedy, and in all flush pools, before the conservation efforts of the States were effective, the "law of capture" resulted in unscientific and wasteful practices and overproduction. The oil-producing States and the industry itself have now come to an intelligent conception of what real conservation means. The industry believes that true conservation means the scientific control of production, making for greater recovery, as well as efficient and economic utilization of crude oil.

It is the duty of the oil-producing States, in the public interest as well as in the interest of the industry, to prevent waste of crude oil and thereby conserve the supply. This duty is the obligation of government, and when that obligation shall have been discharged, there is nothing in the inherent nature of petroleum or in the conduct of the business which requires or justifies the oil industry being declared a public utility any more than in the case of any other producer or manufacturer of a commodity of general use.

In marketing gasoline, the problems are no different from those in the wholesaling and retailing of other commodities. Whether there are too many filling stations; whether there is waste in the number of retail stores that market clothing, groceries, beverages or the like, is a problem that concerns our economic welfare as a whole and not particularly any one business. It is self-evident that the problems arising out of competition and the operation of economic laws in every hamlet in the country cannot be solved by a bureau at Washington which undertakes to regulate each minute detail of our vast and complicated business structure. There should be no economic tinkering, and no political control.

Unfortunately, governmental agencies, once organized and endowed with some measure of authority, aspire to continue their existence and increase their authority. Any proposal to amend the National Industrial Recovery Act with provisions that convert it from what is theoretically a system of governmentally supervised, industrially self-regulated codes of fair practice, into a system of Federal industrial dictatorship, becomes a striking example of this tendency to encroach.

We have proceeded on the road to recovery sufficiently to consider methods of orderly development of business as a substitute for devices created in moments of national emergency and desperation. The time has come to consider the long-range view of American economic progress.

The oil industry is prepared to do its part, and demonstrate its confidence in itself and in the future of the country, if it can but know clearly that its efforts are not to be checkmated by constant change, bureaucratic dictation or usurpation of power.

Congress has an unparalleled opportunity to aid recovery by a frank recognition of separate fields of Federal and State responsibility under the Constitution.

Respectfully submitted by order of its Board of Directors.

White House Fetes Wives Of Cabinet

First Lady Also Hostess for Luncheon Before Leaving City.

Mrs. Garner Is Among Numerous Guests at the Mansion.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Mrs. Roosevelt received the ladies of the Cabinet yesterday at noon at the White House and later in the afternoon entertained a large group, including the Cabinet ladies, at luncheon. Still later in the afternoon the First Lady left Washington for a week's absence during which time she will be "off the record."

The luncheon table yesterday in the State dining room was gay with a centerpiece of bright red tulips, red and white snapdragons, spiraea and maidenhair fern. The guests included Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President; Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of Treasury; Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, and Miss Frances Perkins, the Secretary of Labor.

There were several wives of United States Senators present including Mrs. Augustine Lonergan, Mrs. Louis Murphy, Mrs. James P. Pope, Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys and Mrs. Carl A. Hatch, and a number of wives of Representatives, including Mrs. Charles A. Eaton, Mrs. Thomas A. Jenkins, Mrs. James M. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. William V. Gregory, Mrs. U. S. Guyer, Mrs. Jed Johnson, Mrs. Malcolm Tarver, Mrs. J. Bayard Clark, Mrs. Wall Doxey, Mrs. Numa F. Montet, Mrs. Ben Cravens and Mrs. Finly H. Grey.

Among the other guests were Mrs. Anne Archbold, Miss Dorothy Bellanca, Mrs. Philip M. Benton, Miss Katherine C. Blackburn, Mrs. Frank S. Bright, Mrs. Thornton L. Brown, Mrs. Ebert K. Burlew, Mrs. Charles A. Cannon, Miss Edith Christenson, Miss Jo Coffin, Mrs. David R. Coker, Mrs. Henry C. Corbin, Mrs. J. Harry Covington, Mrs. Charles W. Eliot 2d, Miss Gertrude Ely, Mrs. James D. Francis, Mrs. Antoinette Funk, Miss Doris Gibson, Mrs. Horatio B. Hackett, Mrs. Walter Hansen, Mrs. Henry I. Harriman, Mrs. Stanley V. Hodge, Mrs. Lucy S. Howorth, Mrs. Henry T. Hunt, Mrs. John Ihlder, Mrs. L. H. Jennings and Mrs. Palmer Jerman.

Also Mrs. Kenyon Joyce, Mrs. C. K. Leith, Mrs. Robert L. Lund, Mrs. John McFarland, Mrs. James S. Montgomery, Mrs. Anna Dickie Olesen, Miss Phoebe Omlie, Mrs. R. S. Rauch, Miss Edna Reger, Mrs. Roger Shepard, Mrs. Carroll L. Stewart, Mrs. R. Douglas Stuart, Mrs. W. J. Vereen, Miss Sarah Wambaugh, Mrs. Sidney Westover, Miss Sue White, Mrs. Irving C. Whitehead, Mrs. Luke Wilson, Mrs. William P. Witherow, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Miss Marguerite LeHand, Mrs. Louis McH. Howe, Mrs. Malvina T. Scheider and Mrs. James M. Helm.

Stratford Hall Will Be Scene Of Luncheon

Mrs. Harry B. Hawes Will Entertain at Lee's Birthplace Tuesday.

Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, wife of former Senator Hawes, will entertain at a luncheon Tuesday at Stratford Hall, the birthplace of Robert E. Lee, in Westmoreland County, Va.

The transformation that has taken place at this Colonial home during the winter under the direction of the Lee Foundation is a matter of Nation-wide interest. It is the first effort of any historical association of the United States to restore a complete plantation with its early Colonial arts and industries and recreate it as a self-sustaining community. Crowds of visitors motor every day to the historic place to see the developments in house, gardens and farm.

The restoration of the long-vanished gardens of Stratford Hall is especially significant. Under the direction of the Stratford committee of the Garden Club of Virginia, the early eighteenth century gardens have been revived. They were originally designed and planted by President Thomas Lee, builder of Stratford, and were among the rarest and most beautiful in the Colony of Virginia.

Mrs. Hawes' guests also will be interested in the Stratford store, of which Mrs. Cazanova Lee, of Washington, is chairman. The store is located in the old kitchen, and among the popular wares are the Stratford plates, sold for the maintenance and restoration fund. They are commemorative plates in embossed Wedgewood "Patrician Queensware," and are Lee crimson in color. In color they duplicate the original chinaware used by the Lees during the eighteenth century. Broken pieces of this ancient ware were found on the Lee plantation during the excavation work.

Miss Margo Wyeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan C. Wyeth, whose marriage to Mr. Herbert Ridley Stratford, jr., son of Mrs. Herbert Ridley Stratford, sr., of Bethlehem, Pa., will take place June 8 in Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral, has selected her attendants.

The matron of honor will be Mrs. Gale McLean, formerly Miss Mary Preston Gibson, and the maid of honor will be Miss Anne Perin. The bridesmaids will be Miss Margaretta Rowland, of Bluemont, Va.; Miss Louise Atwood, of Providence, R. I., cousin of the bride; Miss Carneallia Perin, whose engagement was recently announced to Mr. Edward B. Burling, jr.; Mrs. N. G. Robertson, jr., of Waverly, Pa.; Miss Constance Babcock, of Harvard, Mass., and Miss Alicia Rodgers, of Washington.

Mr. Stratford has not completed his list of ushers.

Whitehouses Away For Summer Season

The former United States Minister to Colombia and Mrs. Sheldon Whitehouse are opening their summer home, Eastbourne Lodge, at Newport, R. I. Mr. Whitehouse's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Fitzhugh Whitehouse, will arrive in Newport tomorrow, and take possession of their estate, Stone Villa.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. William F. Whitehouse, will arrive in Newport soon. They have leased Moorland Lodge for the summer from Mr. and Mrs. James Stewart Cushman.

Luncheon Is Given By Lyla Townsend

Miss Lyla Townsend was hostess at a luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of her sister, Mrs. John A. Tubbs, of Selbyville, Del., who is visiting her at the hotel.

Among her guests were Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, Mrs. Lester J. Dickinson, Mrs. A. Harry Moore, Mrs. John N. Overton, Mrs. Benjamin D. Foulois, Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward and her guest, Mrs. Evelyn Delacey Davis, of New York; Mrs. Adams Howard and Mrs. Paul Townsend.

Mrs. Williams Returns to City

Visits Her Son-in-Law and Daughter at Country Home Near N. Y.

Mrs. John R. Williams has returned to her home on New Hampshire avenue after spending some time with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Huston Rawls, at their country home near New York. Another daughter of Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Frederick Sterling, wife of the United States Minister to Bulgaria, left several weeks ago to join Mr. Sterling in Sofia. The minister is now en route to this country. His trip will bring him to Washington to confer with his chief at the State Department.

Mrs. Joseph Reiter, still another daughter of Mrs. Williams, is again in her home on Dupont Circle. Her niece, Miss Audrey Campbell, who had been in Bermuda for several months, is with her. Mrs. Kenna Elkins, who passed some time with Miss Campbell in Bermuda, also has returned.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Himes Return to Prospect Hall

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Himes have returned to their home, Prospect Hall, near Frederick, Md., after spending several days visiting their children who are at boarding schools. Young Canfield is a student at Lawrenceville and Marilynn is at the Kent Country School at Summit, N. J.

Lacquer That's Scented Ideal Gift to Mother

Fragrance Imparted to Linens and Clothes by New Material.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ONLY THREE more shopping days till May 12, Mother's Day! Only a short time left to make up your mind what your remembrance will be. Flowers? Candy? Gloves? Hose? Or do you prefer to find some gift that is different? Something which will surprise as well as delight?

You may search the town over and you'll find nothing more ingenious, unusual, and at the same time appropriate for the occasion than some of the scented lacquer which has just arrived in the toilet goods department of a downtown store.

This lacquer was made by a young woman in New York who keeps a select shop. It was given such a hearty welcome by her clientele there that soon news of it spread and stores all over the country were sending in orders. Only this week did it arrive in Washington to make its debut on the shop counters.

The lacquer has the appeal of perfume, sachet and incense, too. If you take a little brush and spread it over the inside of the drawers on coat hangers and the closet shelves, you'll find that it imparts a devastating fragrance not only to your room but to all linens and clothes that contact it.

The young woman who manufactures it has found that applying it under the tables and chairs in her shop makes the place as cheerfully fragrant as a spring day.

In the event that one scent is applied, and later you want to use another, it's quite simple to remove the first coating with soap and water.

One Mother's Viewpoint.

Only recently we heard one mother, who also is a grandmother, say that it took Mother's Day and Christmas to make her feel her age. She said her children invariably gave her gifts which, of course, she appreciated, but which, sad to say, were typically "old lady" gifts. At the time she was wearing a lovely soft, flimsy spun-wool scarf, a pale lavender color.

"Why, this was just what I needed," the little old lady laughed, "but you know I had a hankering for a taffeta scarf that ties in a big bow under my chin. Silly, of course. But I never will outgrow loving pretty, perky things with pep to them!"

Do you think she was silly? We don't! It's just too bad she didn't have her taffeta scarf. And Sunday it will be too bad that lots of mothers will be deluged with lavender and lace instead of gifts in a gayer vein.

One downtown store is featuring most attractive scarfs—lots of them in taffeta that would tie in big swishy bows. Why don't you just take a peep at them before you definitely decide what your gift will be?

A Profusion of Lilac.

You've no idea how much a little money will buy or what attractive things—until you visit a certain beflowered department in a local store. Here in the midst of a profusion of lilac you'll find intriguing jars of bath crystals, lilac colored and scented, boxes of dusting powder, tall tins of talcum powder, and lovely bottles of toilet water, all in the same fragrance.

Very likely, these will give you an idea for your Mother's Day shopping. What could be more appropriate, or any more acceptable, than a complete set of these dainty toiletries, not one of them over 50 cents. In fact, the talcum powder is three for 50 cents, and the dusting powder only 25 cents!

The bath crystals not only perfume the water with a lingering lavender fragrance, but also soften it.

A "Zip-Over" Pocketbook.

Another suggestion—and a hard one to beat from either the practical or decorative angle—you'll find in the bag department of a large store. It's a two-way pocketbook called "zip-over."

This attractive accessory is made of linen. On one side it's peach, or chamois, or white. Lou "zip" it over, and presto, there's another bag—this one brown, or blue, or a contrasting shade.

The bags are 100 per cent washable and 100 per cent usable. You might add another 100 per cent for chic.

Artificial Flowers.

Little Alice, who took a trip through Wonderland, might have seen flowers in the gardens there like some of those in an F street shop. They are queer, interesting little things made of composition and designed with clasps on the back so they will fasten to the lapel of your coat and pin to your collar at the V of the neck.

Bargains in Cotton.

Thanks to this being National Cotton Week there are bargains and bargains in cotton. Just take a stroll through the aisles of a local store. You'll see placard after placard telling you about the national week. By each placard is a fine buy.

For instance, there are one-pound rolls of absorbent cotton, 35 cents; five yards of gauze, 31 inches wide, 35 cents; a box of cotton pads, indispensable for the dressing table, only 10 cents!

Harris & E.

A pioneer in the theory that homemaking is more than cooking and sewing is Miss Isabel Bevier, who instituted home economics study at the University of Illinois.

THE DOOR to gracious living was unbarred to countless young women through the untiring efforts of Miss Isabel Bevier in her 21 years as head of the home economics department at the University of Illinois.

Miss Bevier, who is a guest of Miss Lita Bane in her home here, yesterday related the story of how the simple courses in cooking and sewing were lifted out of their limited field by drawing upon other fields of study to broaden and give them a wider scope.

"Home economics," when Miss Bevier went to the university, was an unknown term. The course of study for girls who were interested primarily in things pertaining to the home was limited to cooking and advanced cooking, which included salads, sewing and advanced sewing.

Used Scientific Approach.

Miss Bevier was interested in the study of the home from a different angle; hers was the idea of a scientific approach to homemaking. Her first step, she said, was to throw out the word cooking, and replace it with words of greater significance. Having been a chemistry teacher for the ten years prior to her coming to the university, she was interested in food from the scientific angle. She lined up the foods from that angle as proteins, carbohydrates and fats. Vitamins had not yet stirred up much thought, and her new course was listed in the university catalogue as "The Selection and Preparation of Food." When questioned about the missing word, cooking, she replied, "There is more to the study of food than the cooking alone."

"Everyone at the university was very willing to cooperate," she said. "The department of agriculture there had been carrying on a scientific approach to farming and this work had met with approval.

"Once in a while, though, the curious would ask questions. One man wanted to know how many credits I would ask for baking bread. I told him, 'We don't ask for very many, because we don't bake very much bread.'"

Chemistry Department Helps.

The chemistry department helped Miss Bevier when she suggested that a course in general chemistry would be the first important step to the freshman interested in a scientific approach to homemaking. She did not stop with the cooking, however, but looked at the problem from every angle. "Under the title of home sanitation," she said, "we were able to include many features that would give an insight to the scientific approach of homemaking."

The department of architecture helped her, too. Her students were permitted to enjoy a series of 18 lectures given on heating, lighting and plumbing. Little by little her department broadened out and offered the students a wide and well-rounded field of interest.

After leaving her position at the University of Illinois in 1921, Miss Bevier carried on her work in home economics at the Universities of California and Arizona until 1926 when she retired. She still retains a keen interest in the present developments in this field of work. She believes that "home economics has a chance to teach something of the beauty of life and the unity of life, to teach that there is an art in a well-ordered home and a well-ordered life."

Color Chart Made For Nail Polishes

London (AP).—A definite color chart for day time and evening for nail polishes has been figured out.

Navy blue gowns, for instance, have the choice of contrasting colors of nail polishes in Chinese red, tomato, fire-engine red, and blush rose for day and evening wear. Sky blue takes ox blood, cyclamen or blush rose nail polishes with the addition of sapphire and rose pearl for evenings.

Pattern No. 771.

UNDER THAT flattering cape-like collar that covers the arms this dress is comfortably sleeveless. A slenderizing line is formed by the surplice closing of the blouse and the pleated inset at the side of the skirt. The collar, too, does much to make the hips seem small. Here is a dress that is perfect for cotton, that is becoming to most figures and particularly favorable to mature ones.

The pattern is designed in sizes 32 to 48. Size 40 requires 5⅜ yards of 35-inch material. There are just eight pieces in the version shown, and the pattern includes an accurate and easy-to-follow instruction chart.

Picnic Supper Is Enjoyable On Warm Days

Cold Fried Chicken Heads Meat Suggestions; Many Choices of Drinks.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IT IS NEVER too early for a picnic. The weather may have been treacherous, but when the sun comes out, nothing is so much fun as supper in the country. Don't expect after heavy storms to find much dry wood for a fire, that will come later, but surely a comfortable dry porch can be found. Here, in the warm afterglow of the setting sun, you can enjoy a picnic supper brought from your own kitchen.

You should have two thermos bottles, one for hot coffee, the other for milk or an appropriate picnic drink. If the day is very warm, iced coffee or tea or even a cold cereal beverage can be substituted for the hot drink, and orangeade, loganberryade, cold cocoa or chocolate milk will please the children.

There will be sandwiches, of course. Make these up the last minute so they won't become soggy and make the filling as interesting and befitting the occasion as possible. Just thin slices of white or whole wheat bread spread with butter will taste amazingly good if you bring along a box of cold fried chicken. Cooked shrimp, flaked with the tines of a fork, to which a dash of mustard and a sprinkling of finely chopped onion or garlic and seasoning to taste, has been added, makes an excellent filling when spread between thin slices of buttered white bread.

Cucumbers for Filling.

Chopped cucumbers seasoned to a spreading consistency with an appropriate dressing makes a fitting filling for buttered slices of whole wheat bread. Nippy cheese mashed to a spread with a bit of prepared mustard will be right at home between slices of rye bread. Sardines should figure prominently, too. They are best when mashed and seasoned to taste.

It won't be a picnic without stuffed or deviled eggs. Each half should be done up separately in oiled or waxed paper. Crisp celery stalks or radishes may be carried along wrapped in a clean damp cloth. Olives and pickles can be carried in the original jars, but it will add greatly to the convenience of serving them if the jars have been pried open at home and then tightly corked so that the juice won't run all over the basket.

Quart glass jars can be used as carriers for apple and tuna fish salad or the more popular potato salad. This will require paper plates and forks for serving. Now that eating equipment has been suggested, don't forget plenty of paper napkins, paper cups and tin cups for the hot beverage.

Other Meat Suggestions.

Fried chicken has been mentioned, but that is not the only meat suggestion. A baked veal loaf, made in the morning and allowed to cool, or perhaps the remnant of one from a previous dinner can find its place in the picnic basket. Slices of cold roast beef, ham, tongue or lamb will be excellent, too, to serve with the plain bread and butter sandwiches. A big box of crisp potato chips is desirable.

Last but not least, there must be a liberal supply of cake and some kind of fresh fruit. Cup cakes are easier to handle on a picnic, but a sheet cake, frosted in the pan and cut into squares is another idea.

Pack everything neatly in a basket or large box, and carry just enough food to supply every member of the party. Don't forget that picnic appetites are always a little exaggerated. Try to plan so there won't be any leftovers, because picnic food loses its appeal after the picnic.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Ellen Mallory gives up a promising career as a tennis champion—and also her job in a real estate office—to marry Michael Dale in the face of her mother's opposition.

Because Mrs. Mallory has a staggering accumulation of debts, Ellen feels duty-bound to help out with the family finances and announces to Mike that she is going back to her old job, even though she promised to give it up. Mike protests angrily, and Ellen locks the door to her bedroom that night.

THE key had no more than turned in the lock before Ellen regretted her action. All her life she had disliked people who indulged in moody pouting and resentful sullenness.

"The better way is to quarrel, clear the air, and then start over again," she had always told herself. Yet, here she was, at the first disagreement with her husband, running away by herself, locking the door between them and preparing for a grand good sulk.

She listened intently. If Michael had so much as stepped to the door she would have rushed to open it and to come into his arms contritely. But Mike did not move toward that closed and locked door. To him it was as though his bride had reached out her hand and slapped him full in the face.

Went for Walk.

Presently he got up, took his hat and went outside to walk for hours, wondering what on earth he should do.

When he came back Ellen did not know. She had fallen into a fitful, dream-troubled sleep — and the locked door stood between them.

Breakfast was a mockery. Mike helped, as usual. But there was no light-hearted bantering, no gay lovemaking between coffee percolating and orange juice making.

Ellen broached the subject uppermost in their minds. "Michael, I'm not a child. I'm a grown woman. I have my obligations and not even marriage can keep me from them. I'm going back to work this morning."

Michael Dale merely nodded, gravely, as he would to any stranger. But his young face was deadly white.

Ellen Was Furious.

"You can't manage my life," Ellen sobbed. "After all, I don't belong to you body and soul. You're selfish and egotistical if you think I'm going to stay at home and give up everything for you. Because I'm not. You hear? I will not."

"I heard you the first time," Mike said, and Ellen detected just a shade of bitter sarcasm in his voice.

Presently he got up, leaving his half-finished breakfast, got his hat, called a goodby from the hallway as impersonally as though Ellen had been an absolute stranger, and left the house.

Glad She Was Back.

She hoped, as she opened the familiar door of the Benson Realty Co., that Mrs. Benson would not guess that she had been crying and she wondered if she had just imagined they might be glad to see her down there, might be glad to welcome her back on the pay roll.

They were.

"We've had three girls since you've been gone," Mrs. Benson told her. "I don't mind telling you that not one of them was worth her salt. We're glad to see you, Ellen. We'll put you on the pay roll right now and give you a raise. You're worth $25 a week to this company."

In a glow of happiness that almost made her forget the bitterness of the night before, Ellen uncovered her typewriter and dusted off the desk.

Plenty to Do.

There was plenty to do. Work she loved. Mercifully it helped Ellen forget, for the time being, the load of unhappiness that she carried.

"Life's queer," she thought to herself, when she unlocked the little house that afternoon. She had hurried—hard. She had it all planned out. Michael never quit work until six. She was free to leave her office at five. That gave her an hour to hurry home and prepare the evening meal, take care of the morning work that she had been forced to leave and get the house presentable.

She wanted, with all her heart, to show Mike that home needn't suffer just because the wife worked down town. Why a clever woman could take care of a home and hold down a job, too. She'd show Mike, that was all. The time would come when he'd change his mind about wives working outside of the home.

Yes, thoughts of how she would manage set her into a rosy glow. She stopped at a meat shop and got a thick, juicy steak—Mike loved steak. And she'd have plenty of time to make hot biscuits. And hot biscuits with the new sunshine preserves and golden butter—why, what king could fare any better?

And the work did go surprisingly well.

"I thought I'd put on the steak," Ellen laughed happily. "Have everything ready."

"Well, put it on. He must be famished. He didn't even go out to lunch. He had a customer and just worked right through the noon hour."

Michael Arrived.

Ellen popped the steak into the broiler and the waiting pan of baking powder biscuits into the oven.

She hurried out to the little front porch and got the evening paper. Sitting outside, idly reading the paper would give an impression of leisure, certainly.

Something Was Missing.

There was no waiting for Michael's overtures of peace that evening. When he came into the house Ellen went into his arms, lifting her lips for a kiss of forgiveness.

And Michael kissed her, held her close. But something was missing, a tenderness, a warmth that had come to mean Michael's lovemaking.

As well have it right out, she told herself, and while Mike cut into the perfect steak, to serve it, she told about her day.

"I hope, Mike, that you won't disapprove too much. But I started back to work today."

"Yes? Did you like it as much as you thought you would?"

Not to Work Long.

"I liked it, Mike, but not as much as I thought I would."

"I'm sorry."

"Im not going to work long. Just a few months. You won't mind that, Mike?"

Mike laid down his implements of serving, looked his wife squarely in the eyes. "Please, Ellen, let us not discuss it any more. I haven't changed my mind."

It was foolish of Ellen to reiterate, "You haven't changed your mind?"

"No, Ellen, I haven't changed my mind. But there isn't very much I can do about it, is there? I've asked you not to work. You insist upon working. Well, I guess I'll just have to grin and bear it. That's all."

And though the door was unlocked that night, something of the rapture had gone from their lives—in the long, sleepless watches of the night Ellen wondered if it could ever be recaptured.

Ted Hall, our illustrious literary critic, made a wisecrack several months ago. "Editorial writers," he said, "are fellows who beat around the bush so much they never get a look at the bush itself."

But Theodore didn't mean the ones who make the editorial page of The Washington Post so alive, interesting and thought-provoking. All our editorial writers (four men and two women, so there, you Feminists!) are fully equipped with special bush-examining apparatus, and before they write an editorial about a bush, they also read a few good books about horticulture. Then, after you've read that editorial in The Post, you know all about bushes from tap-root to top-leaf, and it's very likely that the editorial writer also gave you a few suggestions on how to make the next bush better.

Of course, The Post's editorial writers don't spend their entire time writing about bushes . . . for, after all, there are so many other interesting things in this perplexed world. Editorials must be written about such things as the League of Nations and sewage plants and crime waves and election results and naval treaties and international conferences. These editorials must be accurate, authoritative, interesting, and, above all, they must say something. Too, they must stand the scrutiny of Ambassadors and Government officials and housewives and that all-powerful citizen, the Man in the Street. Our editorial writers score on all points, and their unusual ability and pleasing style are reasons why the editorial page of The Washington Post is considered one of the best in the country. It's so good that even the reporters . . . who usually care for nothing except their own stories . . . read it every morning!

In many American cities legends have grown up about editorial writers. One of these legends is that when a reporter becomes so cynical and downright mean that no one will speak to him, he is immediately appointed as an editorial writer. Another legend holds that all editorial writers are forced to eat blueberry pie for breakfast on the theory that it will give them tummy-aches, and therefore will put them in just the right mood to grind out an editorial.

Then there are the Pollyanna boys on some newspapers who must smile all the time and pat everything on the back. Once in a blue moon they are allowed to write one editorial politely condemning something, but it's usually something safe, like the starlings or the traffic laws in Zanzibar. This type of editorial writer is a more expert fence-sitter than a timid politician, and his editorials have all the verve and snap and interest of a last year's mail order catalogue.

But Post editorial writers have personalities all their own, and they can smile as well as frown. Instead of just Pointing with Pride or Viewing With Alarm, they present both sides of the picture, and their views will help you to form your own opinion. Here, in the Nation's Capital, the editorial writer is at the source of opinion. He can check his figures promptly and accurately, and he can investigate problems completely. You'll profit from a daily study of the editorials in who won the first prize in the third annual poetry contest conducted by the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs with a sonnet sequence entitled "Confession at Evening." There were almost 200 poems submitted in the contest.

Her Sonnet Sequence on Marriage Adjudged Best of Nearly 200 in Contest; Second Prize Goes to the Rev. James J. Donahue.

WINNING OVER almost 200 others who entered the third annual poetry contest conducted by the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, Dr. Emily Maxwell Maddox was awarded the first prize of $25 for her sonnet sequence, "Confession at Evening."

All awards for the contest were presented yesterday at the Hotel Roosevelt by Catherine Cate Coblentz, chairman of the contest.

The subject on which all poems were written was "Foundations," including personal, national or spiritual foundations, or such other interpretations as the writer desired. The prize-winning sonnets were written on the foundations of marriage. The first of the series of four sonnets follows:

"CONFESSION AT EVENING."
(Philosophy for Marriage.)

I yearn for syllables that may confess
As tenderly as fell the summer rain
Veiling the hill where blossomed our distress
When first we struggled with this ancient pain
And, struggling, fell as men have done before.
The veins drew deep of peril and swift fire
For rapture makes no vow to offer more;
But once she fills the cup of youth's desire.
Our house is somber now, bereft of song
We shade the lids, palm outward, from the sight
Of throttled anger brooding overlong;
We lift our folly, measure its delight,
Tip well the glass, concede the staling wine

The second prize of $10 was given to the Rev. James J. Donahue for a sonnet on Lincoln. Father Donahue, on leave from the faculty of Columbia College in Dubuque, Iowa, is now studying in the Graduate School at Catholic University. His poem follows:

"LINCOLN."

Friend, have you seen a peak of towering stone
Out of some twilight chasm soaring sheer,
The roots of the earth fall dim and disappear
Save where the surging mountain rides alone
Above the evening mist, and have you known
How long the glory of the sun is clear
On snowy summits when the night is near
And splendor from the valley long has flown?

And I have thought him as one of these Beloved mountains; in the certainties
Of solid earth set steadily and strong—
Bright with reluctant sunset—molded high
Above the weather where the light is long—
So fast to earth and flung so near the sky.

Honorable mention prizes were given to Edith Mirick, Washington poet and critic, for her poem, "Rail-splitter," a verse portrait of Lincoln; Richard Cady, for a sonnet series, "Shadow on the Sky," dealing with conflicts in American history; Lee Anna Burns, for a nature poem, "Green Altars;" Bessie Schenck Bunten, for a narrative poem, "Charlesgifte on the Patuxent," written about the oldest house now standing in Maryland.

Honorable mention awards were the following books: "Little Miss April" by Anne Robinson, "The Veiled Door" by Caroline Giltinan, "The Far Call" by Alethea Todd Alderson, and an "American States Anthology," given by Anna Priestly.

Judges for the contest were Leonora Speyer, of New York City, a former president of the Poetry Society of America, and Muna Lee, of San Juan, Puerto Rico, a permanent member of the council of the Poetry Society of America.

Since this contest is designed to stimulate the writing of poetry in the community, the winner of the first or second prize in any of the three contests that have already been held, may receive in the future only "Special Honorary Mention," the first and second prizes being awarded those writers who have not won either prize in any of the contests.

Woman Past 50 Finds Age Great Handicap in Hunting for Needed Job.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: As there are undoubtedly many other persons struggling with the same problem confronting me, and as your answers seem always to be so helpful, I have summoned the courage to write you.

* * * *

I am one of the "new poor," and, unforutnately, or so it seems, I am a woman in my early fifties. I am more able, stronger, more intelligent, with more poise and tact, than when a girl of 20. Yet eevrywhere I go in search of a position, I am met with the answer: "Sorry, but we want a younger person."

* * * *

Can you make any suggestions as to how to overcome this objection? I will be most grateful.

DISHEARTENED.

Finding One's Metier.

DEAR DISHEARTENED: Yes, I can make a few suggestions. They are these: Don't waste your time and energies nor vitiate your self-confidence by inviting the refusals which result from job-hunting in a haphazard, disorganized fashion.

* * * *

Investigate with an analytical, intelligent, adventuring mind the fields of existing or potential work particularly suited to, if not actually demanding, the talents of the mature woman. The Institute of Women's Professional Relations, with headquarters at Women's College, University of North Carolina, discovers and presents to high school and college girls a panorama of occupational opportunities, and no doubt can supply the same service to the older woman.

* * * *

Make an honest inventory of your assets, such as physical endurance, nervous stability, a will to work, intelligence, poise and tact; take into consideration your experience, training, natural inclinations, and gifts, and make up your mind definitely as to the vocation in which you are confident you can succeed once a toe-hold is obtained.

* * * *

Hold a steadfast and constructive opinion of your own regarding the world's work waiting to be done by seasoned older women and don't be swayed or discouraged by contradictory opinions of regimented superficial minds. Remember a weed is only a plant out of place, so don't make the mistake of competing with youth where youth is a recognized asset, or labeled as such.

* * * *

Having visualized a practicable objective in the paid-worker field, coordinate the forces of your personality, mentality and physical strength and drive straight to its realization. Remember that liabilities cleverly marketed often develop into major assets; that desire is prayer and that prayer literally moves figurative mountains.

M. H.

"In providing dwellings for workers with low incomes, the United States is a generation behind Europe," says Miss Catherine Bauer, executive secretary of the Labor Housing Conference and author of "Modern Housing," a complete and authoritative account of low-cost living quarters throughout Europe and America.

Nation Generation Behind Europe, Miss Catherine Bayer Asserts.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WITHIN THE LAST two years the provision of low-cost dwellings has become a public issue in the United States. Yet, today, there is nothing that can be properly called a modern "housing movement" in the sense that Europe has carried out such a movement for the last 40 years.

So reports Miss Catherine Bauer, executive secretary of the Labor Housing Conference and author of a recently published book, "Modern Housing," a complete and authoritative account of living quarters for workers throughout Europe and the United States.

Miss Bauer is in Washington in the interest of a bill introduced by Representative Ellenbogen of Pennsylvania, designed "to provide modern, large-scale housing for families of low income."

Yesterday as she discussed the problem of providing such dwellings, she explained that the United States is at least a generation behind Europe in this field and that "we can't expect to accomplish in two years what it took other countries four decades to attain."

Small-Scale Experiments.

In this connection she also mentioned that while there had been some experiments in modern community housing in the United States, few were on par with those in Europe—particularly in regard to rental scales.

She then launched into a definition of "modern housing" as it has been carried out across the Atlantic, where in many cities there are comfortable workers' dwellings with certain minimum amenities, such as "cross-ventilation, sunlight, quiet, and a pleasant outlook from every window; adequate privacy, space and sanitary facilities; children's play space adjacent; and, finally, living quarters at a price that citizens of average income or less can afford."

On such premises as these, she explained, there are very few dwellings—not more than 10,000, at most—in the United States that could fall under the classification of "modern housing." "In Europe, however, the situation is entirely different," she said. "Since the war at least 6,000,000 apartment houses have been erected which do really constitute 'modern housing,' as the term is generally defined."

As a result, in contrast to up-to-date, low-cost dwellings for workers in Europe, there is in America "little to show but congested tenements, wooden three and four-deckers, and jerry-built, jostling bungalows," she said.

Emergency Measure.

This led to a discussion of the official housing policy in Washington, and Miss Bauer pointed out that the latter was introduced primarily as an emergency measure to provide employment and to rid the city of the most obvious slum districts, but not as a housing policy at all. In view of this it has become steadily more and more involved with numerous side issues, she explained, until it looks as if the whole thing might result in little more than a deadlock.

But while the modern housing movement in America has been pared down and compromised until it now appears to be only a half-hearted desire to tear down a few slums in each city, the movement in Europe forges steadily ahead, providing in increasing numbers adequate, comfortable, low-cost dwellings for workers, she said.

A study of the results of such a movement in Frankfort, Germany, was largely responsible for Miss Bauer's interest in housing problems throughout Europe and the United States. As a student in Vassar College, she decided to be an architect. After graduation she attended Cornell to study architecture and later went to Europe to continue her study.

Won $1,000 Prize.

In 1931, however, she became "a housing expert in about five minutes" when she wrote an article on the architecture of modern housing in Frankfort and won a thousand-dollar prize offered by a magazine. Since then she has devoted most of her time to a study of housing in Europe and in this country.

She considers Chatham Village, the recent development in Pittsburgh by the Buhl Foundation, probably the best example of modern planned housing in this country. This and other successful experiments have convinced her that once "the vast energy once directed toward individual home-ownership is organized to demand a realistic program for modern housing, there will be a real American housing movement."

Such a program, she believes, can be launched and executed efficiently under a "United States housing authority act," which has been introduced by Representative Ellenbogen.

What TODAY Means

"Taurus."

IF MAY 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 11 a. f., from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 8 to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a. m., from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m.

If the solution of personal questions of importance seems to be elusive, as well as puzzling, it might be well to "let well enough alone" and to give them the opportunity to disentangle themselves. Things usually have a way of working out for the best, so do not worry on this date over what might happen later on.

If a woman and May 9 is your birthday, you apparently should have very few causes for worry, but many events conducive to happiness will come into your life. Avoid contracting the habit of always being dubious of a pudding being possibly good until you have tasted it.

If a man and May 9 is your natal day, you should not permit success to go to your head, or egotism to act as a check to your advancements, your achievements should bring gratifying results. Journalism, the stage, educational work, electrical or mechanical engineering, as well as selling, may offer the right opportunity for the exploitation of your versatility.

The Common Causes of Pain Outlined

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

PAIN is a universal symptom. It varies from mild discomfort to intense agony; from a level scarcely perceptible by the senses to the paralyzing paroxysms that accompany the condition known as angina pectoris.

The symptom that most frequently drives the patient to the physician is pain. It is nature's warning that something is wrong, that nerves have been insulted beyond the bounds of propriety, and that due notice is given that pressure, injury, or disease must be relieved.

General Manifestations.

The purpose of this discussion is to describe a few closely related types of pain, such as gout, lumbago, arthritis, neuritis, herpes zoster, neuralgia, and sciatica.

Gout.—The first severe symptom of gout may be a sharp pain followed by swelling of a small joint, usually that of one of the great toes. The condition is the result of some toxin accumulating in the body because of faulty elimination. Before the disease appears there are many warning signals, such as indigestion, constipation, headache, sleeplessness, and general irritability. The attack begins abruptly, often late at night, with acute pain in the ball of one of the great toes, which promptly becomes red, hot, swollen, and shiny, and so sensitive that the slightest touch is intolerable. The acute attack lasts several hours and relief comes only after four or five days. William Cadogan, in his famous essay on gout, says: "The gout is so common a disease that there is scarcely a man in the world, whether he has had it or not, but thinks he knows perfectly what it is. So does the cook-maid think she knows what fire is as well as Sir Isaac Newton." Among the causes mentioned by Cadogan are indolence, intemperance, and vexation.

Lumbago, or muscular rheumatism, is really inflammation of a muscle. The onset is usually without warning—so sudden, in fact, that if the individual is seated he is unable to rise from his chair; if he is bending over he is reluctant to assume an erect posture because of the intensity of the pain. Every movement is excruciating and the disability equals that of a severe muscle cramp.

Arthritis, if untreated, affects one joint after another. There is swelling, pain and acute inflammation. In many cases practically every joint in the body is involved—fingers, wrists, ankles, elbows, knees, jaws and spine. Movement that at first is definitely limited finally becomes impossible. Gradually the signs of inflammation subside and there is shrinking of the muscles which throws the joints into exaggerated prominence. Contractions take place with resulting deformities. In addition to intense pain on every attempt at motion there may be a constant sensation of tingling and numbness.

The discussion of pain will be continued tomorrow.

Culbertson on Bridge

A player should consider the possibility of a slam when the bidding discloses a combined strength of at least 6½ to 7 honor tricks. However, there are three types of hands in which a slam may be makable and easily biddable with fewer than 6½ honor tricks.

South, Dealer
Both sides vulnerable

South	West	North	East
Pass	1♠	Dbl.	Pass
2♡	Pass	3♡(1)	Pass
4♣(2)	Pass	5♣(3)	Pass
5◇(4)	Pass	6♣(5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Showing support.
2—South shows a club suit, and at the same time makes a mild slam try.
3—North might bid four diamonds at this juncture, but for what purpose? South holds at least eight cards in hearts and clubs. He wants North to confirm the club suit. North takes the risk that the bidding may die at five clubs.
4—South indicates slam intentions.
5—Fixing the contract. North avoids a slam at hearts, fearing South's hearts are not strong enough to stand spade ruffs by North with heart honors.

The Play.

The club slam is, of course, a laydown. The natural lead is the spade King, which holds. Declarer can make the next 12 tricks against any defense.

Report Flays Government's Spoils System

Study of Personnel Made by Miss Frederic, of Vote League.

ACCORDING to a recent study of "Trained Personnel for Public Service" made by Miss Katherine A. Frederic, secretary of the government operation department of the National League of Women Voters, the spoils system of appointing only dominant party adherents to public office as a reward for votes, is a liability to a political party and a decided menace to good government.

Other outstanding conclusions of the study undertaken in conjunction with the league's special two-year campaign for better trained men and women for public service, hold that:

1. The American people, if concerned at all with the kind of government they get, must be awakened to the need of a "sound, broadly applied merit system" throughout the entire public service.

2. There is need of immediate elimination of the "pressure of the party boss or special interest groups" in order to establish a consistent policy of personnel appointments and administration.

3. It is imperative for good government that there be established a career service system to stress "aristocracy of ability" in public service.

"The patronage system," Miss Frederic said, "is the root of evil preventing growth of a "true merit system" in public service. Her analysis challenges the political parties and an "indifferent" American people to correct this evil.

Mothers Day Program.

The American War Mothers will hold their eleventh annual Mothers Day program at 1 o'clock Sunday at Arlington Amphitheater.

The program, consisting of prominent speakers, soloists, and music by the United States Navy Band, will be broadcast over the NBC network.

After the program, memorial services will be held at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and wreaths will be placed by organizations desiring to take part in the ceremony.

Many honor guests will be present. Delegate bodies of American War Mothers from several States expect to be in attendance.

Vote League to Entertain.

The board of directors of the National League of Women Voters will hold a reception from 4:30 to 6:30 o'clock today in the sun room of the Hotel Washington. Members of the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters will attend.

Among the speakers will be Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, Miss Grace E. Frysinger and Mrs. Charles H. Weston.

St. John's Shop Sale.

For the last time this season the St. John's Shop at 821 Sixteenth street northwest will be open from 10 to 5 o'clock today. Sales have taken place once a month all winter for the benefit of St. John's Orphanage.

Miss Emily Maddox and other members of the Junior Guild will assist with the sale. Mrs. Robert Giles, Mrs. Heiburg, Miss McCammon and Mrs. E. B. Meigs will be among those present.

Byrd Anchors In Bay; Reaches D.C. Tomorrow

Piney Point, Md., May 8.—Determined not to arrive in Washington one minute before the time set for Friday's welcome home, Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd and members of his expedition loafed all day today in the calm waters off this little resort. Tomorrow morning, anchors will be hoisted and the two ships, Bear of Oakland and Jacob Ruppert, escorted by the Coast Guard cutter Apache, will start up the river on the tortuous route past the green banks of Virginia and Maryland, twisting in and out among the fish stakes which guard this river like sentries.

A warm May sun beat down on the trim decks of the boats, over which heavy coated sled dogs wandered, and the men of the expedition enjoyed a Southern warmth denied them for two years in the Antarctic. A few fishing boats made they way alongside the wooden-hulled Bear, famous for more than half a centry as an ice-breaker in the Northland. Others visited the high-sided steel mule-pack of the expedition, the Ruppert, named for the brewer who helped most in the financing of the trip.

Cows Scent Pasturage.

Strange sounds emanating from the ships proved to be the milch-cows and a small bull, born at the edge of Antarctica, lowing hopefully at the scent of green grass which only a few miles of water kept them from munching. Penguins, however, stayed close to their iced baths, not so happy as the men and bull and cows at the approaching feel of solid soil under their feet and hooves.

Tomorrow will see the two craft really move. From the wide reaches of the lower river they will slowly creep up past the high banks and the lushly green shores, past the rotting wharves of forgotten hamlets, past men in small boats tending the nets which make passage up or down the Potomac an adventure.

By midafternoon their throttled-down engines should be rung to a full stop off the wharves of Quantico, United States Marine base on the Virginia side of the river. In the deep channel which runs in from the middle of the river, or perhaps alongside the wharves, the entire expedition will be transferred to the decks and cabins of the Bear.

Schedule Observed.

This is the flag ship of the expedition, commanded by none other than Admiral Byrd, whose orders have slowed the trip so that the carefully laid plans for Friday night's reception at the Navy Yard and White House would not be disturbed.

The thick bow of the Bear will push on Friday through the narrowing waters past Mount Vernon, on up to the tip of Hains Point, where it will round the buoy to make the turn to the Navy Yard. Here President Roosevelt, aboard the U. S. S. Sequoia, the small yacht upon which he spends week-ends on the river, will officially welcome Admiral Byrd and all his men back to the United States.

Firm Wins Appeal For Tax Exemption

Allegany Acts to Assist Sale of Factory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 8.—The board of Allegany County commissioners unanimously voted yesterday to grant a further 10-year tax exemption to the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co.

A large delegation composed of representatives of financial institutions, business and professional men headed by Thomas B. Finan, had appeared before the board.

Mr. Finan, as spokesman, said he, as one of the trustees operating the tire corporation, sought to sell the local factory, with the assurance the purchaser would continue to operate it with a larger force and production.

He said the company had been operated at a loss for several years.

Frederick School Heads Return From D.C. Parley

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, May 8.—J. Fred Thwaite, chairman of the school board of Frederick County; Leslie D. Kline, superintendent of schools, and Walker McBond, of this city, returned today from Washington, where they conferred with Federal authorities on PWA grants.

The school board has puchased materal for construction of a consolidated school for Gainesboro District, and it is anticipated that construction will begin as soon as the materials are assembled. The board is interested in the construction of Route 7 from this city to the West Virginia line, since the road will be the chief highway over which pupils to the school will travel.

Tax Experts Invited To Discuss Sales Levy

Norfolk, Va., May 8 (AP).—C. H. Morrisett and W. H. Stauffer, commissioner and economist, respectively, of the State tax department, have been invited to participate in the sales tax discussion that will be held under auspices of the Virginia Real Estate Association in Charlottesville, Friday afternoon, C. Hollowell, secretary of the association, announced today.

The Retail Merchants Association of Virginia, the Virginia Education Association and the Virginia Produce and Food Distributors Association have accepted invitations to participate in the discussions. The League of Virginia Municipalities has not yet accepted an invitation.

Wada Daihachi is not the only famous name associated with Japanese archery, but for a seemingly impossible feat of endurance it stands above all others. His record is made more emphatic when the fact is known that the Japanese, always associated with diminutiveness, have always used the largest and most powerful bows of any race. Their bows measured from seven and a half to eight feet with arrows three feet and over.

Sanjusangendo Temple, "Hall of Thirty-three Pillar Spans," in Kyoto, has for centuries been a favorite place for archery contests, not mainly for its 128 yards in length but for its comparatively low ceiling of 16 feet, which forces the archer to send his arrows on practically a level line to reach the end of the hall.

Daihachi, as is always the case in the endurance contests, shot continuously from sunset to sunset. For the 24 hours, he shot his arrows at the rate of better than five each minute, a total of 8,133.

Two horses with broken necks and one jockey in the hospital resulted from the freak accident at Bay Meadows track November 13, 1934. Jockey McLaren was exercising Mint Memories, a $2,000 horse owned by Mrs. A. Manale, when Sir Richard, a $2,500 mount owned by Mrs. A. Horton, broke from his stall and dashed madly around the track in the opposite direction from that of McLaren. On the back of the oval the two running animals met head-on with such force that both were killed instantly and the jockey, instead of racing that day as scheduled, took his ride in an ambulance.

Attorney Is Receiver Of Martinsburg Ice

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 8.—L. D. Gerhardt, attorney, was named receiver for Martinsburg Ice Service Corporation by circuit court here yesterday as a result of a suit of Inland Ice Corporation vs. Martinsburg Ice, Homer N. Pankay, Amos Pankey, Interstate Service Corporation, J. M. Rothwell and J. O. Hensen. The suit alleged the defendant corporation to be insolvent, its assets being dissipated by two of the former members of the board of directors, and asking dissolution of the corporation.

Gerhardt was directed to take charge and continue operation of the plant until further orders of court.

Chestertown Druggist Granted Liquor Permit

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chestertown, Md., May 8.—The State License Bureau has handed down a decision in favor of Dr. William S. Brinsfield, of Rock Hall, who petitioned for a license to sell liquor at his drug store.

Frank P. Bratton, of Baltimore; W. Clinton McSherry, of Frederick, and L. Franklin Purnell, of Ocean City, are members of the board. The hearing here was attended by scores of church members of Rock Hall, who protested against the issuance of the license on the ground that the store is located near a church.

Estate Under Hammer.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Weston, W. Va., May 8.—Real estate holdings of the late Mrs. Mary Q. Edwards, valued at more than $500,000, are to be sold by order of the Lewis County Circuit Court. The property is situated in Lewis, Randolph, Webster and Gilmer counties and includes oil and gas lands, residential and business buildings.

Stay in Local Politics, Dean Urges Women

Specialization Needed in all Fields, Tucker Tells Federation.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., May 8.—Women should devote themselves to the problems of local government and let the men handle affairs of State and national governments, Dr. Robert H. Tucker, dean of Washington and Lee University, tonight told delegates to the twenty-eighth convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs of Virginia.

"The time has come," Dr. Tucker, chairman of the Virginia commission on county government from 1930 to 1932, said, "when there is need of specialization in politics as well as in other fields, in order that the citizen may give more attention to the affairs of government.

"Public health, sanitation, public schools, local public works and public welfare are in a sense merely extensions of the home."

Dr. Tucker, speaking in Lee Chapel, addressed the convention at its first business session following registration and committee meetings this morning. The delegates were formally welcomed to Lexington by Dr. Tucker and Mrs. Pendleton Tompkins, president of the Lexington Woman's Club, hostess to the convention.

The convention also was addressed tonight by Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, chairman of resolutions of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Approximately 150 women registered today. Others are expected tomorrow.

Mrs. Margaret Sanger, proponent of birth control, will address the federation Friday afternoon.

Richmond, Va., May 8.—The State Corporation Commission today granted authority to the Charlottesville & Albemarle Railway Co., a subsidiary of the Virginia Public Service Co., to substitute its old trolley system in Charlottesville with new bus service.

HOW MRS ECKOFF LOST 41 POUNDS

LOST HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE
Here's To-day's Live News For Fat Women—and Men.

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly a year for my health, and for high blood pressure and rheumatism and it helped both. My blood pressure was as high as 290 when I started to take Kruschen. I weighed 255 and now I weigh 214, that is losing 41 lbs., in about nine months and I feel fine." Mrs. W. Eckoff, Saginaw, Mich.

Besides melting away ugly, excess fat Kruschen constantly keeps the bowels regular and free from waste that is always apt to poison the system.

Fat folks should give Kruschen a month's trial—it never disappoints—you'll feel so much better after taking one inexpensive jar.

Take one-half level teaspoonful in cup of hot water before breakfast every morning—juice of half a lemon makes it taste better—it is guaranteed.—Adv.

Hit-Run Suspect Claims Crash Caused Panic

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Grafton, W. Va., May 8.—Marion Williams, 45, of Wendel, after voluntarily surrendering, waived a hearing before Magistrate Ona C. Jefferys here and gave bond of $500 to appear at the next grand jury term of court to answer a manslaughter charge in connection with the death of Barbara Sheets, 7, of Flemington.

Williams denied being under the influence of intoxicants when his car struck the girl on her way from school, and said he first stopped at the Sheets home, then became panic-stricken and fled. The child received fractures of the skull and died two days after the accident.

Light an Old Gold

for young ideas

IN THE SPRING, so the poets say, a young man's fancy lightly turns to things romantic. But the Old Gold smoker doesn't depend on Spring for young ideas. He finds an Old Gold does its bit, at any time, in making a fellow feel at "tops" with the world. That's due to Old Gold's exceptionally mild and fine old tobacco; the finest nature grows.

Stimulating... BUT NEVER IRRITATING

CONGRATULATE YOURSELF THAT IT WAS CALVERT

LOTS of men can manage pleasure before business, but can't manage business after pleasure. Instead of using their heads, they abuse them. To them we say, stick to CALVERT'S old-time blended whiskies. Enjoy them in gentlemanly moderation. Don't mix your drinks tonight and you won't mix your thinking tomorrow. CALVERT is smoother, mellower whiskey. Better blending's the reason. You'll be glad tomorrow you said CALVERT today.

When the occasion demands the best... ask for LORD CALVERT BOTTLED-IN-BOND RYE or BOURBON WHISKEY ... bottled-in-bond under Canadian Government Supervision. 100 proof.

CALVERT'S SPECIAL RESERVE and CALVERT'S SPECIAL are finer whiskies... the master blends of the man who has blended more whiskey than any living American.

U. S. Jurors Name 11 Loudoun Men In Liquor Inquiry

Tom Quesenberry Also Is Accused

Murder Case Climaxed Hunt for 'Shiners Begun March 16.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., May 8.—Federal Government operatives struck deeper at the ranks of illegal liquor operators in Virginia today with the indictment of 11 persons, one a prominent Loudoun countian, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government of liquor levies.

The indictments were returned by a Federal grand jury in Norfolk, which was called to hear evidence of Federal officers who conducted a widespread investigation of purported liquor law violations in Loudoun County after the slaying of an Alexandria policeman, Corpl. C. J. McClary, and the wounding of a Federal agent, George Kirkpatrick, during raids on moonshine liquor stills.

L. Clarke Hoge, prominently known sportsman of this section, a former postmaster at Leesburg and owner of a large commercial apple orchard, was among the 11 indicted. Another was Thomas ("Old Tom") Quesenberry, mountaineer, who is under indictment in Loudoun County Circuit Court here for the slaying of McClary and the shooting of Kirkpatrick.

Hunt Started March 16.

The nine others indicted are Graham T. Legge, manager of Hoge's orchard; Raymond Jewell, Posey S. Phillips, Robert W. Edmonson, Abraham C. Phillips, James Monroe Gray, Clifton Charles Jewell, Shelby Cole and Harry Adams.

Indictments against the 11 men, the slaying of McClary and the shooting of Kirkpatrick are episodes in the story of the hunt for moonshiners which the Federal agents started in Loudoun County March 16. Approaching a still on that date, fire from ambush felled Kirkpatrick. Augmented by Loudoun County officers and Alexandria policemen, the Federal men searched throughout the night for his assailant. At dawn, March 17, Corp. McClary was slain allegedly by Quesenberry, as officers chased the latter through woods and thickets. After the slaying, Virginia State policemen and Coast Guardsmen were called into the chase and Quesenberry was arrested late that day.

Jury Empaneled Monday.

The grand jury was empaneled at Norfolk Monday to hear the testimony of the Federal men. Late yesterday Assistant District Attorney Harry Holt said, according to the Associated Press, the 11 persons were indicted.

L. CLARKE HOGE.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 8.—Federal Judge William C. Coleman today signed an order naming Louis J. Burger as special master for the sale of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric Railway.

The road, now in receivership, has been granted permission by the State Public Service Commission to discontinue service after next September 15.

Burger will name the date for the sale which, under the court order, will take place at the courthouse door in Annapolis. He must advertise the property in newspapers in Baltimore, Cleveland, New York and Washington once each week for the next four weeks.

The property will be sold in separate lots and in its entirety, and Burger is empowered to accept provisionally the bids, the court retaining the power to reject any or all of them.

Permission to discontinue service was granted by the commission following a lengthy hearing at which residents of Anne Arundel County and officials of the Federal Government protested such action. The road petitioned for permission to discontinue service after the recent General Asembly had refused to continue tax exemptions granted the line.

'Open House' Scheduled At McCready Hospital

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., May 9.—The Edward W. McReady Memorial Hospital at Crisfield will hold an "open house" Sunday, which has been designated as National Hospital Day.

Established in November 1923, the Edward W. McReady Memorial Hospital is rounding out its twelfth year. It was erected by Mrs. Caroline P. McReady as a memorial to her husband, Edward W. McReady; her daughter, Susanne McReady, and her daughter's nurse, Miss Henrietta Steinbach, who were killed in a railroad crossing accident at Westover.

Levin Chosen Welfare Aid By Gov. Nice

G. O. P. Takes Control as Mrs. Brown Hands in Resignation.

House and Quenstedt Reported in Line for Warden Jobs.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 8.—Republicans today secured control of the State Board of Welfare with the appointment of former State Senator Harry O. Levin to the vacancy left by the resignation of Mrs. Margaret Brown.

Mrs. Brown's resignation was announced today by Gov. Harry Nice simultaneously with his announcement of the appointment of Levin, who is one of his closest advisers. Levin's term expires the first Monday in May, 1937.

The Republican majority on the board clears the way for appointment of new wardens at the Maryland Penitentiary and the House of Correction, as the board controls those appointment. It has been reported that Samuel W. House, former Baltimore policemen, is in line for the post of warden at the penitentiary and Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt, of Annapolis, for the the House of Correction post.

The Governor's other appointments to the board were made in a "green bag" list sent to the recent General Assembly. They are Charles J. Butler, chairman; Mrs. George W. McCreary and E. T. Foreman. Democratic members are John T. Dailey, Mrs. Elizabeth T. Kent and Dr. Lewellyn F. Barker.

Gov. Nice Rushes Bills To Take Fishing Trip.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 8.—Faced with a chance to go fishing with the Governor of Maine, Gov. Harry W. Nice plans to finish signing bills passed by the recent General Assembly on May 17 and 18.

The Governor today said he would ask Speaker of the House Emanuel Gorfine and President of the Senate Lansdale G. Sasscer to come to Annapolis Friday of next week to complete action on the 400 or so remaining measures. Gorfine and Sasscer also have to sign them.

Included among bills yet unsigned are the controversial "teachers' oath" measure and the bill providing for construction of a bridge across Chesapeake Bay. The Governor declined today to say what action he would take regarding them.

Gov. Louis J. Brann of Maine called on Gov. Nice last month and invited him to a fishing party at Moosehead Lake over the week-end of May 25. Governors of other States and a number of United States Senators also are expected to attend.

Gov. Nice declined today to view with alarm the move by Midwestern young Republicans to reduce the voting power at national conventions of committeemen from the Democratic South, but he outlined a proper formula for such suggestions to go through.

New ideas such as this one, the executive said, are indicative of aroused interest among Republicans. That, he indicated, is healthy for the party, but he warned against stirring up sectional ill will.

"No suggestion, in my opinion, should be hastily made or hastily adopted," said Gov. Nice, who is concededly among the higher ranking members of his party.

"Any proposed change in party policy should first receive the very careful, earnest and calm deliberation of the party conventions in the various States in the first instance, the national committee in the second instance and the national convention in the third instance.

"This will make of all suggestions matters of open debate to be passed upon by the legal representatives of the Republican Party in the various States, the party's legally constituted national committee, and finally the party delegates to the national convention."

Festival Queen

MISS NANCY LETITIA PEERY.

Daughter of Governor to Be Crowned Today at Dogwood Fete.

By the Associated Press.

Bristol, Va., May 8.—Surrounded by a court of princesses chosen from 19 southwest Virginia counties, Miss Nancy Letitia Peery, daughter of the Governor of Virginia, will be crowned queen of the first annual dogwood festival here tomorrow evening.

The city of Bristol, which is collaborating with the Southwest Virginia Chamber of Commerce in staging the festival, today made final preparations for the coronation exercises.

Miss Peery, accompanied by her mother, will be welcomed at the Bristol corporate limits tomorrow afternoon by a group including municipal officials and members of her court.

Amid brilliant lights and against a background of flowers of many hues, she will be crowned queen of the festival at Tenneva Field at 8 p. m. tomorrow. Her coronation will be followed by the premiere performance of a pageant, in which 1,500 persons will participate.

A parade of 6,000 persons will start the length of State street, the city's main thoroughfare, at 2 p. m. Friday. In the march, which will move to the martial strains of nine bands, there will be the 1,500 coronation pageant participants, 1,500 "blue ribbon" health children from Tennessee, as many more "five-point health" children from Virginia, a National Guard unit and a number of floats.

A program of speeches, a band concert and a tea on the King College campus at 4 p. m. and a second presentation of the pageant at 8 p. m. Friday will complete the festival program.

Dogwood trees in the forests along the highways into this mountain city are now in bloom and the streets will be decorated with artificial blooms for the two days.

2 to Go on Trial For Lives Tuesday

State Calls 14 Witnesses at Fredericksburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 8.—Fourteen witnesses were summoned today for the prosecution in the trials of John Shell and Joe Jackson, Negroes indicted for the murder of Mr. and Mrs. T. Coleman. The case will open before Judge Frederick W. Coleman in Spotsylvania Court Tuesday.

A panel of 50 veniremen has been summoned.

Acting on the presumption that the defendants, both of whom have admitted complicity in the crime, will be without counsel when they go to trial, Judge Coleman has designated Harry H. Sager, local attorney to represent them.

K. of P. Will Confer Rank of Page on 150

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 8.—The rank of page will be conferred on approximately 150 candidates, to be known as the Harry W. Nice class, at a meeting of the Knights of Pythias lodges of Carroll County to be held in the State Armory here June 22.

The announcement of the number of candidates was made after a district meeting last night, when it was learned that Gov. Nice, a past grand chancellor of the lodge, will be present when the degrees are conferred in his honor. Reno S. Harp, of Frederick, supreme chancellor of the United States, also will be present.

May Program Arranged.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., May 8.—Senator R. O. Morris, jr., of Lancaster County, will deliver the coronation address at the crowning of the Queen of May at the Heathsville High School sports day exercises, May 18. The program will include a baseball tournament, baby show and May pageant.

Virginia CCC To Be Given 26 New Units

Force Will Be Increased 3,400, With 2,673 More From Within State.

Most of Groups Will Be Assigned to Forest and Park Work.

By the Associated Press.

CCC camps in Virginia will be increased from 63 to 89 and the number of men at work in the State from 12,600 to 18,000.

This was announced yesterday by Robert Fechner, emergency conservation director, who said also the enrollment of Virginians would be 8,300, an increase from 5,627.

The expansion was ordered under the congressional authorization to increase the corps from 350,000 to 600,000 men.

Fechner said the majority of CCC camps in the State would be assigned to forest improvement and protection projects and the development of State and national parks.

Of the total number of camps, 16 will be on national forests, 28 on private forests, 19 in national parks, 16 in State parks, 4 on TVA projects, 2 on soil erosion projects and 4 on military reservations.

The location of the new camps, except those on soil erosion projects, which will be announced later, follow:

National forest camps (7)—At West Augusta, Augusta County; Fulks Run, Rockingham; Sugar Grove, Smythe; Vesuvius, Rockbridge; Alhambra, Amherst; Sedalia, Bedford, and Oronoco, Amherst.

Private forest camps (9)—At Front Royal, Warren; West Point, King and Queen; Clintwood, Dickenson; Moseley, Chesterfield; Amherst, Amherst; Louisa, Louisa; Powhatan, Amelia; Cumberland Courthouse, Berland, and Church Road, Dinwiddie.

State park camps (6)—At Clifton Forge, Allegheny; Marion, Smythe; Bassett, Patrick; Chesterfield, Chesterfield, and two at Joplin, Prince William.

Military reservation camps (4)—Two at Fort Monroe, two at Fort Belvoir.

Annexation Loses In Charlottesville

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 8.—Members of the city council voted unanimously last night to turn down a proposal to annex portions of Belmont, Frys Spring and the University sections after consideration of a report presented by the city engineer.

The report estimated a loss of approximately $13,000 a year for the first five years, during which taxes in the section could not be raised. Expenses for operating the added territory were estimated at $31,000, with revenues of $18,000.

The proposed addition would have added 1,600 to the city's population and 1,500 acres to the territory. It would have constituted a 61 per cent increase in land and a 10.5 per cent increase in population. The cost of installing city services such as sewers, lights and fire plugs was estimated at $60,000.

City Manager Seth Burnley in a letter presenting the report to the council, said the annexation would be of doubtful advantage.

Virginia Losing Rate of Growth In Population

State Planning Board Reports Increase at 5% From 1920 to 1930.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., May 8.—While every State adjoining Virginia was increasing its population from more than 12 to more than 23 per cent between 1920 and 1930, the Old Dominion increased the number of her citizens less than 5 per cent, a Virginia State planning board survey has revealed. Her actual excess of births over deaths entitled her to an increase of 14.4 per cent.

Her accumulated losses of population through migration to other States, from 1910 to 1930, after deducting her gains through emigration to Virginia from other States, had cost the Old Dominion 503,531 people, amounting to approximately the combined populations of the six largest cities in the State, viz.: Richmond, Norfolk, Roanoke, Portsmouth, Lynchburg and Newport News.

The State planning board survey begins with the year 1790, when Virginia (including West Virginia) had a population of 747,610. In 1870, after losing West Virginia, her citizens numbered 1,225,163. Since that time she has gained 1,196,688 citizens, or an annual rate of 1.63 per cent of increase, but retained in 1930 only 2,421,851.

Between 1920 and 1930 the rate of increase decreased quite appreciably for the first time since 1880.

The population increase figures for this period are: Virginia, 4.88; Maryland, 12.54; West Virginia, 18.08; North Carolina, 23.88; District of Columbia, 11.23, and for the United States, 16.14.

During the period from 1920 to 1930 the excess in births over deaths in Virginia was 334,621, which is equivalent to a net increase of 14.4 per cent per decade.

In 1930, 834,442 persons born in Virginia were living in other States, while 330,911 persons born in other States were then residing in Virginia. The net loss by this interchange was therefore 503,531. Not all of this loss was suffered during this decade, but was the accumulation of the net effects of all interchanges up to the 1930 census. Virginia not only lost these citizens, but their natural increase.

The board's report points to the concentrations of population along the salt-water boundaries of the State, near the District of Columbia, around the mines of southwest Virginia and in the Shenandoah Valley and tobacco belt of the south border counties.

The board makes no recommendations at this time for retaining Virginians in the land of their birth, but plans to do so in a report to be issued later in the year.

Harrisonburg Taxes Loud-Speaker Autos

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 8.—While the city council was discussing the placing of a heavy license on "noise wagons" last night, the deliberations were temporarily halted by one of the automobile loud-speaking devices.

Police were sent out to quiet the broadcast and an ordinance placing a $250 license fee on the advertising device was introduced.

Pittsfield Postoffice Robbed.

Pittsville, Md., May 8 (AP).—Federal postal authorities have been notified of theft of $13.50 from the cash drawer of the postoffice here. Sheriff Charles H. Truitt, of Wicomico County, also is conducting an investigation. The robber attempted unsuccessfully to remove hinges from the postoffice safe.

European War Predicted Soon By Gen. Butler

By the Associated Press.

Cape Charles, Va., May 8.—Speaking with his customary enthusiasm, Gen. Smedley Butler today branded war a terrible "racket" and urged the United States to maintain a "hands-off" policy.

"When foreign powers begin to war," he told the Del-Mar-Va Volunteer Firemens Association, "let's hang a small-pox sign on their door and keep away from them. Sell 'em nothing, loan 'em nothing, give 'em nothing and tell 'em nothing."

With amplifiers carrying his voice to the crowd estimated by convention leaders at 2,000 persons, Butler branded Adolf Hitler a tool placed in power by moneyed powers for financial gain and predicted that the next war would be started by Germany at a not far distant date.

At this point he praised the Ludlow bill, pending before Congress, which would prevent a declaration of war except by popular vote in a special election and asserted that the only effective way to outlaw war is through legislation and public opposition to armed conflict.

He urged adequate home defense, but asserted the Nation should adhere rigidly to a hands-off policy in conflicts between foreign nations.

He predicted a European war in the near future with more than 17,000,000 men now under arms, at the same time praising the Administration's foreign policies, which, he said, would keep the United States out of foreign entanglements leading to war.

J. R. Charles, of Federalsburg, Md., was elected president for next year. Other officers named were E. C. Bailey, of Laurel, Del., first vice president; E. B. Jones, of Chincoteague, Va., second vice president; Edward V. Schultz, of Onancock, Va., treasurer, and W. A. Karpa, of Cape Charles, Va., treasurer.

The site of next year's convention will be selected by the executive committee.

Homemakers Clubs to Meet.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 8.—The annual spring meeting of the 19 Carroll County Homemakers clubs will be held Thursday at the loca Methodist Episcopal Church.

Hall Pushes Great Falls Park Link

Chairman of Virginia Commission Promises His Cooperation.

Maryland Held Needed Also for Extension of Highway.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 8.—Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the Virginia conservation and development commission, in correspondence with Albert Shaw, magazine editor, and native Virginian, today promised to lend his aid in "pushing" the proposed continuation of the George Washington Memorial Parkway to the "Great Falls" of the Potomac.

That part of the parkway from the Virginia end of the Memorial Bridge southward to Mount Vernon was approved by Congress in planning for the celebration of Washington's 200th anniversary in 1932.

It now is proposed that the Virginia shore line should be acquired several miles farther north to the Great Falls. Congress has approved the plan to create the Great Falls Park with a bridge across the river with a parkway or boulevard on the Maryland side to connect with the Rock Creek Park in Washington and continue southward along the Maryland shore.

The move now, Mr. Shaw says, necessitates the co-operation of Maryland and Virginia in obtaining private property necessary for the parkway extensions to Great Falls. In this matter Chairman Hall said "Virginia is interested."

Under the proposal now before the National Park Service the parkway would include both banks of the Potomac River from Mount Vernon, 14 miles below the Nation's Capitol, to Great Falls, 10 miles above it, and provide a 50 mile circuit.

By the Associated Press.

Records of the case attacking the Virginia law, under which the Shenandoah Park lands were condemned, were received yesterday at the Supreme Court.

Court attaches said they would be docketed as soon as attorneys for Robert H. Via, of Hershey, Pa., who is attacking the law, put in official appearance and paid necessary fees.

A Policy of Guest Stars Will Be Inaugurated at the National on Monday, May 27

Florence Reed Will Be First In Famous Hit

By Nelson B. Bell.

Beginning on Monday night, May 27, a change of policy in the conduct of the National Theater Players is to be made by Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran of both the theater and the Players.

On that date he will inaugurate a system of bringing guest stars to the stage of the National, to be supported by the roster of the National Players—the stars to be supported, that is; not the stage!

The first visiting artiste under this new arrangement will be Florence Reed in the most famous characterization of her career, Mother-Goddam in John Colton's sensational play of "The Shanghai Gesture." Miss Reed has appeared in this part more than 800 times and has played it in virtually all the important cities of the country. Her engagement here will be for a single week.

Made Debut in Monologue.

Florence Reed is a native of Philadelphia and made her first appearance on the stage at the Fifth Avenue Theater in New York in April, 1901, presenting a monologue. She later played a four-month stock season in the same theater and subsequently joined May Irwin's company to tour in "The Widow Jones" and "Madge Smith, Attorney."

Following these engagements she was starred in "Girls," "Seven Days," "The Typhoon," "The Master in the House" and "The Tempest."

Miss Reed's last professional appearance in Washington was in the role of Christine in Eugene O'Neill's overtime drama, "Mourning Becomes Electra." Previously she was seen as Lady Macbeth in George C. Tyler's all-star production of the Shakespeare tragedy, utilizing the elaborately conceived settings of Gordon Craig, son of the late Ellen Terry.

Was at Actors' Benefit.

A year ago, it will be remembered by those in attendance, Miss Reed made a momentary appearance at the Actors' Fund Benefit, staged in the National Theater, merely to take a bow and pay her respects to Daniel Frohman, venerable president of the fund.

At that time, she told Panjandrum Cochran that she would be delighted some day to appear with his National Players. Recently Mr. Cochran had the opportunity to remind her of her promise and the announcement of her forthcoming engagement is the result.

Negotiations, one is led to believe, are under way for local appearances of others of the most distinguished stars of the native stage, whose names will be announced in due course.

In the meantime, the National Theater Players, as was vaguely hinted in these columns yesterday, are doing an uncommonly fine job with an uncommonly fine farce, by playing "Petticoat Fever," a comedy of the white-hot passions of the Arctic, right up to the hilt.

It occurs to us that in reviewing "Petticoat Fever," since the matter has come up, we utterly neglected to mention a conspicuous further demonstration of the versatility of Roy Roberts, leading man of the company. After having watched him tap dance, play the piano and carol a roundelay or two at the recent birthday party to "Addie" Hibbard, it was perhaps less a surprise to us than to some others in the audience that Mr. Roberts should turn out to be a singer whose voice is worth tossing across those footlights. In "Petticoat Fever," he does well by the ballad, "Love Tiptoed Through My Heart," sung in the original production, still current on Broadway, by Dennis King. I was in hopes he would go into his dance Monday night!

Sisk Scores a Knockout.

Robert Sisk, former director of advertising and publicity for RKO-Radio Pictures, and now a producer in the Hollywood studios of that company, displayed courage in making "The Informer," coming to the screen at RKO-Keith's on Friday, his first release under the new assignment.

"The Informer," previewed yesterday by the drama desks, is a picture that makes use of dramatic elements and methods of treatment that are shunned by many astute manufacturers of celluloid entertainment. Mr. Sisk, with John Ford for director, has converted these theoretically taboo constitutent parts of his dramatic structure—and it is a towering structure—into qualities of utmost artistry and effectiveness.

The action of the picture, for example, takes place entirely at night, between the hours of 6 p. m. and 5:30 a. m. There is not a brilliantly lighted scene or set in the entire footage of the film. A great deal of the story's most vital development is accomplished in poorly lighted streets in the dead of night; other intervals take us into middle-class, barren homes scarcely visible in the feeble flickers of anemic gas jets.

McLaglen Triumphs.

Yet, out of this significantly somber atmosphere has been wrought a drama that reflects the art of the cinema at its highest; a depiction of actuality, the recriminations of guilty consience, the simple tragedy of a mental weakling who is a physical giant and the anguish he brings into the innocent lives of others.

The background is the troublous time of the struggle for freedom on the Emerald Isle. It is treated respectfully, understandingly and pathetically, as was to have been expected of any judicious transcription of Liam O'Flaherty's novel to the screen.

"The Informer," in short, is a picture unique in conception and without a blemish in execution. Based on that divine supplication, "Forgive them, Father, for they know not what they do," and with its action set during the hours of a single night in the foggy, dim-lit streets of Dublin in 1922, it relates a deeply moving, exciting and, at times, humorous story of turbulent days in Ireland—and, beyond any picture in which he ever heretofore has appeared, it reveals Victor McLaglen as an actor of intelligence, versatility and power.

Contrary to expectation, the engagement of George Arliss in the title role of Twentieth Century's "Cardinal Richelieu" will be limited to a single week at Loew's Palace Theater. On Friday of this week it will be succeeded on the screen by the new film version of Victor Hugo's immortal "Les Miserables," with Fredric March in the role of Jean Valjean and Charles Laughton in the part of Javert, the inveterate manhunter. Frances Drake is cast in the role of foremost feminine importance.

Could there have been just a trifle too much of Mr. Arliss on the local screens of late, one wonders—what with "The Iron Duke" and "Richelieu" trampling on the heels of one another?

Despite the perfected technique of his acting, a majority of this distinguished mime's historical characters are, after all, merely George Arliss in various costumes and disguises.

Two Old-Timers Coming.

"McFadden's Flats," the Paramount camera version of the popular American play by Gus Hill, comes to Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater on Friday, with Walter C. Kelly, the "Virginia Judge," of vaudeville fame, and Andy Clyde in the roles of the feudist pals, McFadden and MacTavish.

First National made "McFadden's Flats" back in 1927 with Charlie Murray and Chester Conklin in the respective roles. Many new situations and comedy devices are said to have been added to the script since then.

Gus Hill, at one time America's foremost translator of newspaper comedy cartoon strips into terms of popular-priced stage entertainment, was last seen in the Capital with Joe Laurie, Jr's., company of old-timers on the stage at Loew's Fox Theater. His bit was a club-swinging turn, for which he once held the Police Gazette medal and championship, or something of the sort.

Known for years to local vaudeville audiences for his inimitable Virginia court skits, Walter C. Kelly, latterly, has blossomed out as a character actor of no mean measure. He had the lead in Maxwell Anderson's Pulitzer prize-winner, "All Your Houses," season before last, and early this season supported Fred Stone in "Jayhawker" at the National.

Remember?

"R. U. R." the fantastic melodrama by the Czechoslovakian playwright, Karel Capek, will be presented by the Cue and Curtain Club of the George Washington University, in Wardman Park Theater tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock. The play, which satirizes man's inclination to become subservient to his machines, foretells the destruction of human life by a world populated by robots. Adele Cusack, Edward Stevlingson and John P. Rappolt, jr., play the featured human roles. Special two-piano music, composed by Robert Greenwell and played by Jacqueline Churchill and William Bates, will heighten the bizarre atmosphere of melodramatic tension that characterizes the greater part of the play. A chorus of 16 will take part in the march of the revolting robots that forms the climax of the action.

Mr. Crosby Cashes In.

Bing Crosby's racing stable, consisting of a couple or so of battered bangtails that have not as yet shown any determination to step down in front under his ownership—begging your pardon, Mr. Haight—apparently need not worry about the minor matter of oats. Mr. Crosby will be able to pay for the feed-bag, whether his goats are chased in by the other entries or chase the other entries in.

I mean to say that Mr. Bing has just got himself a nice raise in pay. The new figure is $75,000 a picture, with nine pictures scheduled for him by Paramount in the next three years. That adds up to something like $675,000 even, unreliable mathematician that I am.

If that isn't enough to buy the oats and the hay for the hosses and milk for the twins, the Bingo can draw on that $5,000 a week he gets for airing his defective vocal cords through a radio microphone, or he might even cut into the funds that roll in as royalties from the sale of phonograph records. The lad is getting on.

His former contract is said to have called for a beggarly $3,500 per week. The guy was practically in the bread line!

"Sins of Love," second attraction at the Little Playhouse, as Impresario Sam Cummins prefers to have it called, got off to a flying feminine start yesterday before audiences composed entirely and exclusively of women. This is the revelatory obstetrical subject made in Zurich, Switzerland, that has created something of a furor in the West and now is on view, also, in Baltimore. The bill is augumented by a companion attraction that is said to complete a bill that is primarily informative, rather than deliberately and indelicately sensational.

Enthusiasm Note.

As may already have been gathered from preceding remarks, the first film produced for RKO-Radio by Robert Sisk. "The Informer," coming into RKO-Keith's on Friday, is a superlatively fine strip of gelatin.

Sisk, Boom, Bah! is what the cheering section probably would have to say about it!

A Squealer and His "Moll" Get a Bit Tough

In "The Informer," RKO-Radio's picturization of Liam O'Flaherty's novel of the Irish Rebellion, opening at RKO-Keith's on Friday, Washington picture-goers will witness one of the most remarkable film plays of the season. In it, Victor McLaglen takes on new stature as an actor, and Margot Grahame, brought over from England, bids fair to establish herself as a favorite in her American debut. A long and distinguished cast contribute to the strength of the film's considerable length. Mr. McLaglen and Miss Grahame are pictured above in a tense moment.

D. C. Sands Enters Race For County Supervisor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., May 8.—Daniel C. Sands, of Middleburg, sportsman, civic leader and banker, today announced his candidacy for supervisor from Mercer District at the Democratic primary in August. Mr. Sands, who came to Middleburg from New York 25 years ago, has long been a leader in the county. He is master of fox hounds, Middleburg Hunt, and the noted Glenwood race course is located on his estate.

He is a director and former president of the Middleburg National Bank. He has been president of the Loudoun County Health Association for 15 years.

Father and Son Held as Killers For Insurance

Burned Body of Stranger Found Planted in Ashes of Parent's Auto.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., May 8.—A confession that he murdered a man whose identity he did not even know in an effort to defraud insurance companies was obtained late today, according to Assistant District Attorney W. G. Andrew, from Frank Di Stasio, 51, Revere candy shop proprietor.

The confession was announced shortly after Di Stasio and his son, Anthony, 23, were indicted for murder in the first degree.

According to Andrew, the elder Di Stasio said he expected the victim's body to be identified as his own and that the son would benefit through $12,500 insurance on his life.

Andrew related that Di Stasio said he knew the victim only as "Dan," a man he picked up in Boston and took for a ride to Hudson.

There the body was found Monday in Di Stasio's burned automobile, so badly charred that police said legal identification probably would forever remain undetermined.

A medical examiner found that the head had been crushed, legs and arms broken, probably by being run over with an automobile, but that there was evidence life was not extinct when the oil-saturated victim was consigned to the flames.

The indictments of the Di Stasios represented the first time in the State's history two men have stood accused of murder in the first degree of an unidentified victim.

Earlier in the day, Boston police announced they had obtained a statement from the younger man that on Monday, in his own car, he followed his father and another man in his father's car to Hudson. Police said the son told them he remained 100 yards behind his father's car when it stopped and after a short interval drove his father to Boston, but had no knowledge of the crime.

The elder Di Stasio was picked up by a policeman in Boston's automobile district today and told a rambling story of his whereabouts during the past few days.

After father and son had been questioned by State and city police they were brought to Cambridge for further interrogation by District Attorney Warren L. Bishop.

State officers and Hudson and Boston police testified briefly before a Middlesex County grand jury and indictments were promptly returned.

The district attorney said the father and son would be arraigned as soon as possible, probably tomorrow morning.

Arguments Friday on Move to Upset Convictions in Gambling Case.

Citing ten instances in which Justice Joseph W. Cox allegedly erred in the conduct of his trial, "Big Sam" Beard, convicted as head of a gaming syndicate, yesterday launched a counter-attack on the Government's efforts to send him to jail.

The move came in a motion for a new trial, Beard and his 12 co-defendants having been found guilty Monday of charges of violating the District's anti-gaming laws. Justice Cox announced he would hear oral arguments Friday.

Attorneys for the convicted men claimed the verdict was contrary to the law and the evidence. They said Justice Cox should have granted their request for a directed acquittal. The attorneys also filed a request that none of the defendants be sentenced because of four errors committed in denying motions to quash the indictment.

Beard and his associates were convicted after an eight-day trial in which the Government charged they were conducting a gaming place in the Mather Building. The prosecution asserted there was sufficient telephone apparatus in Beard's place to make 1,600 calls simultaneously.

Hollywood

The Exhibitors

Hollywood, May 8.

THE LOOK to the road to see how the flickers are faring after they leave the bigger towns is always interesting, and the comments of the hinterland showmen in the Motion Picture Herald seems to indicate that their audiences are slowly acquiring the taste of city folks.

The picture "Sequoia" was no world beater at the box offices of the cinema palaces, yet the business it is doing in the nickelodeons is surprising. It was termed a big town picture. Yet it is doing just as good business, proportionately, in the sticks. Exhibitor Charles Born, of Prescott, Ariz., writes: "One of the most remarkable pictures ever filmed. 'Sequoia' is unique in story substance, interest holding and appealing entertainment qualities . . . Give it a longer run than the other stuff—'it advertises itself.'" Another so-called highbrow flicker, which even in the cities had to play the so-called film art theaters there, is doing all right when properly handled in the hinterland. The picture is "Thunder Over Mexico."

• • • •

Exhibitor Albert Hefferan, of Grand Rapids, Mich., managed to sell it to his audience, and has this to say: "This is truly a great picture . . . It broke all box office records for three years . . . People actually stood up and cheered after it was over. It was so impressing. People came from all over to see this picture. I, myself, do not think that I have ever seen such a picture before . . . Every one who saw it expressed his appreciation of it . . . This shows that people want pictures that are different . . . If it is advertised right it will do business for you . . ."

• • • •

THE OPINION expressed by Exhibitor Warner McLaughlin, of Fort Henry, N. Y., concerning "The Whole Town's Talking" cites the general consensus. He writes: "Here is a very fine picture, but it did not draw well. For some reason, Robinson does not draw, and Columbia should select better titles for their pictures. Those who saw it were well pleased."

This seems to have happened to "The Whole Town's Talking" since it had its initial performance at the Radio City Music Hall. The movie critics gave it good reviews, but the picture disappointed at the box office. It has been doing likewise throughout the country. Some executives at Columbia believe that the title hindered it somewhat; it originally was called "Passport to Fame," and those who insisted on keeping that title, of course, believe that it would have fared better with that moniker. There are the others who believe that Edward G. Robinson alone is not enough to get them in at the box office. Warners, to whom Robinson is under contract, believe this, for they want Edward G. to have an all-star cast in his next flicker. It is intended to sandwich him between Paul Muni and Bette Davis in "Dr. Socrates."

• • • •

Big towns and small towns agree again, and this time the flicker is "The Night Is Young," of which great things were expected by Metro. Exhibitor A. E. Hancock, of Columbia City, Ind., agrees with the professional reviewers when he writes: "Another artistic failure? Beautiful, no doubt, but it is one of those princess and prince things that the producers must put out once in a while. Personally, I think that Novarro is getting through, and that, outside of Laye's voice, she looked too old for the part she took. If prestige will pay your bills, this is your meat, but if you have to use money then you will be out of luck, or at least that is the writer's experience."

• • • •

TWO CHILD stars. One becomes America's doll friend, the biggest box office attraction in flickers today, and the other merely receives fine reviews, and is said to be a great actress by the critics, but doesn't become the pet of audiences. The doll friend is Shirley Temple. The child who has the reviews for her pressbook is Nova Pilbeam.

Writing about "Little Friend," Exhibitor W. H. Hardman of Frankfort, Kans., says: "The child actress was good. Picture did not do average business." And that's what they all had to say.

Concerning Shirley Temple in "Bright Eyes," Exhibitor Charles Summers of Selling, Okla., writes: "Swell! Elegant! Supreme! And, of course, colossal. And all other adjectives referring thereto. Packed the house two times in one night, here in a hamlet of 500. They even drove 50 miles to see this one." And if you believe this is something, read Exhibitor F. Bernard Money, jr., of Lexington, N. C., on "The Little Colonel." He writes: "I was wondering if this would compare with 'Bright Eyes.' Had no doubts after the box office had been open one hour . . . Passed 'Bright Eyes' at the box office by a mile."

• • • •

They didn't like "The Private Life of Don Juan" in the big towns, the small towns, and even in London, where it was fashioned. Exhibitor E. A. Reynolds, of Princeton, Minn., is practically an international critic when he writes: "This picture draws like a broken cigar. Eighty-four minutes of misery for the audience and the ushers. You couldn't break even with this picture if they shipped it out with a $10 bill in the can."

Nats Hand St. Louis Tenth Straight Loss in 'Walkathon,' 10-9

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, May 8.

HE doesn't bet, except at his own odds, and he'll tell you frankly that you can win on a horse race but that you can't beat the races. If you're a prospective customer at his bookmaking establishment he's apt to greet you with a "Hello, Sucker, what'll you have?" and then remind you that all hoss players must inevitably die broke.

POVICH.

But old Tom Kearney's tired now. He was telling me this evening that he needs a rest. He's 71 now, been making book here on the banks of the Mississippi nigh onto 50 years, man and boy, and allows as how he'll take a month's rest at Hot Springs, starting tomorrow. Says he can afford it even if he did drop $5,000 on his winter book when Omaha galloped home in the Kentucky Derby.

There was three months' work gone to pot, he said. Was up early and late quoting prices and covering bets on the Derby horses in his winter books, only to see the horse he least wanted to win step down. Kearney laid 10 to 1 against Omaha a month ago and Eastern interests gobbled it up. Had Plat Eye, Boxthorn or even Nellie Flag won he'd have cleaned up close to a hundred grand, but Old Tom isn't beefing.

Old Tom graduated from the Vulcan Iron Works here into a barkeep before he was 20, and thence into bookmaking when he discovered that people insisted on betting. He's bald and paunchy now, and fingers a huge watch chain charm in the best approved manner of the affluent bookmaker. He fits perfectly into his surroundings here on Twelfth street, opposite the Jefferson Hotel.

KEARNEY'S cigar store, gambling headquarters in St. Louis, is of narrow frontage, but it opens into as elaborate a bookmaking establishment as you'll find west of New York. Cashiers at the windows are seeing what the boys in the back rooms will have in the way of race bets, and trunk lines to all the big tracks give a running description of all races.

There's a breath of the old West about the place, too. Rare prints of mustachioed faro dealers accommodating roughnecks in mining garb adorn the walls. A sun-visored croupier superintends the craps table in a picture that cost Old Tom thousands, and overhanging his own desk is an old print of a bucking-the-tiger game in which the banker looks suspiciously like the late Tex Rickard.

Autographed pictures of the late John McGraw, Pop Anson, Willie Keeler and other baseball immortals decorate the walls and there's a typical horse portrait of Aristides, the first Derby winner, occupying a place of honor at the back of the betting room. In the morning, before the trade comes along, the place is actually ghosty.

They let Old Tom operate here in St. Louis because nobody has taken the trouble to complain. Liquor not only is not sold on the premises, but is not tolerated. They have laws, Old Tom admits, but the town is wide open, and his place is orderly. As for himself, he holds no illusions about his business. He calls it a "necessary nuisance." Undercover gambing would be far worse and would bring violence, he says.

I ASKED him if the Chicago mob of the '20s ever bothered him, ever attempted to muscle in his establishment here, and Old Tom laughed.

"They never gave me any trouble," he said. "I guess they read in the papers what happened down at my place on Walnut street back in 1924. That was the night around closing time that a coupla stick-up men paid me a visit. They carried one of 'em out of there deader than King Tut. I was always handy with a gat myself. I didn't figure to have much trouble that way after that."

The winter books on the Derbies have been profitable, Old Tom was saying. The public likes the big odds, and, as a rule, they make the mistake of going for the star 2-year-olds of the year before, despite the fact that a horse seldom holds its 2-year-old form. Kearney pointed out that no winner of the Belmont Futurity for 2-year-olds, first run back in the '80s, ever won the Kentucky Derby of the following year.

Old Tom likes to tell about one bet he paid off with a smile. It was in the spring of 1927 when a grease-begrimed lad from the local airport asked the odds on Lindbergh's flight to Paris. He had $300 to bet that Lindy would make it.

"If I had known that the Flying Fool was circling the city right then and had just completed 30 hours in the air on a test flight, I wouldn't have taken the bet," said Old Tom. "But I took that $300 at even money, and when that kid landed at Le Bourget Field his mother wasn't any more proud of him than I was."

Legs Gone, Canzoneri Plans To Stop Ambers in 4 Rounds

By Paul Gallico,

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Pinned to a bed and wrestling feebly with a germ acquired in the damp environs of Louisville, this department may not be able to get to the Ambers-Canzoneri lightweight championship prize fight at Madison Square Garden Friday evening. I would like to see that fight like the very Dickens—with one exception. If Canzoneri is going to be badly beaten up or knocked out, I would rather be some place else. Canzoneri belongs to the old order. The old order passes. Tempus fugits alarmingly, and I don't think that Tony can go 15 rounds any more. The last four rounds of his fight with Harry Dublinsky in Brooklyn last summer were fought on nerve alone. They say that Tony has trained for a four-round fight and that if he doesn't knock Ambers out in that time he will lose and probably be stopped himself. That is a big assortment to stop a man as shifty and fast as Ambers in 12 minutes.

If Canzoneri's legs lose their spring in the late rounds of his prize fight with Ambers he is going to endure some pretty terrible trials. Ambers is the perpetual puncher type who hammers on your flesh with niggling persistency until there is no single spot that is not bruised and sore. He will cut eyes and nose and lips and cheekbones and Tony has many pieces of scar tissue over his eyes that open easily and bleed, and his face today puffs more easily than it ever did.

He still has a stout heart, an unquenchable pugnacity and a fine right hand with which he will try to bring Ambers low, the same Ambers who used to be his sparring partner when Tony was champion.

Ambers should win, but there are few who won't go to the Garden hoping to see a miracle, a Canzoneri with a new lease on ring life, or a whizzing punch dropping out of the nowhere onto Ambers' chin and Canzoneri re-elected lightweight championship. Ambers will win it eventually. It wouldn't hurt him to postpone it a year or so.

3-Run Rally Futile For Browns

Linke Holds Enemy in Ninth as Pinch Hitters Stage Uprising.

Washington Staggers to Victory as Homers Rattle Off Bats.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

SPORTSMANS PARK, St. Louis, Mo., May 8.—The losing streak of the Browns reached round figures today when they managed to collect their tenth straight defeat despite a three-run rally in the ninth and three home runs that rolled off their bats. The beating came in the form of a walkathon, with the Nats strolling into an 8-4 lead and staggering into a 10-9 victory.

The 400 folk in the stands watched with unbelieving eyes as the Browns assumed a 4-3 lead in the second inning, but they saw matters return to normalcy in the fifth when the Browns surrendered five runs and the lead to the Nats on only two hits.

There was, however, the item of four walks that Big Bob Weiland and Jack Knott threw into the proceedings. Three of the Nats' runs in that big fifth inning were jammed across the plate when the St. Louis pitchers chose a time when the bases were filled to walk three batters.

Lead Wiped Out.

Before it was all over the hapless Browns had seen their 4-3 lead wiped out and the Nats go to the front, 8 to 4.

The lone measure of consolation for the Browns was whatever satisfaction they gained in knocking Monte Weaver and Jack Russell from the box, the pair of home runs socked by Sammy West, a Washington alumnus, and the homer smacked by Beau Bell. Ed Linke finally put down the uprising for the Nats in the ninth when the Browns had the tying run on base.

The luckless Browns fell behind 1-0 in the first inning when Cecil Travis, in attempting to duck a high fast one, got his bat in the way of Weiland's pitch and scored Myer from second base on a fluke single, marking the eighth consecutive game in which the Browns' opposition has scored in the first inning.

West's homer atop the roof in the right tied the score for the Browns, but the Nats went ahead, 3-1, in the second only to see the Browns pound Weaver out of the box in a three-run uprising in the same inning and take the lead, 4-3.

Weiland Falters.

Weiland was not so good in the fifth. Manush led off with a single and walk to Kuhel, and Clift's error filled the bases. Weiland's walk to Bolton forcer Manush in with the tying run and Knott relieved Weiland. He walked Powell to force Kuhel over the plate, and then walked Pinch Hitter Sington to force the inning's third run over. At this point Buddy Myer made it five for the inning with a single through the box that scored two runs.

Coppola had held the Browns in check after the second inning, but the task of protecting their 8-to-4 lead was given to Jack Russell after the fifth. He staggered out of the game in the ninth with the tying run on base after Jake Powell's dou-

Pearson Shuts Out Boston for Indians, 2-0

Cleveland, May 8 (AP).—Monte Pearson pitched the Cleveland Indians to a 2-to-0 shut-out victory over the Boston Red Sox today. He allowed only four hits.

Lefty Grove, Red Sox southpaw, yielded six hits to the Tribe before retiring after seven innings, when the third finger of his right hand was injured by a line drive.

Entries Set Mark In Hampton Show

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hampton, Va., May 8.—All previous records for entries have been broken for the Hampton Horse Show to be held here May 17 and 18, although nominations do not close until Friday.

Among those showing will be Mrs. Allan Potts, dean of Virginia women exhibitors, of Happy Creek, who has six entries in the hunt events. Other prominent exhibitors will include Miss Roselyn Sykes, of Branchville; Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Oyster, of Clean Drinking Farm, Chevy Chase; L. R. Colbert, of Fredericksburg, and Edwin Vaughan, of Fredericksburg.

Mrs. Frank M. Andrews, wife of Brig. Gen. F. M. Andrews; Harry B. Thornton, of Bradsfordsville, Ky.; H. M. Lutrell, Deleplane, and Ray H. Norton, Washington, will be judges for the horse show.

Chisox Whip Yankees in Slugfest

Win, 7-4, as New York Homers Fail to Stop Winning Streak.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 8.—The White Sox weathered an early-inning barrage of three home runs and a triple by the Yankees to gain a 7-to-4 triumph as their celebration of Jimmie Dykes' first anniversary as their manager. It was their tenth straight home victory and kept them perched on top of the standing.

Rallies which netted two runs in the third and three in the fourth, both helped along by 42-year-old Sam Jones, knocked bespeckled Johnny Broaca from the mound for his first defeat of the season. Jones, who steadied in the late inning, went the route for his third victory. He gave the Yanks only seven hits.

Broaca's departure kept intact the spreeing Chicagoans' record of not allowing an enemy starting pitcher to finish a game at Comiskey Park this season.

The Sox, however, saw their "first blood" record dented as Jesse Hill, Yankee lead-off man, tripled in the first inning and scored on Red Rolfe's fly. It was only the third time in their 17 games that the Hose had allowed the opposition to score first.

Athletics Beat Detroit, 7-6; Collect 16 Hits

Detroit, May 8 (AP).—Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics pounded a pair of Detroit pitchers for 16 hits and a 7-to-6 victory this afternoon.

Roy Johnson contributed two home runs, one coming in the eighth with two mates aboard, but it was left to the rookie Alex Hooks to turn the trick that saved the game. Hooks pinch-batted in the ninth with two men aboard, and singled to right to drive in two runs that won the ball game for Philadelphia.

Rogers Fans 17 To Beat Navy For Virginia

Southpaw Allows Only 2 Hits and Scores Own Winning Run.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 8.—Orlin Rogers, star southpaw hurler of the University of Virginia, pitched in masterly form here today to register a 1-to-0 victory over the Annapolis Midshipmen in a game that was well played throughout, despite the few miscues chalked against each team.

It might well be said that the game was 90 per cent Rogers. He let the Middies down with two hits, had the remarkable number of 17 strike-outs to his credit, issued only two passes, was calm under all conditions, fielding his position faultlessly, and his single in the fourth inning paved the way for the orphan tally that was to decide the battle.

Opposing Rogers on the mound was Griff Sexton, ace of the Navy box artists, who also hurled effectively.

The strike-out record of Rogers was all the more impressive by reason of the fact that he retired the side through that medium in the first, third and seventh frames, and not a Middy failed to bow to his sharp shoots at least once. Capt. Johnny Knapper fanned in three out of his four trips to the plate, while Tommy King went down four straight.

Rogers led off in the fourth with a single and went to second on Bouldin's sacrifice. Hooff was safe on King's error, Rogers advancing to third. Carter, attempting a sacrifice, popped a fly which was gathered in by King, and the latter threw to first in an effort to double Hooff. The runner got back safely, however. Sexton, who covered the bag, launched a throw to the plate as Rogers raced home, but the ball caromed off Hooff's head and Rogers scored.

Ace Opposition Faces Omaha Saturday

Preakness Racers Readied as Sun's Warmth Dries Track.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, May 8.—A stern Preakness battle, despite the heavy backing for Omaha, was heralded today as the candidates for Saturday's classic began pounding Pimlico's turf in work-outs for the mile and three-sixteenths test, $25,000 added value.

An overwhelming favorite to take the Preakness as he did the Kentucky Derby, Omaha was in fine fettle as he galloped around the track. He turned in what was considered a phenomenal workout by breezing a mile in 1:44 1-5 on a heavy track, swinging along in a free, effortless stride. He was clocked for 9 furlongs, starting at the quarter-mile post, as follows: 0:25 1-5, 0::37 2-5, 0:50 2-5, 1:03 1-5, 1:16 3-5, 1:30 1-5, 1:44 1-5, 1:58 1-5.

This showing was taken as a definite warning that the big son of Gallant Fox would be mighty hard to beat in Pimlico's fixture, but a half dozen others of the thoroughbreds being put on edge to challenge him likewise showed good form.

Boxthorn New Threat.

Still a new threat to the William Woodward colt was added to the potential field in a telegram from Trainer H. Thompson that E. R. Bradley's Boxthorn had been shipped from Louisville as a probable starter. This son of Blue Larkspur wound up sixteenth in the Derby but Bradley apparently does not feel that he ran his race there and will have him on hand to bear his colors in the Preakness.

Bradley already has Boxthorn's half sister, Bloodroot, and another

Dean was ejected from the game by Umpire Dolly Stark for his protests over called balls after he had forced over a run in the third inning by passing Danny Taylor with the bases full.

Churchill Downs Suspends Meade

By the Associated Press.

Churchill Downs, May 8.—After meting out a five-day suspension to Jockey Don Meade, contract rider for Col. E. R. Bradley, for rough tactics astride Glitter Glow, winner of the second race at Churchill Downs today, stewards wired officials of Pimlico that they had no objections to Meade's riding Col. Bradley's Boxthorn in the Preakness Saturday.

A similar wire, sent Pimlico stewards following Meade's 30-day suspension as a result of the jockey's stretch battle with Herb Fisher, on Head Play, coming down the stretch aboard Broker's Tip in the 1933 Kentucky Derby was disregarded by the Maryland track officials, and Broker's Tip finished last in the Preakness that year under Jockey J. Four Scores Of 72 Tie On Links

A FOUR-WAY tie resulted in the Woodmont Country Club Invitation Golf Tournament yesterday when Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, heavy favorite, and Hickman Greene, of Manor, turned in scores of 72 each, to match the rounds of Volney Burnett, of Indian Spring, and Dr. W. F. Hayes, unattached, posted Tuesday.

Peacock, stroking in old-time form and making but few mistakes with his approaches, went out in 37 and returned in 35, while Greene shot a brace of 36s.

Greene, former Louisiana University golf captain, looked over a curling 20-footer on the final green that would have given him the medal had he sunk the putt. His ball finished to the left of the pin.

Over par on the third, fifth and twelfth holes, Peacock collected but one birdie, that coming on the thirteenth hole. Greene bagged three birdies, registering his first on the long sixth; his second on the short eighth, where he got a deuce, and his third on the tenth, where he sank a 10-footer for a 3.

Whereas seven of the participants broke 80 the first day, ten crashed the mark yesterday. Four of the players, Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood; Col. H. C. Dagley, Congressional; Sam Parks, unattached, and Max Taylor, Beaver Dam, tied with 79, had to play off for three qualifying positions. Taylor lost on the first hole, taking a 5, as the other three secured par 4s.

Harry Pitt, veteran Manor golfer, qualified with 78, and Bill Harvey, also of Manor, had a 75. Pitt, off form on the first nine, took a 40. J. A. O'Brien, Georgetown University golfer, qualified with a 76.

Workman Rides Collateral to Length Victory in Feature Race

Daily Double Again Pays Low Price

Boston Brook Second to C. V. Whitney Entry in Game Duel.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Baltimore, May 8.—Sonny Workman, Washington's gift to the saddle profession, rode his way to victory this afternoon in the feature race. Wearing the light blue and brown of the C. V. Whitney Stable, Workman had a willing partner in Collateral, a big son of St. Germans. He needed a good horse, too, for Boston Brook, of Bowie "poison" fame, was in a running mood and made a game battle of it, losing by a length in the struggle to the pay-off point. The unruly Indian News was third in a field of eight.

The contest was a graded B handicap and was run over a drying-out track in 1:47 3-5, creditable time under the conditions. Some 7,000 witnessed the program, which was without a jumping race due to absence of entries.

Daily Double Pays $16.30.

The day's daily double again proved a "dud" as far as bringing a fortune to its backers was concerned. The winning combination was that of City Slicker and Accolade and paid $16.30. However, the pay-off topped a parlay on the two horses.

Jockey Hank Lindberg suffered painful injuries as the result of being tossed over the head of his mount, Chisel, in the first race. The horse's head struck the boy in the mouth and he bit his tongue severely and while tumbling to the ground he was cut over the right eye. He was treated at the track hospital.

Boston Brook threatened to run away with the feature race. He galloped along in front under Eddie Arcaro's urging and it was not until Collateral, held under restraint, was turned loose that the son of Bostonian could be dislodged.

Favorite Wins Opener.

City Slicker, representing the A. G. Vanderbilt forces, won just as he was supposed to do in the opening sprint for Maryland-breds and proved the shortest-priced winner of the meeting at a $2.90 mutuel. Given a hurrying front ride by Jockey Les Fallon, City Slicker bounded to the wire a half length in front of the heavily weighted Manager Bill. Waswanappi was third, far back.

The cry of the long-shot players making their kill marked the second race. High Santa, ridden by Eddie Watters, romped home at a $49 mutuel. The son of High Cloud set most of his own pace, but had to be ridden out to stave off the closing charge of Flosilda. Zuni, the Whitneyite, was third in the field of ten juveniles.

That this is Christmas' week here was further emphasized in the third race when Accolade, owned and trained by Don Christmas, of Upper Marlboro, made a show of his field at six furlongs. The race saw Acautaw, the generally reliable gelding, again fail, running out of the money. Second honors went to Candescent with Fervid third. Accolade did all his running on the outside of the field and caught Fervid and Acautaw rounding the turn for the stretch. The rest was a formality. The mutuel was $8.70.

Stewards Call Jockeys.

Grand Girl, at a $23.90 mutuel, won the fourth race. Sobriety, Fallon up, and Sandy Mack, Workman up, were battling for the lead in the stretch and it appeared that the riders were fighting. In the meanwhile, Grand Girl, running free, scooted up on the outside to win going away. Fallon and Workman were called in front of the stewards, but the order of finish stood.

The sixth race went to Marmion, ridden by Jockey A. Abel, who also owns and trains the veteran. Alwintour was second and Good Cheer third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CITY SLICKER, $2.90, $2.20, $2.20. MANAGER BILL, $2.50, $2.80. WASWANAPPI, $5.70.

CITY SLICKER assumed command shortly after the start, was steadied in front while saving ground and was only mildly shaken up to stall off MANAGER BILL. Latter, allowed to settle in his best stride, came through on the inside of WASWANAPPI entering the home stretch, responded to punishment and was going strongly at the end. WASWANAPPI raced strongly while following CITY SLICKER but weakened fast in the final drive. FLOWER TIME could not menace. SMALL CHANGE had no mishaps. ROCK SPRAY tired. CHISEL lost his rider when the start came.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $900. The Mackenzie Maiden. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good from gate. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:54. Off at 2:59½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's ch. c. (2), by High Cloud—Donna Santa. Trained by H. Baker. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 0:56.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ACCOLADE, $8.70, $4.80, $4.00. CANDESCENT, $6.00, $4.60. FERVID, $6.30.

ACCOLADE kept out in the firmer footing while racing within striking distance of the leaders, assumed command when midway of the turn, then drew out readily. CANDESCENT worked her way into contention on the inside, saved a lot of ground and finished gamely. FERVID went strongly from the inside, saved a lot of ground taken out of him getting the front while on the turn, but tired under his weight. CANDY FEAST was held safe. HAPPY INVER stopped.

FOURTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $900. The Mackenzie (second division). For 2-year-old maidens. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:55. Off at 3:59½. Winner, Boomar Stable's br. or blk. f. (2), by Jean Valjean—Donna Roma. Trained by R. E. Potts. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 3-5, 0:56 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRAND GIRL, $23.90, $7.30, $3.30. SOBRIETY, $3.70, $2.40. SANDY MACK, $2.30.

GRAND GIRL, away well but outrun for the first 3 furlongs, swung to the outside entering the home stretch, came strongly under a drive and was up right at the end. SOBRIETY went into a brief lead while on the outside of SANDY MACK. Latter, strongly urged and held on courageously. SANDY MACK was game fast, forced a steady pace and continued willingly until the end. EASTWARD went on the outside early speed. DAME QUICKLY showed resolutely for the final issue. MORUN lacked early speed. PEACEFUL was held safe. JAY JAY could not reach contention.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. The Holly Beach. (Second division). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates and chute. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:28. Off at 4:33. Winner, A. J. Abel's ch. g. (6), by Pot Au Feu—Bourse. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:15.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARMION, $5.40, $3.90, $2.90. ALWINTOUR, $9.80, $4.70. GOOD CHEER, $3.80.

MARMION kept out in the firmer footing until well settled in his stride, reached the leaders rapidly, then drew out nicely after taking command and approaching the home stretch. ALWINTOUR wore down SUNNY HOME, but could not resist the winner after saving a great deal of ground. GOOD CHEER was carried very wide into the home stretch when moving into contention and was held safe in the closing fast. HIGH TORQUE went well-placed early, but weakened in the closing issue. VENETIAN broke slowly and could never reach contention. CHINESE INDIAN went well for a half mile. SUNNY HOME stopped.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. The Pimlico Graded Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:57. Off at 5:00. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLLATERAL, $4.80, $4.20, $3.80. BOSTON BROOK, $7.10, $4.40. INDIAN NEWS, $5.80.

COLLATERAL, secured racing room on the inside in the first six furlongs to reach a forward position, went to the outside of BOSTON BROOK when reaching the final turn, responded to severe punishment and took command in the last sixteenth. BOSTON BROOK, steadied in front while setting the pace, saved ground for the entire trip and held on well when challenged. INDIAN NEWS was under pressure from the start and was best of the others. SLIPPER KING could not improve his position in the last stages. FLAMING MAMIE was never a factor. ST. MORITZ had no excuses. CREDULOUS stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. The Windsor Hills. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:28. Off at 5:31. Winner J. V. Stewart's br. c. (4), by St. Henry Crock o' Gold—Trained by owner. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:50, 1:16 3-5, 1:43 2-5, 1:50 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLIGHT OF GOLD, $16.80, $7.80, $4.40. ORTHOPRISM, $7.40, $4.50. LAST ROMANCE, $3.40.

FLIGHT OF GOLD took the lead in the first flight after reaching the back stretch, responded to punishment in the last three sixteenths, then closed with good energy to wear ORTHOPRISM down in the last 50 yards. ORTHOPRISM sprinted clear in the first six furlongs, was shaken up stoutly when challenged and held on gamely under a strong drive. LAST ROMANCE went to the outside when bettering her position, closed willingly, but could not threaten the first two.

FLIGHT OF GOLD took the lead in the first flight after reaching the back stretch, responded to punishment in the last three sixteenths, then closed with good energy to wear ORTHOPRISM down in the last 50 yards. ORTHOPRISM sprinted clear in the first six furlongs, was shaken up stoutly when challenged and held on gamely under a strong drive. LAST ROMANCE went to the outside when bettering her position, closed willingly, but could not threaten the first two.

Game This Week.
Roosevelt vs. Western.

By John R. Vosburgh.

LEFTY JOE SULLIVAN, Eastern High's super southpaw, picked up where he left off last year yesterday, pitching a favored Tech team dizzy with 13 strike-outs and 3 hits to lead a young and green Lincoln Park combination to an easy 6-to-1 victory in the third interhigh series game of the season.

The victory served to nicely entangle the current race with Eastern and Roosevelt, each with a win and no defeats to its credit, tied for the top. A crowd of a few hundred watched the game played at Eastern.

So effortlessly and smoothly did the lanky left-hander turn back what was supposed to be a hard-hitting Tech outfit that his inexperienced teammates took on many of the aspects of a veteran outfit. In only three innings did Sullivan have to face more than three Tech batters and over the last four innings he pitched no-hit, no-run ball. He fanned three pinch-hitters on 11 pitched balls to end the game.

It was Sullivan's fifth straight series victory, falling in line with the four impressive triumphs which he hurled to carry Eastern to the championship last year.

Pookies Answer Prayer.

While the Sullivan pitching was keeping the Techmen well shackled, a couple of Eastern lads named Herb Bartoo and Al Hebrew, both playing their first inter-high game as regulars, were answering Chief Charlie Guyon's prayer for "somebody who can hit the old apple" to provide the scoring momentum. Bartoo connected for a single, a double and a triple in four attempts, and Hebrew for a single and a triple in three chances, accounting for five runs between them.

Eastern nicked Bill Liggett, Tech right-hander, for eight hits in all, bunching four in the fifth for three runs after tallying in the first and third.

Only two Tech boys were able to find Sullivan for a hit, Jimmy Roland getting one and George Hahn the other two, all singles.

Tech opened with a bang with Roland hitting a smoking grounder between Johnny Boyce at third and Al Kidwell at short for his hit. Hahn walked and both runners advanced on Johnny Dawson's bunt. Kidwell's throw to Mikalaski on Skinner's grounder caught Roland at the plate but Crawford walked and Hahn scored a moment later when Kidwell bobbled Singer's grounder.

Sullivan ended the threat by fanning Snow with the bases full. From that point on Tech was unable to get past first base and only three Techmen got that far. Hahn singled in the third, France was hit by a pitched ball in the fourth and Snow got on in the seventh when France dropped his third strike but they all were left stranded.

Liggett helped Eastern get under way in the first by walking Boyce and Kidwell. Bartoo rapped a double to left but Dawson's relay to France caught Boyce at the plate on a close play. Kidwell scored shortly afterward, however, when Tucker grounded out to Roland.

Needed Support Present.

While Sullivan seldom had need of a great deal of support, when it was needed he generally got it. In the second Kidwell started a fast double play on Roland's grounder, tossing to Hebrew to nip Hahn at second and ending by getting Bartoo at first. It is clear that Coach Charlie Guyon is turning out another strong outfit again more or less out of thin air.

Eastern took the lead in the second when Bartoo singled, took second on a passed ball, stole third and scored when Snow butter-fingered Tucker's grounder. Three more came in the fifth. Boyce singled, but was out on a force play on Kidwell's grounder. Bartoo tripled, scoring Kidwell, and himself scored when Roland missed a slow grounder from Tucker. Singles by Crisafal and Hebrew brought Tucker around with the fifth run. Hebrew's long triple to left in the eighth resulted in the other, when he scored on Sullivan's grounder to Roland.

Bucs, Chicago Both Happy Over French-Weaver Trade

By Edward J. Neil.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Charley Grimm, pilot of the Cubs, is grateful to Dizzy Dean for nomination of his club as the toughest to beat in the National League this season, not excluding even the New York Giants. But it's not blinding him to the fact that Bill Terry's team is still in the league.

"You can't overlook those Giant pitchers," he said today as his Cubs tackled the New Yorkers here for the first time this year. "But Diz is right about us. We've got a world of spirit and fight this time, lots of speed and youth, a great third baseman in Freddy Lindstrom and the southpaw pitcher we've needed for years in Larry French."

"It's a little early to name the winner, but if we aren't on top we'll be as close to the top one as anybody."

Charley, whose crick in the back has forced him to give up first base-ing in favor of young Phil Cavaretta, a 19-year-old Chicago kid, is entirely satisfied with the winter trade that brought him Lindstrom and French from the Pirates in exchange for Pitchers Guy Bush and Jim Weaver. Which sets some kind of a major league record because Pie Traynor, of the Pirates, is also satisfied, though Bush has won only one game and French has yet to triumph.

"We needed Lindstrom and French so badly," Grimm said, "that I had no choice but to give up two pitchers as good as Bush and Weaver. But Freddy is leading the team in runs driven in, and though French hasn't won yet, he was beaten, 1-0, by a home run once, and 2-1 another time.

G. W. Wins, 9-7, From Tigers; Many Hits

Game Is Full of Errors as Colonials Get Fourth Straight Victory.

WHAT started out with all the promise of a real ball game resulted in another score card full of hits, runs and errors as George Washington extracted its fourth consecutive victory from the toughened hide of Hampden-Sydney yesterday at Griffith Stadium. The final score was 9 to 7.

The Colonials will be gunning for No. 5 this afternoon when they tangle with Wake Forest on the South Ellipse, but their streak almost snapped yesterday beneath the weight of a last-minute Tiger batting rally. The visitors came within an ace of tying the count at 8-all before they finally were subdued.

Lanky Bill Noonan, who turned in a big league performance against Johns Hopkins last Saturday, was off his oats yesterday and pitched 11 hits to the opposition before Vince De Angelis' arrival at the mound. Noonan, however, was the victim of ragged support rather than his own ineffectiveness.

George Washington had two big innings. They produced three runs in the first and five more in the sixth. A pair of Tiger hurlers, "Soup" Campbell and Al Rogers, held the downtown school to eight hits, but Coach Ed Morris' men made the most of them.

Stapleton, Berg and Albert topped the winning attack, while Dallas Ogden and May were outstanding for the visitors.

Fuchs Reveals Aim to Buy Braves

Says He Declined Judgeship, Will Purchase Full Ownership.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 8.—A flood of formal statements poured out of Braves Field today when Emil Fuchs, the club president, returned to his desk after a business trip.

Surprised and apparently a bit irked because all of the secrecy had been stripped from an agreement which he regards as strictly confidential, the affable Emil first confirmed the report that he planned to buy out the baseball interests of his associates, Charles F. Adams and V. C. Bruce Wetmore, on August 1.

Then he revealed he had been offered and had declined a judgeship.

Fuchs' agreement with Adams and Wetmore, it was learned, requires him to settle a comparatively small debt with them on May 13, and on August 1 either pay off all his other obligations to them and buy them out at a bargain price or sever all of his connections with the club.

From an impeccable source it was learned that Bill McKechnie would be promoted and that Babe Ruth would be appointed manager if Adams and Wetmore take over the club, but that their status would remain unchanged if Fuchs remained in control.

Fuchs described the publication of that information as an attempt to "cause dissension" between McKechnie and Ruth and he denied that any existed, ably seconded by the home-run slugger.

Chesapeake Beats Richmond Stars

Special Dispatch to The Post.

West Point, Va., May 8.—Bob Brenaman brought his all-star team of Richmond amateur and semiprofessional circles to West Point today and lost a 4-to-2 game at Chesapeake. The game was fast and well played, featured by the pitching of Chesapeake's young rookie hurler, Venton Sutton, of Blakes, Mathews County, Va. Young Sutton, who is just 20 years old, pitched a cool game of ball, allowing but seven hits and striking out seven. His hitting was also a feature. His triple in the second scored two runs and tied the score 2-all.

Zaharias, Rudy Set to Maim Each Other

By George Considine.

TAKE to the storm cellars, all youse taxpayers. No, my friends, Frankenstein isn't coming. That is all child's play in comparison with Promoter Joe Turner's rasslefest tonight at the Auditorium.

Big George Zaharias, the original Colorado dust storm, and that scowling Nebraska Wildcat, Rude Rudy Dusek, will top one of the roughest cards ever assembled. Why, just the mere mention of a Zaharias-Dusek brawl has been known to make babies cry, women faint and strong men weak.

Rude Rudy will have a double incentive to be rude this evening. Besides nurturing a keen personal contempt for Master Georgie, Dusek faces a man who just recently has turned back his (Rudy's) three brothers—Ernie, Emil and Joe.

If each "willain" carries out his expressed plans, well, weak-hearted fans would better stay at home and listen to Announcer Jim McGraith's word picture of the slaughter. For obvious reasons the management has strengthened the mat rostrum with heavy-duty accessories, and, of course, instructed all riot squads to stand by for immediate action.

Not the least important phase of tonight's entertainment is the appearance of Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg, whose flying tackle brought world-wide acclaim. He is slated to butt it out semifinally with Pat McKay, the big, pugnacious Irisher.

This is a sort of welcome home party for the former world champion. Gus has just returned from a two-year tour of Australia and the Far East, where, besides regaining his health, he licked the tar out of everything put to him.

Opening half-hour struggles of distinctive merit find husky Ed Meske pitted against Dick (Sweetie Pie) Daviscourt, not to mention the epoch-making curtain hoister, Goodtime Charley Allen and Winsome Walter Underhill.

Phillies Split Twin Bill With Reds, End Streak

Philadelphia, May 8 (AP).—After losing the first game of a doubleheader to Cincinnati, 15 to 4, and running their losing streak to nine straight, the Phillies turned on the Reds and eked out a 5-to-4 victory today.

A 23-hit attack, which included seven doubles and two home runs, gave Cincinnati their triumph in the first game. Ernie Lombardi, Red backstop, equaled the major league record when he hit four successive two-baggers in four successive times at bat in four successive innings off four different pitchers. Lombardi began his streak in the sixth inning and hit doubles in the seventh, eighth and ninth.

Horse, Dog Show To Be Held June 8

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., May 8.—The second annual horse and hound show of the Wicomico Hunt Club will be held here June 8 and will be open to exhibitors regardless of residence, it was announced today. Last year's show was limited to Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset Counties. Only amateurs will be entered, it was emphasized by the committee. The show will be held under auspices of and for the benefit of the junior board of Peninsula General Hospital here.

An exhibition of single and double driving teams with vehicles and costumes reminiscent of the "gay nineties" will be a feature of the event. The hound show will open at 10 a. m. and the horse show at the same time. Clarence W. Whealton is chairman of the entry list.

There will be five classes in the hound show and 18 in the horse show, with three horse races staged at the close of the show. A number of children's entries have been arranged as have classes for work horses, in addition to thoroughbreds.

Lead Increased as Moore and Otto Make Homers.

New York, May 8.—Bill Terry's Giants felt the weight of the first onslaught from the West today, gave not an inch, and in two quick thrusts knocked over the Chicago Cubs twice, 3 to 1, and 6 to 2, today in the first double-header of the local season.

The double victory, riding on Joe Moore's fifth home run of the season in the first game and Mel Ott's eighth in the second, boosted the Giants far out in front in the National League race with 11 victories in 14 games and a record of 8 straight conquests on the home grounds. The double defeat knocked the Cubs out of second place.

'Big Four' Meet Rivalries Are Keen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., May 8.—There probably won't be much record breaking in the annual Virginia "Big Four" track meet at Washington and Lee Saturday, but spectators can count on some lively races between old rivals who step their distances in close times.

One of the closest races, the experts say, should be run between Everett, of the University of Virginia, and Capt. Bill Schule, of Washington and Lee, in the 220 low hurdles. Everett has stepped over the low timbers in 24 seconds flat, while Schule's best time is 24:4.

In the distances a contest should develop between Dick Dunaj, of Washington and Lee, and Ivan Mothershead, of Virginia Tech, who is the only Old Dominion trackman who has ever bested Dunaj in the mile and half-mile. Mothershead rules high favorite to take the mile by virtue of his 4:24:4 time several weeks ago against Davidson, while Dunaj is almost assured of the 2-mile event. The W. & L. ace holds the Southern Conference record of 9:44:4 in the 2-mile, and boasts the school record of 4:29:2 in the mile.

Western Falls Before Maryland's Base Hits

Rattling off 18 bingles for a total of 28 bases behind the two-hit pitching of Kyle Ruble, University of Maryland's freshman baseball team trounced Western High's nine, 9 to 1, yesterday at College Park. It was the second win of the campaign for the Old Line youngsters over a Washington public high team. They trimmed Roosevelt last week.

Until the seventh inning Western was very much in the game. In that frame the young Terps fell on Raftery for five runs, which sent him to the showers.

Maryland Frosh Win First Lacrosse Game

University of Maryland's freshman lacrosse team rang up its first win of the season yesterday when it surprised by turning back the St. Paul's School ten of Baltimore, 9 to 2, at College Park. It was the third start for the frosh stickwielders, who previously were beaten by the Johns Hopkins Jayvees and Baltimore City College.

The half ended in a 1 to 1 tie, but the freshmen, led by Parker Lindsay, center, former Baltimore City College luminary, stepped out in the final quarter to win. Lindsay with three goals took scoring honors. Line-ups and summary:

Nats Give Browns 10th Straight Loss

ble in the sixth and Buddy Myer's single in the ninth had given him two additional runs to work with.

Pinch Hitters Deliver.

At this point Harris called in Ed Linke, who forced Pepper to pop to Bolton and Bell to ground to Travis and the Nats staggered home with the ball game and made the 6 p. m. train to Detroit by the proverbial eyelash.

Tricounty League Opens 1935 Season

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 8.—The Tricounty League, composed of leading amateur teams of Frederick, Carroll and Montgomery Counties, opened the season auspiciously as Damascus defeated Frederick, 9 to 7; Brunswick won from Mount Airy, 18 to 9; Middletown beat Cedar Grove in ten innings, 8 to 7; New Market won from Walkersville, 5 to 3, and Church Hill downed Jefferson, 14 to 5. Garrett Track Events Scheduled Wednesday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Accident, Md., May 8.—The annual Garrett County track and field meet will be held here Wednesday, May 29, according to the board of education officials.

The meet will be held under the auspices of the Playground Athletic League of Maryland. There will be both running and field events for students in the 80, 95, 115, junior unlimited, and senior unlimited classes and relay games for girls of both elementary and high schools.

College Risks Record In Battle With W. & L.

Chestertown, Md., May 8 (AP).—The undefeated Washington College nine meets Washington and Lee University here Saturday in the feature attraction of a two-sport week-end schedule.

The Washington tracksters will meet Susquehanna University here Friday to open the week-end program. Chief interest in the track meet is centered on Gibby Young, Washington dash ace, who scored five firsts and a second in the University of Delaware meet at Newark recently.

Women's Team Golf Is Postponed by Rain

Rain yesterday forced postponement of the District women's first team golf matches at Army and Navy Country Club. The ten teams had played through nine holes when a torrential downpour in the morning abruptly halted hostilities.

Cadet Poloists To Play War Department

POLO returns to the National Capital Saturday afternoon when the War Department quartet rides into action against the crack Pennsylvania Military Academy team on the Potomac Park field. The game will begin at 3 o'clock.

With polo a major sport at the school, the Penn Cadets usually place a formidable team on the field, and the 1935 combination appears to be no exception. Their indoor team has just completed a successful winter campaign.

Comprising the War Department squad will be Maj. T. de la M. Allen, Maj. Arch Arnold, Maj. C. C. Smith, Maj. Joe Swing and Lieut. C. H. Reed, all of whom are well known mallet swingers.

Maj. Smith, now on duty at the War College, captained the Army team that defeated the Mexican army team in a series of matches played here last summer. Maj. Allen is one of the Cavalry's most consistent players, while Maj. Arnold is rated equally well in the Field Artillery.

Md. U. Frosh Lose To Tech on Track

High School Lads Superior in Field Events Also.

Tech High School's crack team won an easy victory over the University of Maryland freshmen, 84-33, yesterday in a dual meet at College Park.

The schoolboys showed marked superiority over the young Terps in both track and field events, winning 9 of the 13 events. In the tract tests, Tech piled up 46 points to 17 for Maryland, and in the field events amassed 38 to the Old Liners' 16.

George Bogan and Monroe Emmerich, of Tech, each won two events, the former capturing the 100 and 220-yard dashes and the latter both the hurdles.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Parsons, W. Va., May 8.—In a Tri-County field and track meet held here, Parsons High School won with 108 1-3 points. Tygarts Valley High was second with 23 1-3 points and Thomas third with 10 1-3. Kempton made 5 points and Davis 4.

Parsons High won first place in the shuttle relay, medley relay, mile relay, 120-yard high hurdles, pole vault, shot put, mile race, high jump, 220-yard dash, discus throw, broad jump and javelin.

Eastern Shore Golfers Set Summer Matches

Easton, Md., May 8 (AP).—A schedule of six matches for the northern division of the Eastern Shore Golf Association was announced today by Royce R. Spring, president of the association.

The southern division, consisting of Cape Charles, Salisbury and Cambridge, will play a similar series and winning teams in each division will meet on a neutral course for the team championship of the shore. The schedule:

July 7, Preston at Easton.

Roosevelt Loses, 10-9, To Mount St. Josephs

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, May 8.—Mount St. Joseph's nine defeated Roosevelt High School of Washington, 10 to 9, today.

Although held to six hits, the locals obtained a big lead in the early part of the contest, topping their opponents, 9 to 1, after four innings.

Massanutten Trounces Shepherd on Diamond

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., May 8.—The Massanutten Military nine defeated the Shepherd College tossers in a hotly contested game here today, 4 to 3.

McDonald, on the hill for the Cadets, yielded only five safeties, while Hill, on the mound for the West Virginians, was clubbed for ten hits. The game marked the first that has been won by the Purple and Gold team on the local diamond this season and the first time this year that the Shepherd team has tasted defeat.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Broadcasts start early today, with King George's address to Parliament from London. If you wake up before 6 a. m. tune in on WRC at 5:49 and WJSV at 5:45.

Air Conditioning Expert Begins Duties

Robert R. Galloway has begun his duties as the first air conditioning engineer of the National Park Service buildings branch, Charles A. Peters, jr., chief engineer, announced yesterday. The appointee, who formerly was chief engineer for the National Biscuit Co., is a graduate of McKinley High School and Lehigh University.

Creation of the post of air conditioning engineer is a part of the program to expand the buildings branch staff in keeping with Federal construction here, Peters said. A structural engineer has been hired and within the next few weeks there will be added an electrical engineer and a mechanical engineer.

Clerk's House Is Looted.

Every bit of clothing owned by Virgil L. Brown, clerk in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, except for the clothes he was wearing, was stolen from his home at 715 K street northeast yesterday afternoon. The burglar even made off with a heavy winter overcoat. Both Mr. and Mrs. Brown were absent.

Spirited Rally Carries Stocks Up 1 to 4 Points

Evidence of Increasing Inflationary Trend Helps Advance.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—Stocks today indulged in a rousing upsurge that was a surprise even to the bulls. Gains of 1 to 4 points were chalked up throughout the list.

At the same time the more speculatively-minded stock crowd appeared to give most weight to the clear evidence of a vigorous inflationary sentiment in Washington legislative quarters, as evidenced by the substantial majorities for the Patman bill in both houses.

They were inclined to ignore the opinion of the soberer Wall street faction which was confident not only of the President's veto, but that it would be sustained in the Senate. Many speculators, however, thought the rise of the congressional inflation tide was significant, quite aside from the fate of the specific measure now under consideration.

The Associated Press average for 60 stocks advanced 1.2 points to 40.9, a level exceeded only once before this year, on January 7, when the closing figure was 41.6. Turnover in the stock exchange freshened appreciably to climb well above the million-share mark at 1,394,660.

Cotton Higher; Japan a Buyer

Initial Liquidation Is Followed by Rally; May 11.84.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—Trade price fixing in current crop deliveries on reports that producers pool cotton would not be released at this time imparted a firm undertone to cotton today. In the late trading the market receded a little from the best levels and closed barely steady at an advance of 9 to a decline of 1 point.

Initial declines of 4 to 9 points in sympathy with easier Liverpool cables and under foreign selling and liquidation were followed by rallies when this pressure tapered off.

Demand from the trade, spot houses and Japan centered in May and July, carrying these months up to net gains of 15 to 16 points and back to the previous high levels of the movement, but buying of forward positions was restricted and they advanced only 2 to 9 points net.

Cottonseed Oil.

New York, May 8 (AP).—Bleachable cottonseed oil was firm today on increased covering and commission house buying, prompted by renewed talk of inflation. Final prices were 10 to 17 points net higher. Sales, 71 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; May closed 10.40; July, 10.59; September, 10.63; October, 1061; December, 10.51.

Coast Stocks Soar In Surge of Buying

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, May 8.—Speculative fever broke out on the stock exchange here today, apparently inspired by the passage of the Patman bonus bill. Oils led the rally, followed by a long list of manufacturing shares and utilities. Including 12 new highs, there were 35 gains. Among the new highs Shell 6s rose 5⅛ to 87, and Wells Fargo 4⅞ to 245. The curb exchange had 19 up, with Telephone reaching a new top at 117.

'Stop, Look and Listen' Warns Railman Pelley

Protests Pouring Out of Millions to Aid Railroads' Rivals.

New York, May 8.—Charging that millions of dollars are annually being expended by the Government to subsidize the competitors of the railroads and add to the already existing surplus of transportation facilities in this country, John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, today called on the Government to "stop, look and listen" before continuing the practice of pouring immense sums of taxpayers' money into transportation projects that can not be economically justified.

Addressing the annual convention of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks here today, Mr. Pelley said:

"This Government should stop, look and listen before continuing to pour millions and even billions of dollars into competing transportation systems, to add greatly to the existing surplus facilities of transportation that are unnecessary to move properly the traffic of the country and without requiring the modes of transportation that use those facilities to compensate the Government for their use.

"If these means of transportation are required to pay their way for the use of the highways and waterways and are properly regulated, it will place them on a comparable basis with the railroads and will stabilize the entire transportation system to the benefit of all interested.

"We do not believe it is fair for the Government to regulate the railroads in practically every direction and leave their competitors free of such regulation. We do not believe it is fair for the Government to provide highways and waterways for those who use them for commercial transportation of passengers and goods without fully paying their way."

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Treasury on May 6 was:

Receipts, $37,205,694.26; expenditures, $66,195,095.66; balance, $1,830,523,022.75; customs receipts for the month, $6,161,572.46.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $3,171,034,851.70; expenditures, $6,067,670,721.01 (including $3,012,619,558.67 of emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures, $2,895,835,869.31; gross debt, $28,657,387,434.23, a decrease of $2,796,239.25 under the previous day; gold assets, $8,726,146,596.10.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did

	Wed.	Tues.
Advances	534	168
Declines	98	385
Unchanged	128	162
Total issues	760	715

Stocks—Inflationary tide in Congress contributed to buoyant advances of 1 to 4 points. Industrialists led the gains while rails and specialties turned in a good performance. Sales up to 1,394,660 shares.

Bonds—Federals turned about from their recent lethargic weakness and led the market to higher levels. Transfers for the day were up to $14,860,000.

Curb—Advanced briskly with a heavy demand in all groups. Fajardo Sugar was up 5½ points at the close. Sales up to 277,000 shares.

Grains—Many factors, among them inflation, crop shortage, possible over-riding of presidenital veto on bonus, contributed to strength in all cereals. May wheat closed at 95¼, May corn at 89.

Cotton—Trade price fixing imparted a firm undertone during most of the session, late trading causing small recessions. Closes were barely steady at net declines of 1 point to advances of 9 points. May closed at 11.84.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Rio No. 7 closed at 7 and Santos No. 4 sold last at 8½.

Timken Declares 25 Cents Extra

Dividends Announced by Other Corporations.

New York, May 8 (AP).—The Timken Roller Bearing Co. has declared an extra dividend of 25 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common stock, payable June 5 to stock of record May 17.

Rochester, N. Y., May 8 (AP).—Directors of Eastman Kodak Co. declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share on the common stock and the regular quarterly payment of $1.50 on the 6 per cent preferred stock. Both dividends are payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 5.

Chicago, May 8 (AP). — Purity Bakeries Corporation today declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock, payable June 1 to stockholders of record May 20.

New York, May 8 (AP).—Directors of the Fajardo Sugar Co. declared a dividend of $1.50 on the capital stock payable June 1 to stock of record May 15. The last previous payment was $2.50 on February 1, 1929.

Attitude of Most State Legislatures Makes Long Delay on Unemployment Insurance Certain; Three States Act; Constitutionality an Issue.

A Special Correspondent.

New York, May 8.—Even if the pending social security bill should be enacted by Congress shortly, is believed—by qualified observers—that years will elapse before unemployment insurance will be generally in effect in this country.

In the first place, there is serious doubt among lawyers studying the subject that the tax remission plan will be upheld by the Supreme Court. This plan, the basis of the unemployment insurance provisions of the Doughton-Wagner-Lewis bill, imposes an excise tax, which reaches 3 per cent of pay rolls by 1938, on employers subject to the measure. Contributions to an acceptable State unemployment insurance fund, however, constitute credits against this excise tax up to 90 per cent of its amount. It is felt that the highest court may construe this arrangement as an unconstitutional use of the Federal taxing power to dictate the conduct of State government. On the other hand, some who hold that the tax remission plan will not receive the sanction of the Supreme Court believe that the substitution of a system of paying outright subsidies to States which establish acceptable unemployment insurance schemes may pass judicial muster.

Many State Legislatures Indifferent or Hostile.

Even if the tax remission plan in the present bill, passed by the House, should win the full approval of the court in a test case likely to be brought as soon as the initial 1 per cent pay roll excise tax is imposed next year, the task remains of inducing State Legislatures to enact such legislation. The experience of this year's sessions of many State Legislatures indicates that this will prove a much more difficult and slower job than had been anticipated by many advocates of unemployment insurance. It is true that the chief incentive for the States to enact such measures —to avoid having their employers pay excise taxes to the Federal Government from which the people of the State obtain no benefit—will not be in effect until next year, and then only if the pending bill should be enacted. However, the attitude of indifference or hostility reported shown unemployment insurance bills in various States probably assures many long delays despite this consideration.

Three States only have enacted unemployment insurance legislation this year. They are New York, Washington and Utah.

The Washington and Utah plans are to go into effect when the Federal social security bill is passed, while the New York law goes into effect in 1936, regardless of the action taken by Congress.

At this time the outlook is considered but fair at best for the enactment of other State unemployment insurance measures this year. New Hampshire and Connecticut seem the best prospects. In the large majority of States, however, the Legislatures either have already adjourned, or they have shown little disposition to proceed vigorously with the discussion and enactment of this type of legislation.

State-Wide vs. Multiple Fund Big Issue.

Wherever efforts have been made to enact unemployment insurance laws, keen debate has developed over several major issues. Among the more important of these points of difference of opinion are:

1. Manufacturers and many impartial students of the subject strongly urge the maintenance of separate funds for each employer or industry, rather than the creation of a single State-wide pool. The Wisconsin and Utah laws both provide separate accounts for each employer—New York and Washington have single funds. The former, by relieving an employer from making additional contributions when his accumulated reserve equals a stated amount per employe, encourages stabilization of employment. The single fund plans tend to penalize employers who maintain stable employment and pay rolls at the expense of those who discharge employes freely whenever business declines.

The pending Federal social security bill greatly discourages State laws with separate accounts for each employer. It provides no rebate from the excise tax for those who do not contribute to a State fund, regardless of the reason why no contribution is made in any one year.

2. The Federal bill includes employers of ten or more; the New York bill of four or more. Inclusion of small concerns is a vital issue in many States.

3. New York provides benefit payments to employes on strike, except that such beneficiaries must wait ten weeks after loss of employment, before drawing benefits, whereas, others wait only three. Manufacturers strenously oppose this provision, not found in Federal law, on the ground that it will encourage labor unrest and walkouts because the unemployment insurance fund may be regarded as a virtual strike fund.

From the first, it has been felt that some diversity among State unemployment insurance laws is desirable. For one thing, pertinent conditions differ in various States. Also, by experimenting with diverse provisions, it will be possible to evolve a system most suitable to American conditions. However, controversy over the form that such enactments shall take in the several States will involve much debate and delay.

After State laws have been adopted, they will face constitutionality tests in many jurisdictions, it is expected. In particular, where the contributions are not given the form of an excise tax, the contention that they constitute a taking of property from particular employers without due process of law will be advanced. Such tests in State courts will mean further delays.

Peak Insurance Sales In 50 Years' Business

Minneapolis, May 8.—The largest April sales of new life insurance in its history are reported by Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. of Minneapolis, with a total of $6,002,373 for the month. This is an increase of 15 per cent over April, 1934, and of 60 per cent over the same month of 1933.

The best previous April in the company's 50 years of business was in 1930, with a total of $5,721,670.

Canada's Spring Trade Up 10 Per Cent in Year

Toronto, May 8.—General business activity has expanded, though the increase as a whole is of no more than seasonal proportions, in contrast with an abnormal upswing a year ago, says S. H. Logan, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

While a strong forward surge in certan branches of business has raised the general level nearly 10 per cent above that of the spring of 1934, a number of industries have for some time past found conditions less favorable than last year, he says, and the irregularity as characterizing the operations of secondary industries still persists, though in smaller degree than was noticeable during the winter season.

Lumber Orders 32% Ahead of Last Year

New York, May 8 (AP).—New business booked by 1,200 lumber mills in April showed progressive weekly gains, with orders during the last week higher than in any similar period since November, 1933, and shipments better than in any week since July, 1933, trade circles said.

Orders for the week ended April 27 were 32 per cent ahead of the same week last year and shipments were 26 per cent better.

Dallas Reserve Bank Cuts Rate to 2 Per Cent

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas has reduced its rediscount rate from 2½ to 2 per cent, effective tomorrow. The reduction is in line with the cheaper money policy advocated by the Administration and effected by the Federal Reserve Board.

The former rate of 2½ per cent was established on January 8, 1935.

Scrap Steel Up 50 Cents a Ton.

Pittsburgh, May 8 (AP).—No. 1 railroad scrap steel has been advanced here 50 cents a ton to $12.50. This has given the entire scrap market a firmer appearance.

Social Bankers Will Speak at Annual Meet

By Karl von Lewinski.

Hilleary G. Hoskinson, of the Riggs National Bank, general chairman of the District of Columbia Bankers convention that will be held in Hot Springs, Va., from May 30 to June 2, announced yesterday that three prominent local bankers had been selected to speak at the conclave.

Horace F. Stokes, assistant cashier of the Metropolitan National Bank, will discourse on "Bank Management," while George E. Hamilton, jr., assistant attorney of the Union Trust Co., will speak on "Some Aspects of Trust Administration." Frank M. Perley, Trust Investment officer of the American Security & Trust Co., the third speaker, has chosen "Supervision of Trust Investments" as his subject.

The bankers chosen to address the meet were selected after careful consideration of the branch of finance they are best qualified to present, Hoskinson asserted. All of the men selected so far have a national reputation in their line.

A. I. B. Ends Second Semester.

Final examinations of the second semester classes of the Washington Chapter American Institute of Banking were concluded last night when quizzes in trust business and commercial law were held at the institute.

Theodore B. Cogswell, registrar of wills of the District of Columbia, instructed the class of 17 that took the trust exam and Bolitha J. Laws, member of the firm of Cromerin & Laws, taught the 50 students who finished in the commercial law class.

On Monday evening 46 students took the finals in the economics class. Norman E. Towson, assistant treasurer of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., is the instructor in this course. At the same time 21 members of the bank management class, which is conducted by F. P. H. Siddons, secretary of the American Security & Trust Co., were examined.

The class in public speaking has graduated 13 members and was instructed by Prof. Elmer Louis Kayser of the George Washington University.

Chapter Elections.

Washington Chapter, American Institute of Bankers, will choose officers and governors for the coming year at the annual election, which will be held in the chapter rooms in the Bond Building today from 4 p. m. until 8 p. m.

Keen competition has developed in several of the offices, as well as in the four vacancies on the board of governors, and it is expected that the voting will be the heaviest in recent years.

Following is a list of the candidates as chosen by the nominating committee:

For president, J. Earle McGeary, W. B. Hibbs & Co. First vice president, Paul J. Seltzer, American Security & Trust Co. Second vice president, William H. Laughlin, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Robert A. Sisson, Hamilton National Bank. Treasurer, Joseph R. Fitzpatrick, Second National Bank; Robert M. Poole, Riggs National Bank. Secretary, Katharine W. McCalmont, W. B. Hibbs & Co. Assistant secretary, Teresa M. Behabetz, Union Trust Co.; Myrtle P. Lewis, Liberty National Bank. Chief counsel, B. Bruce Frantz, American Security & Trust Co.; L. Harry Rider, National Metropolitan Bank. Board of governors, Theodore B. Bogley, Munsey Trust Co.; Aubrey O. Dooley, Hamilton National Bank; George E. Earnshaw, National Metropolitan Bank; Elmer G. Flather, Union Trust Co.; Constance D. Fogle, Riggs National Bank; T. Hunton Leith, Security Savings & Commercial Bank; Archibald McLachlen, McLachlen Banking Corporation; G. Crawford Turnbull, Morris Plan Bank.

Kelly-Springfield Proxies.

A group of stockholders of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. has sent a letter to the common and preferred shareholders asking for proxies to enable the equity holders to intervene in the reorganization proceedings now pending in the United States District Court in Baltimore.

Stating the preferred and common holders were not now properly represented, and that the noteholders already are organized and represented at all proceedings, the letter urged that an organization should be formed to seek representation, and to "formulate and file, if necessary, a plan of reorganization and to seek its adoption."

Signers of the letter were B. E. Hepler, president of the Hope Engineering Co.; J. S. Patterson, president of the Enameled Metal Works, and Frank Wilbur Main, of Pittsburgh.

Large Orders Lend Steel Trade Cheer

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 8.—Two substantial orders were reported here today, giving the steel trade an optimistic outlook. Westinghouse announced it had received a $1,250,000 contract to install equipment in the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s new Buffalo mill. Carnegie Steel got an order for 9,900 tons of 131-pound rails for the Erie Railroad—a little less than $500,000. The Erie at the same time split an order for 7,000 tons of 112-pound rails among Inland, Illinois and Bethlehem Steel.

Sales in April Of Gen. Motors Top Since 1929

Total of 184,059 Units Compares With 153,954 in April, 1934.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—General Motors Corporation in April sold to consumers in the United States 143,909 cars and trucks, figures made public today revealed

The latest figure compares with 126,691 units in March of this year and 106,349 ir April, 1934. Sales to dealers in the United States totaled 152,946 units, against 132,622 in March and 121,964 in April last year.

The aggregate of sales to United States dealers and those in Canada, plus overseas shipments were 184,059 cars and trucks, compared with 169,302 in the previous month and 153,954 in April, 1934.

The latest figures, both for total sales and sales to consumers, are the best April disposals since 1929, when aggregate sales were 227,718 and those to consumers 173,201 units.

For the first four months of the current year, sales to United States consumers amounted to 402,002 cars and trucks, compared with 283,872 in the like period of the previous year.

Sales to dealers in the United States were 454,204 in the first four months of 1935, compared with 370,234 in the same period a year ago, while sales to dealers in the United States and Canada plus overseas shipments were 572,775, against 470,558.

Federal Issues Assume Lead In Bond Upturn

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8. — A strong rally in U. S. Government obligations overshadowed other developments on the bond market today.

Following three or four days of drooping tendencies, all types of Government loans snapped back in impressive fashion, when reports from Washinton indicated in fairly specific terms that President Roosevelt would veto the soldiers' bonus bill passed yesterday by the Senate. No less than 14 Treasury issues averaged 8-32ds higher with the newly distributed 2⅛ per cent issue the most heavily turned over.

In addition to local bank and institutional buying, investment circles noted an increasing tendency among out of town banks to withdraw funds from deposit in New York because of the low interest return and purchase of Government bonds.

Dealings in corporate bonds were larger than usual and after an unsatisfactory performance during most of the morning, prices steadied. Postal Telegraph 5s came back strongly, closing at 29, up 2¾ points. International Telephone 5s were 1¼ better at 58¾.

Transfers aggregated $14,860,000.

Inflation Talk AdvancesGrain

Possible Overriding of Bonus Veto Also a Factor.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 8.—Renewal of inflation talk, coupled with reported moves toward possible overriding of a presidential veto of the Patman bonus bill, accompanied higher grain prices today.

It was asserted that submitting the bonus bill to President Roosevelt would be delayed until friends of the measure had mustered full strength in the Senate, and would be able perhaps to nullify an expressed intention on his part to exercise veto power. Another bullish factor was evidence of growing belief that there would be notable shortage of domestic hard winter wheat production this season.

Wheat closed firm, ½ to 1 cent above yesterday's finish, July 95½@95⅝. Corn ⅛ off to ⅜ up, July 81¾@87⅞. Oats ½ to⅝ advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

Corn and oats prices averaged higher responsive to tightening-up of premiums for Chicago May delivery of corn. Provisions reflected grain rallies, as well as strength shown by the cottonseed oil market.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, holding a Bankruptcy Court. In the matter of Harry Lewis, bankrupt. Bankruptcy No. 3177. Notice is hereby given that the above-named bankrupt has filed his petition praying for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that his creditors and other persons in interest are required to enter their appearance in opposition, together with specifications in writing of the grounds of such opposition, if any so desire, in the clerk's office of said court, on or before the 11TH DAY OF JUNE, 1935. FRED J. EDEN, Referee in Bankruptcy.

PROPOSALS

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, May 9, 1935. Sealed proposals will be received in Room 320, District Building, until 2 O'CLOCK P. M., MAY 20, 1935, for furnishing One Truck, 4-Ton, for D. C. Penal Institutions; May 31, 1935, for furnishing Cafeteria Equipment for the public schools, D. C. Specifications and information at Room 320, District Building.

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, May 8, 1935. Sealed proposals will be received in Room 309, District Building, until 2 O'CLOCK P. M., MAY 27, 1935, and then publicly opened, for collecting all night soil accumulating in the District of Columbia, for a period of three years, beginning July 1, 1935. Forms of proposals, specifications, together with necessary information, may be obtained from the Chief Clerk, Engineer Department, Room 427, District Building.

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, May 6, 1935. Sealed proposals will be received at Room 309, District Building, until 2 o'clock p. m., MAY 20, 1935, and then publicly opened, for resurfacing streets and avenues by the heater method with about 3,400 tons of asphaltic surface mixture. Apply Room 427, District Building, for proposals and specifications.

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, May 7, 1935. Sealed proposals will be received at Room 309, District Building, until 2 O'CLOCK P. M., E. S. T., JUNE 4, 1935, and then publicly opened, for furnishing and installing Sewage Pumps and Equipment, for a Sewage Treatment Plant at Blue Plains, D. C. (Unit No. 3). A more complete description of the work and full information for bidders is given in the drawings, specifications and in other contract papers, which may be obtained at the office of chief clerk, engineer department, Room 427, District Building, upon deposit of a certified check payable to the collector of taxes, D. C., in the sum of $100, to insure return in good condition. Not more than three complete sets of drawings, specifications and contract papers will be furnished to any one general contractor. No proposal will be accepted unless accompanied by a guaranty of not less than 5 per cent (5%) of the amount of the bid in the form of a certified check made payable to the collector of taxes, D. C., U. S. Bonds or the bond of an approved surety company. Security for the faithful performance of the work shall be in the form of a surety bond in a penal sum equal to the estimated total contract price. A labor bond in an amount equal to the largest estimated aggregate pay roll for any one month is required. Public liability insurance in the sum of $5,000 and $10,000 is also required. The work called for by this proposal is to be performed in accordance with an agreement dated October 18, 1934, between the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works and is subject to the provisions of Title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act and the rules and regulations prescribed by the President and the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works. The director of re-employment for the District of Columbia is Edgar B. Young, 480 Indiana avenue northwest. No bid will be considered unless accompanied by the bidder's certificate of compliance, properly executed, to the effect that the bidder is complying with and will continue to comply with each applicable code of fair competition, or, in the absence of such code or codes, with the President's Reemployment Agreement. Copies of this certificate may be obtained at Room 427 District Building. The Commissioners reserve the right to reject any and all proposals and to waive informalities as they deem best for the interest of the District of Columbia. Final award of contract is subject to approval of the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works. Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates prescribed by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works must be paid on this project. my8,9,10,15,16,17

Washington Scene.

The Blue Eagle:
Oh, gentlemen, reveal, I prithee,
Just how much longer I'll be with thee!
I've done my best; I've fought and bled,
And wish I knew what lies ahead.
Mr. Roosevelt:
Hush, little eagle, don't you cry!
The Chamber of Commerce of the United States:
Scat, you turkey!
Shake a leg!
Your're no bird; you're
Just an egg!
The Blue Eagle:
(Appealingly to the President.)
You see! That's why I feel so low—
You bid me stay; they tell me "Go!"
Mr. Roosevelt:
Just put your trust, good bird, in me,
And never mind that C. of C.;
The Blue Eagle:
But, boss, I feel so insecure:
You say I'll live, but am I sure?
Mr. Roosevelt:
The courts are talking, eagle grand—
Some say you're all that you could hope—
Some say you're just a feathered dope.
The Blue Eagle:
It's tough to be in such a spot;
You're good at least for two more years!
The Right Wingers:
Ha! Steel yourself and hear the worst;
You'll get the ax next April first!
Chamber of Commerce of the United States:
Why this rumpus? Why this fuss?
Choose between that bird and us!
The Blue Eagle:
Oh, woe is me! Oh, woe is me!
My life's one vast uncertainty!
Chorus of Small Merchants:
Oh, woe is you? Oh, woe is us!
Our lot is worse than yours is, Gus!
Mr. Roosevelt:
Don't mind them! I'm determined to See Uncle Sam do right by you.
You're looking weak, you're looking thin—
The Blue Eagle:
Sez You!

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Mystery By Harry J. Tuthill

What a business! Threatened by that sneaky Sierro...afraid to stay here, and afraid to leave. Sitting up all night. So nervous we hear airplanes and....
But it was a plane we heard. I'm sure.
Marooned. Thousands of miles from home. In a jungle. Your brilliant father hobnobbing with some sultan while you and I sit here speechless with fright and....
Mother, come here!
Look! In the trees! Someone moving!
Oh Peddy, it's just your nerves. I don't see... what's that light?
Someone striking a match. Lighting a cigarette.
Heavenly days! All this creepy business so late at night. Peddy, I just must sit down.

Funeral Today Of Mr. Groves At Frostburg

Rev. Harry A. Groves.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., May 8.—The Rev. Harry A. Groves, 59, pastor of the Pentecostal churches in this area, died yesterday of pneumonia.

He served as pastor of the churches at Borden Shaft and Midlothian, this county, and Jennings and Kitzmiller, Garrett County.

He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Patrick Freal and Mrs. Edward Platter, of Jennings. He was a brother of Mrs. Martha Lottig and Mrs. Rebecca Blocher, of Jennings. The funeral will be held from the home here tomorrow afternoon, with burial in the family plot at New Germany, Md.

Edward T. Norford.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 8.—Funeral services for Edward T. Norford, 84, for years a leading farmer of the north side of the county, were held this afternoon from his home near Eastham, conducted by the Rev. George Maupin, of the Brethren Church. Interment was in Riverview Cemetery.

His wife, Mrs. Ellen M. Norford, and seven children survive—Marshall A. Norford, of Fairfax; William Edward Norford, of New Market; Lloyd C. Norford, of Hagerstown, Md.; Mrs. L. C. Condee, of Huntington, W. Va.; Mrs. Elsie L. Cushing, Mrs. Maida E. Andes and Miss Mary E. Norford, at home. Mr. Norford also leaves a brother, M. F. Norford, of Stony Point, and a sister, Mrs. Alice Davis, of near Barboursville.

Mrs. Mary E. Hamerick.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., May 8. Funeral services for Mrs. Mary E. Hamerick, 60, widow of Robert J. Hamerick, former Norfolk & Western Railway agent of Shepherdstown, were held at Stanley, Va., yesterday.

Mrs. Oscar S. Boyd.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 8.—The funeral of Mrs. Oscar S. Boyd, who was found dead in her apartment here, will be held when her son, Clifton W. Ryter, arrives from the Canal Zone. Mrs. Boyd had spent the last 10 years in Colon, where her husband was an engineer.

In addition to her husband and son, she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. James R. Horn, of Albany, Ga.

Lloyd Steele.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Mount Airy, Md., May 6.—Funeral services for Lloyd Steele, 76, were conducted today by the Rev. Herman McKay, pastor of Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Bertha Ogden Steele, he is survived by the following children: Mrs. Lawrence E. Decker, Shenandoah, Va.; Mrs. William U. Waters and Lloyd Steele, jr., Damascus; Miss Mary Steele, Washington, D. C.; Samuel R. Steele, Ridgeville, and Jack Steele and Richard Steele, at home; three brothers, Edward Steele, Clarksburg, W. V.; Charles Steele, Phillipi, W. Va., and William Steele, Westminster, and two sisters, Mrs. Frank Armstrong, Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Maragret Wallis, Asheville, N. C.

Miss Fannie E. Beard.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., May 8.—Miss Fannie E. Beard, 60, long ill, was found dead at her home here yesterday.

She is survived by two brothers, J. B. Beard, of Collierstown and R. G. Beard, of Kerrs Creek, and three sisters, Mrs. H. H. Goodbar, of Collierstown; Mrs. K. D. Lawson, of Lynchburg, and Mrs. J. C. Chapman, of Roanoke.

Lewis H. Campbell.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., May 8.—Funeral services for Lewis H. Campbell, 61, were held today. He was a native of Bedford County and had been in the furniture business here many years.

Mr. Campbell is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma Campbell; five daughters, Mrs. Helen Luck, Miss Mabell Campbell, Miss Louise Campbell and Miss Dorothy Campbell, of Lynchburg, and Mrs. D. B. Webber, of Union, S. C., and two sisters, Mrs. T. L. Crank and Mrs. R. C. Hudnall, of Lynchburg.

Rural Women's Clubs Hear State Senators

Special Dispatch to The Post.

St. Marys City, Md., May 8.—Rural women's clubs from St. Marys, Calvert and Charles counties met here today at the St. Mary's Female Seminary. The meeting was featured by addresses of State Senators J. Alan Coad and James Latimer. Joseph A. Wilmer, of Charles County, also spoke.

The meeting was divided into two sessions, and luncheons served by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Trinity P. E. Church here. At the morning session reports by the county presidents were given. The three principal speakers during the afternoon discussed "Woman's Place in Politics."

Judge Harrison Worse, Specialist at Bedside

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 8.—Judge Thomas W. Harrison was believed to be losing ground today in his battle against double pneumonia.

Physicians said he spent a restless night and today was rational only at times. This afternoon Dr. O. O. Ashwood, Richmond specialist, arrived by plane and went into consultation with local doctors. An oxygen tent pressed into service yesterday was still being used in an endeavor to save Judge Harrison's life. He is 79 years old.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

RENT per room is 30 per cent higher than those reporting think it should be, according to the average of 3,255 replies received in the Department of Agriculture housing survey in Washington.

BAKER.

The questionnaires reveal the present average rent is $16 per room, unfurnished, with kitchenettes and sun porches counted as rooms. Desired rental for the same unfurnished apartments averages $11.15.

Interest in publicly constructed apartments was shown by 1,795, who stated they are willing to pay $12 per room in such buildings. More than 50 per cent expressed dissatisfaction with their present quarters, while all but 138 of the total wanted to move. This indicates that those who said they were satisfied must have meant satisfied with the quarters but not the price.

The average distance from work was reported at 3.9 miles. Eight replies listed residence exceeding 20 total would prefer living within walking distance of work—even with a a reasonable rent offered.

The U. S. D. A. rent committee plans to call a meeting of the 650 employes who indicated interest in co-operative assistance in building their own home. A large amount of technical informaton has been gathered. The committee also is preparing a comprehensive report of the needs to PWA housing executives and to members of Congress interested in low-cost housing for Government workers.

Attempts to provide Agriculture employes with lower-cost, better living quarters were started under auspices of the Agriculture Branch of the National Federation of Federal Employes. Work is now being carried on by a voluntary committee from various bureaus under chairmanship of Frank L. Lombard, who can be reached at District 6350, branch 2136, or through the Federal Diary.

One of the most interesting editorial features in the University Hatchet, student weekly at George Washington University, is the book review column, titled "Page Proofs," written by Brooke Stewart, field personnel, HOLC. Begun as a regular feature only a month ago, it is now one of the most popular Hatchet columns among students.

THE avalanche of applications filed in the last four weeks for several examinations announced by Civil Service Commission is nearing final sorting and dates for the tests will be set soon. "Nearly" 60,000 applications were filed for stock clerk examinations, according to estimates by commission officials, while 58,277 have applied for statistical clerkships.

In the higher technical classes the following totals are revealed: Chemists, 2,820; junior graduate nurse, 2,500; conservationist, 2,000; grazier, 572, and junior forester, 1,436.

Mrs. Elsie Bayne (P), Interstate Commerce Commission, has returned to her office after an absence of almost a year because of illness.

L. A. BICKERTON, first president of the HOLC Bowling League, is admiring the handsome gold and silver trophy which league members presented to him at close of the season as a token of his tireless efforts in organizing the circuit and stimulating interest in it.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: (F) Loew's Fox (stage, Dave Appollon and his "International Varieties" and other acts; screen, Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in "Naughty Marietta") or to (P) Loew's Palace (George Arliss in "Cardinal Richelieu") or to (C) Loew's Columbia (Lionel Barrymore in "Mark of the Vampire").

Jake Lyons (F), Library of Congress, suggests that The Washington Post sponsor a dog show to include only dogs owned by Federal employes. Lyons, incidentally, has just acquired a dog.

Eyes of New York producers are said to be on the musical satire, "Alphabet Soup," written and directed by Herbert Strople, General Accounting Office. The piece will have its premiere at the Y. M. C. A. tonight.

Talmadge Proposal Decried.

Typical of the comment yesterday on statements of Gov. Talmadge of Georgia, urging Government salary reductions of 50 per cent and abolition of "useless" bureaus, is the following by Lee Somers, official of the American Federation of Government Employes.

"Government employes must be on guard to protect the rights and standards they have won against any and all attacks.

"Gov. Talmadge, of course, is not familiar with conditions in Washington and, fortunately, the members of Congress are, for they experience the same effects of the high cost of living that are experienced by the 97,000 Government employes now in service here. In the fight for restoration of the pay cut, the American Federation of Government Employes showed beyond question that the average Government employe is paid a very low salary, but in spite of all educational efforts it is difficult to eradicate the impression to the contrary that exists among certain persons not acquainted with conditions here.

"The pay cut remedy has been tried and it has failed. It served only to dry up purchasing power still further and to prolong the depression.

"The proposal to eliminate 'useless boards and commissions' is by no means new, but when the time comes for a show-down on these allegedly useless agencies, it develops that they have all been created as a result of some popular demand, or the insistent demand of certain powerful interests, and it has often happened that those persons and interests which have been most clamorous for the elimination of 'boards and commissions' find that some governmental agency of vital importance to them would be among the first to be threatened. In any event, the Government employes did not set them up; Congress established them, for excellent reasons, and Congress recognizes the need for them. Congress has never hesitated to abolish agencies it considered no longer essential to the public welfare."

Teachers Are Named For Mineral County

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Keyser, W. Va., May 8.—Teachers for Mineral County schools for 1935-36, were appointed here yesterday at the annual meeting of the board of education, which also ordered that a junior high school be established at Dixie to eliminate the crowded condition at Ridgeley.

It was decided to transfer Miss Evelyn Bright to the Fort Ashby Junior High School in order to make room for a biology teacher at Piedmont High School, where she previously taught. William E. Coffman was ordered transferred from Ridgeley High School to Burlington Elementary School in order that a coach may be placed at that school.

Chamber Drive Opens At Harrisonburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 8.—After a campaign breakfast, the annual drive for the State Chamber of Harrisonburg was staged here today. Robert F. Nelson, of Richmond, publicity directtor, and Thomas G. Herring, Harrisonburg, member of the board of directors, were in charge.

Dr. Julian A. Burruss, president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, addressed a civic meeting list night at the opening of the drive. This meeting was sponsored by the Harrisonburg Rotary and Lions Clubs and was attended by public officials and business men of the city and county.

Winchester Postoffice To Be Moved Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 8.—Saturday will be moving day for the Winchester postoffice, it was announced today by W. Nelson Paige, postmaster. For the next eight or nine months, while the building is being renovated and an addition is being constructed, the office will be on Kent street.

A contract for $40,500 recently was awarded to the Wood Construction Co., of Roanoke, by the Treasury Department for the improvements.

Pilgrims Plan Journey.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., May 8.—The St. Marys Chapter of the Pilgrims of St. Marys Society, which also has chapters in Washington and Baltimore, will make a pilgrimage to Williamsburg, Va., May 14. Yorktown and Jamestown Island will also be visited. Mrs. Aubrey Gardiner, of Chaptico, is president of the St. Marys County Chapter.

Public Schools In Alexandria Enter Contest

Alexandria public schools will take part in the National Spelling Bee, sponsored by The Washington Post, H. T. Moncure, prihcipal of Alexandria High School, announced today. The project has been approved by T. C. Williams, superintendent, and will be in charge of Mr. Moncure. Like other cities which have an independent school system, Alexandria will not take part in a county match, but will be a separate division, and will send its two best spellers directly into the area finals in Washington, May 18.

That match will be held in the auditorium of the New National Museum, Constitution avenue and Tenth street, beginning at 10:30 a. m. The first half hour will be broadcast over Station WJSV. This will give all contestants an opportunity to be heard by friends at home in the various counties which they represent. After 11 o'clock, the match will continue off the air until the number of contestants has been reduced to about 15. The spellers then will be entertained at luncheon, as guests of The Post, in the cafeteria in the Commerce Building. They return to the New National Museum for the final round, from 2 to 3 o'clock, wihch also will be broadcast over Station WJSV.

The champion speller of Maryland and Virginia, as determined by that match, will receive a 12-volume set of the "Encyclopaedia Britannica Junior." Second prize will be "Champlin's Young Folks Cyclopaedia." The champion alone will represent this area against champions of other parts of the United States in the national spelling bee in Washington May 28, also to be broadcast over WJSV.

Schools which announced their best spellers yesterday, all of whom will receive certificates from The Post and are entitled to take part in county matches, are:

Baileys Cross Roads, Betty Long and Mary Durrer; Glen Echo-Cabin John, DeLois Shoemaker, Marjorie Dennell, Mildred Bradshaw and Grace Bolton; Somerset, Mildred Floyd and Dorothy Garnett; Fairview, Marie McCready and Charles Howes; Marshall, John Page Turner, Stuart Tinsley, Lucile Payne and Ruby Golden, with Bunny Fuller and Ruby Dawson as alternates.

Evidence of interest and enthusiasm in the spelling bee continues. Thorman A. Nelson, principal of Glen Echo-Cabin John, writes: "There has been a great deal of enthusiasm here over the match, with benefits we greatly appreciate." Miss Ethel G. Sims, principal of Baileys Cross Roads, says: "The two girls entered from this school are very enthusiastic over the spelling match which will be held at Fairfax Saturday night."

Bureau Reviews Farm Legislation

Picnic With Grange Also Planned in Frederick.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 8.—A review of agricultural legislation at the last general assembly, appointment of a committee to confer with a group from Pomona Grange to plan the annual Farm Bureau-Grange picnic, discussion of the Maryland wool pool and other business was transacted at a meeting of the Farm Bureau directors. Wilbert L. Smith, Mount Pleasant, presided.

The legislation included refinancing a large issue of school bonds at a lower interest rate. It was sponsored by the Farm Bureau, Grange and Frederick Real Estate Board. Thomas S. Anderson, Yellow Springs; Roy C. W. Shaffer, Braddock, and Harry L. Davis, near New Market, were appointed to confer with the Grange committee for the annual picnic. The directors indorsed continuation of the Federal Government's wheat program and support of the referendum on May 25. Announcement was made that an advance price of 11 cents per pound will be paid wool producers who participate in the Maryland pool. An additional payment is expected when the wool is sold.

The directors are: Ronald Kling, Urbana; Henry P. Keller, Jefferson; Edgar L. Thomas, Adamstown; R. C. W. Shaffer, Braddock; Clyde W. Smith, Ijamsville; G. Edgar Roderick, Walkersville; Albert M. Ahalt, Middletown; Harry L. Davis, New Market; Harry C. Poole, Ballenger; J. S. Hesson, Unionville; Daniel S. Guyton, Burkittsville; Edward M. Hamilton, Mount Pleasant; Frank M. Blind Students To Be Finalists In Class Tests

3 Win Way to Finals in Spelling, Reading Competition.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 8.—Among the State high school boys and girls who have defeated district rivals for the honor of representing their schools in the Virginia Literary and Athletic League Championship Tournament at the University of Virginia here Friday and Saturday are three students from the Virginia School for the Blind at Staunton.

One boy from the Staunton institution, C. Giles, will compete on even terms with others in the boys' public-reading contest, and Miss L. Stuples will contest for the girls' State reading title. A second boy, B. Birchfield, is entered in the spelling contest in which the words are to be written.

The readers will be given one of a number of literary selections recorded in Braille. The judges decide at the time of the contest on the passage to be read and give the contestant five minutes to study the material.

In addition to reading and spelling, preliminaries in public speaking and debating will be held Friday, with semifinals and finals scheduled Saturday.

Charles H. Kauffmann, executive secretary of the league, has received more than 600 entries. Several hundred teachers and supporters will accompany their teams. More than 200 University of Virginia faculty members and students will serve as judges and officials.

One of the features of the tournment will be the debating contest, in which 48 affirmative and negative teams are entered. The selected topic is, "Resolved, that Virginia should adopt a general sales tax."

Change of Venue Won By Culpeper Resident

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., May 8.—A change of venue was granted E. A. Walker, jr., in the Culpeper Circuit Court on a charge of involuntary manslaughter, originally set for trial today.

The case will be heard on May 20 at Louisa courthouse. Defense counsel claimed that a local jury could not give unbiased opinion on account of sectional feeling. The case grew out of an automobile accident near Culpeper last September 25, when a car said to have been driven by Walter, an employe of the Culpeper postoffice, crashed into a group of persons standing by the parked car of Dr. F. M. Hite, dentist, of Culpeper, killing Hite and injuring Mrs. B. R. Bell.
